SB for you

May, 1963

Dear Friend:

It is my pleasure to bring to your attention once again The Research Bulletin on Intergroup Relations. Annually, in cooperation with the Society for the Study of Social Problems and the Society for the Psychological Study of Social Issues, research projects in this field are abstracted and collated for your interest and information. The 1963 edition is 48 pages long, includes a variety of disciplines and is the most comprehensive such item yet issued. I shall be glad to fill your order and provide academic discount prices for quantity orders, as well.

We are most grateful to Dr. Peter I. Rose for his many contributions as Research Bulletin Editor, a post he has now relinquished. Dr. Leon Sinder of Long Island University is the new editor. Included herewith is the questionnaire soliciting reports of research for next year's edition. Please fill it out and return it to Dr. Sinder at your earliest convenience. If you are not conducting such research yourself, I would appreciate your passing this on to one of your interested colleagues.

Another recent research item which I have not yet brought to your attention was produced by a committee of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. It is entitled Human Relations in the Classroom: A Study of Problems and Situations Reported by 1075 Second Year Secondary School Teachers. It reports findings which indicate inadequate teacher training in human relations. This is a follow-up to Teacher Education for Human Relations in the Classroom, the previous NCA study of responses by 1108 college professors as to what is taking place in pre-service teacher education. Copies of either of these research reports may be ordered directly from the North Central Association at 5454 South Shore Drive, Chicago 15, Illinois. They sell for 25¢ each.

Sincerely yours,

Mort Sobel

Dear Leslie:

This is in response to your letter of May 16.

We are entirely agreeable to having you use the summary in the press release on the Morland pamphlet, rather than as part of the pamphlet. Indeed, there is obviously no overriding necessity to make use of it even there, unless you think it appropriate.

We shall also want 5,000 copies of the Morland pamphlet. Production costs will then give us a unit cost of 20.65¢. If we add to this Ken Morland's remuneration and other incidentals, I think we come up with a list price of 50¢ and a "wholesale" price of 35¢. If you agree, we'd be willing to have the list price imprinted, perhaps on the back cover. I assume you will let us know in due course what the ADL owes you or anyone else for this pamphlet.

We are agreed in principle on Dr. Coles' study. Should it have an educator's foreword? And if so, by whom? Suggestions: Dean White or Prof. Glen Hass of the University of Florida at Gainesville, or Loula Brant, now retired, of New Orleans.

On "The High Cost of Conflict," we shall be sending you whatever we have or what material our Southern regional offices will contribute. On reflection, we would opt against including material on the more abstract "costs" of racial conflict, such as international prestige or "communication between the races." In part, because I would hate to see the grubbiest of all arguments spoiled by the intrusion of more respectable issues, in part because the aim of this publication is to appeal strictly to the narrowest of self-interests, in part because the problems you mention should be subject to more systematic and serious treatment in other contexts (see below).

Prof. Leon Cinder, the head of the Sociology Department at Long Island University, is doing a study for us of the international press reaction to the Meredith case. He is examining newspapers from about ten or twelve countries, the majority of them Far Eastern, freely or the shape of the future but I mean to live and find joy. I want to go ahead in a new way — maybe not the way the whites have shown,"

We have not been deflected in our concentration on the Meredith case by more recent events because one test-case is as good as another, and the whole point, of course, is the exemplary nature of this investigation. An outline of Cinder's study is not at hand at this moment, but I shall send it to you in a few days. You might consider whether the study might make a possible fourth in our joint series.

Forgive the delay with which this letter reaches you. It was begun last week, but a very long, five-day weekend intervened before it was completed.

Dear Henry:

I am enclosing a copy of the press release we have prepared to announce the publication of Ken Morland's study of tokenism.

As you will note, we have changed the title somewhat, partly as a result of the Supreme Court decision in the Memphis case last month and partly because it would seem that we may indeed be about to move beyond tokenism.

I talked to the printer this morning, and he informed me that we should have copies of the pamphlet early next week. ADL's 5,000 copies will be mailed directly to your offices in New York.

Les has gone on a well-earned vacation, but we discussed a possible release date before he left. We agreed that if we got the book next week, we would like to release it for Sunday, July 7. Will this date be suitable to you, assuming the printer stays on schedule?

If there are changes, additions, etc. you would like to make in this release, please let me know by next Tuesday, July 2, and if I haven't heard from you by that time, I'll assume the release and the release date are okay with you and Oscar.

The Coles pamphlet should be out in mid-July, and I'll let you know when to expect it as soon as the printer notifies me.

Ltr., Mr. H. Schwarzchild

Dear Miss Baumwald:

Mr. Dunbar has asked me to return the attached copy of America's Image Abroad.

We have read over Dr. Sander's analysis with great interest. But we do not feel that this study of foreign reaction to the Meredith incident will come as much of a surprise to most informed southerners and Americans. Lord knows, with all the domestic reporting about foreign reaction to recent events, it should be pretty obvious that bad race relations here can hardly improve U. S. foreign relations abroad.

Moreover, in view of all that is happened since the Oxford incident, we feel this study has been somewhat out-dated by the march of events.

We are grateful to you for allowing us to see the analysis, and will be interested to learn about its future developments.

Please give my regards to Cohen.

Dear Henry:

Enclosed is a copy of a press release we have prepared for the publication of Bob Coles' study. As you know, we are planning a Sunday, August 4, release date for the pamphlet.

I was very impressed by the release your people prepared on the Morland pamphlet, and if they have any suggestions or would like to rewrite this release, please tell them to do so. I only ask that you all let me know what you think no later than next Wednesday, July 31.

I talked to the printer yesterday. He will be sending your office 5,000 copies by the end of the week, so they should arrive in New York early next week.

On another matter -- the cost of the Morland pamphlet. I am enclosing a copy of the bill we received last week from Higgins-McArthur Company, as well as a copy of the original estimate. As you will note, the estimate was somewhat less than the actual charge.'

I have enjoyed working with you on these pamphlets, and judging from the reaction we have already had about the Morland study, I'd say they are a worthwhile contribution to the growing literature about the American dilemma.

Looking forward to hearing from you shortly.

Enclosed is a copy of a pamphlet titled The Price is High. It was prepared by Randolph T. Blackwell of our Voter Education Project staff, for Andy Young of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. According to Blackwell, SCLC is planning a limited distribution of the pamphlet. This distribution, at the moment, will be limited to Gastonia, Alabama, and possibly Savannah.

I thought you might be interested in seeing the material he has assembled about the high cost of resistance. I might point out that much, if not most, of it came from our files and from the material assembled by Potomac, in its recent report on the same subject.

Dear Leslie:

At long last, here is a revised copy of "The High Cost of Segregation." You will note that we have changed the title. This is a suggestion. I would not be unhappy if we retained the old title and sub-title.

I assume you will want to change the format to conform to the two publications in the series in which we are cooperating. I think it would be well to use the two cartoons in the old edition and possibly some others about which you may have some knowledge.

Let us hear from you. Stan Wexler and I are interchangeable on this. Henry Schwarzschild is away on vacation for two weeks.

With best regards, I am,

Sincerely,

Oscar Cohen

Les:

You wanted some information from me regarding the possibility of a meeting of the Southern Sociological Association.

What I am proposing is to hold a special meeting of southern sociologists either a day prior to, or a day after their regular meeting. This is scheduled to be held in Nashville in April.

The purpose of the meeting will be to have southern sociologists get together and exchange views and opinions about the changes going on in the South as they effect the field of civil rights. It is anticipated that four or five sociologists would be invited to present papers at that meeting. Other sociologists would debate the papers, comment, etc.. These papers should deal with the changing South regarding such sociological phenomeon as urbanization, re-apportionment, desegregation of schools, etc.. All should be, in some way, directed toward pointing out the effects of these changes in the field of civil rights.

The cost of the conference would include honorariums to those delivering papers plus food and possibly lodging for all others who are invited to attend. I haven't made any kind of estimate as to what those costs would be. Obviously it would depend upon the number invited.

I hope you will give this some kind of consideration and let me know if you have any ideas concerning it.

Regards.

Sincerely,

Monroe

SUBJECT: Bus Transportation for Parochial School Children in Oklahoma
Board of Education for Independent School District No. 52 v. Antone

FROM: Sol Rabkin and Theodore Leskes

DIGEST: Oklahoma Supreme Court rules that under the state constitution, no board of education of a public school district is authorized to permit school buses operated by them at public expense to provide transportation for pupils attending parochial school.

On July 8, 1963, in Board of Education v. Antone, the Supreme Court of Oklahoma affirmed a lower court decision granting a taxpayer, John L. Antone, an injunction against a local public school board to prevent them from permitting parochial school pupils to be transported to and from the parochial schools in public school buses. The plaintiff was a taxpayer residing in the school district. The local public school board followed the pattern of permitting public school buses to transport about 175 pupils of a parochial school between their homes and the parochial school in the public school buses.

The defendant school district argued that permitting children attending non-public, church-related schools to ride public school buses is for the public welfare. The defendants argued that the routes taken by the buses in question were not enlarged or altered in order to carry the parochial school children and, therefore, there was no additional or appreciable expense incurred by the public school district by reason of the practice.

The plaintiff relied on Article II, Section 5 of the Oklahoma State Constitution which provided that "no public money or property should ever be appropriated, applied, donated, or used, directly or indirectly, for the use, benefit, or support of any sect, church, denomination or system of religion, or for the use, benefit or support of any priest, preacher, minister, or other religious teacher or dignitary of sectarian instruction as such."

There had been a decision in 1939, Gurney v. Ferguson, in which the Oklahoma Supreme Court had struck down a statute authorizing transportation on public school buses of children attending parochial schools. The defendant school board here argued that the Supreme Court's decision in 1947 in Everson v. Board of Education, which upheld an analogous New Jersey statute, called for reconsideration by the Oklahoma Supreme Court of the decision in Gurney v. Ferguson.

The Oklahoma Supreme Court found that the Everson case had dealt solely with the federal question of whether a state statute authorizing bus transportation for parochial school children violated the First Amendment of the Constitution. It said that all Everson held was that transportation of parochial pupils is not a federal question, at least, when tested by the First Amendment. The court said that the Everson decision does not change the effect of state constitutional provisions.

The court rejected the argument that providing bus transportation for children attending parochial schools was not an aid to any particular sectarian institution or religion, but rather funds expended for the "general welfare of the community."

The court concluded that, "If the cost of school buses and the maintenance and operation thereof is in aid of the public schools, then it would seem to necessarily follow that when pupils of parochial schools are transported by them, such service is in aid of that school." The court then stated that any such aid or benefit, either directly or indirectly, is expressly prohibited by Article II, Section 5, of the Oklahoma Constitution. It therefore affirmed the permanent injunction issued by the lower court.

SUBJECT: Ruling Upholding Constitutionality of Toledo Fair Housing Ordinance

FROM: Sol Rabkin and Theodore Leskes

DIGEST: Judge Arthur D. Tudor of the Court of Common Pleas of Lucas County, Ohio, rules that the Toledo fair housing ordinance is a constitutional and valid exercise of the police power of the City Council of Toledo, dissolves a temporary injunction against its enforcement issued by the same court and dismisses the petition of the plaintiff taxpayer to have the ordinance declared unconstitutional.

On July 16, 1963, Judge Arthur D. Tudor of the Court of Common Pleas of Lucas County, Ohio, handed down his ruling in the case of Terry v. City of Toledo. The case was brought by a taxpayer, Earl F. Terry, who sought to enjoin proceedings under an ordinance adopted by the City Council of Toledo on September 25, 1961 prohibiting discrimination in the selling, renting and financing of real property. When the case was first brought, on October 19, 1961, Common Pleas Judge Straub granted a temporary injunction against the enforcement of the ordinance. He upheld plaintiff's contentions that its substantive provisions contravened the Ohio State Constitution's guarantees of private property, involved an unreasonable exercise of the police power of the municipality and were an unconstitutional delegation of judicial power to non-judicial bodies in violation of the State Constitution.

With the temporary injunction still in effect, the case came up for permanent injunction on the basis of submission by both sides of briefs and written stipulations.

Judge Tudor found that the constitutional guarantees of private property and freedom of contract do not preclude reasonable regulation thereof in connection with the valid exercise of the police power exerted in the general public interest and welfare. He said it is well established that reasonable legislative regulation of private property and contract choice under the exercise of the police power is proper, citing zoning ordinances as an example. He added, "The fact that instant regulation is somewhat more personal as to motivation, does not alter such underlying principle, if it otherwise services a general public interest within the well-defined and established purview of police power." He also said, "While right of private property and of contract is indispensable to our free society, it is not absolute as against reasonable governmental regulations thereof in the overall interest, otherwise ordered society is stymied and government sterile."

Noting that it was the function of the court to review the legislative conclusion that such an ordinance was necessary in the exercise of the police power, Judge Tudor concluded that the ordinance in question was designed to preserve and promote continued peaceful and harmonious relations in the ownership, use and enjoyment or real property in the city, by and between citizens therein of different race, religion and national origin, and that this purpose was clearly one of general and public interest and bore a real and substantial relation to the general public welfare. He found also that the power exercised in the ordinance was neitherunreasonable, arbitrary nor capricious, and that the means provided in the ordinance to effectuate such purpose through the efforts of a Board of Conciliation was reasonably suited to accomplish the purpose of the ordinance "even in the foment of ever-changing present-day society."

The court also rejected the claim that the ordinance involved an unlawful delegation of judicial powers. It noted that the ordinance delegated administration to a Board of Community Relations appointed by the Mayor, the powers of which were limited to examining facts claimed to constitute a violation of the ordinance, and, if it found a violation, to attempting adjustment through concilation only.

The court therefore dissolved the temporary injunction, denied the permanent injunction requested, and dismissed the petition with prejudice. The Board of Community Relations, which was created in 1946, and was also empowered to deal with complaints of discrimination in employment, is, now, therefore free to exercise its powers of investigation and conciliation in housing and employment cases.

SUBJECT: Claim of Isleen Goldberg for employment compensation benefits

FROM: Paul Hartman and Theodore Leskes

DIGEST: Pennsylvania Unemployment Compensation Board of Review rules that a person of Jewish faith who was dismissed after failing to report for work on the high Jewish holidays is entitled to receive unemployment compensation benefits.

FACTS: Isleen Goldberg of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania was employed by Doctors Hospital, Philadelphia as a medical technician for 2½ years. Prior to Rosh Hashanah in 1961 she requested permission to absent herself on the two days of that Jewish holiday. Her request was rejected, and she was told that she would be discharged if she was absent on these days. When she failed to report for work on those two days she was discharged.

Subsequently, she applied for unemployment compensation benefits under the Pennsylvania unemployment compensation law. Her claim was disallowed by a Referee on the ground that her refusal to report for work on the two days when she observed Rosh Hashanah was willful misconduct. From this decision she appealed to the Unemployment Compensation Board of Review.

DECISION OF THE UNEMPLOYMENT BOARD OF REVIEW: On July 10, 1963, the Board of Review reversed the Referee's decision. It held claimant entitled to the benefits on the following grounds:

> The claimant is of the Jewish faith and observes the orthodox tradition in the celebration of her religious holidays, viz., Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur. We recognize these two holidays as being of the highest religious significance to the claimant and her coreligionists. To conclude that one may be discharged for willful misconduct because one is absent from work due to the observance of a religious holiday is repugnant to our basic concepts of freedom of religious practices. The Board on prior occasions has allowed benefits under circumstances similar to those in the instant case...Accordingly, we hold that the claimant is entitled to receive unemployment compensation benefits for the weeks in question.

Dear Leslie and Staige:

Everything now seems to be proceeding smoothly on the release of the Coles pamphlet on August 11. Nat Belth tells me that he is using your text as forwarded.

Now, on the cost of the Morland pamphlet. The letters in our file and the memorandum I wrote for this office after our Bethany Beach meeting indicate that the following arrangement was agreed upon: SRC would pay Morland $400 plus expenses, and we would "take this outlay into consideration" when time came to share costs of printing the pamphlet. Subject to correction by you, I should judge that we owe you:

One half of Morland's fee	$ 200.00
One half of Morland's expenses	?
One half the printing bill	1,205.82
Shipping cost of 5,000 copies to N.Y.	?
	$1,405.82 plus ?

I trust you will let us know what precisely our indebtedness to you is on the Morland Pamphlet, and then on the Coles study as well.

Let me say to Staige that I largely share his reaction to the study on "America's Image Abroad." The results can be no surprise -- but then one could say the same thing about "The High Cost of Conflict." The difference may be that people are most likely more concerned about their own finances than about so distant an abstraction as this country's reputation in the world. In any case, the study is proceeding; it may provide additional ammunition for Congressional types who are fighting the good fight.

We are grateful for your copy of that pamphlet on the cost of race conflict that you prepared for the SCLC. We have a first draft of the updated version of "High Cost" and shall use whatever material may be appropriate from your pamphlet. We are not familiar with the Potomac piece but have called Washington for a copy. Unless I hear from you to the contrary, I shall assume that you are still interested in a joint publication of the new version, and I shall send you a draft within a week or so.

Thank you for your good cooperation, and thank you, Les, for your personal counsel.

Cordially,

Dear Leslie:

Following is a quote from a speech by Mayor Robert Carr of Orlando. Mayor Carr made this speech to an ADL audience on April 12th. You might want to consider it for inclusion in "The Price We Pay for Defiance."

> ...I realize that discords experienced by Little Rock, Birmingham and other important Southern cities could come to our community. The economic losses, the harm resulting from suspicion, from misunderstandings, from unresolved or unrecognized human relations problems were costly to these fine cities. If there was any lesson to be learned, it was the importance of recognizing the coming problems of our day, to learn and plan in advance how to handle these problems, and to strive to resolve them in a manner which extends our Democracy equally and fairly to all citizens. It means educating ourselves as individuals, local business, governmental, and civic groups. It meant building and maintaining lines of communications between all citizens. You cannot make stresses disappear by pretending that they don't exist.

With warm regards, I am,

Sincerely,

Oscar Cohen

In 1961, under the title "The High Cost of Conflict," we published a roundup of opinion from the Southrn business community of the economic consequences of school closings and violence.

In the short time since then, the weight of opinion and the force of events have made even stronger and clearer the simple fact that racial conflict is costly. And in that short time, the cost has spread to virtually all elements of the economies of cities, states and the Southern region, and ultimately of the nation.

School closings and violence, most notably in Alabama and at the University of Mississippi, have again ~~continue to~~ weighed schools, communities and states with heavy, needless burdens of loss-- immediate and long-range. Strife that occurred five and six years ago still continues a deleterious economic effect on the locales involved.

Increasingly, also, Southern public opinion is aware of another way that school segregation has been a needless burden on an economy that, especially in the past, had no money to spare. This is in the waste of duplication of buildings and faculties to maintain separate school systems, and in the more serious waste of human resources among persons of both races who were thereby deprived of adequate education. From the illiterate to the half-educated, this is a legacy of deprivation that will last at least a generation.

The direct action movement, by which Negro Southerners since 1960 have demanded their simple right to citizenship and have asserted positive leadership of a region, has spread the cost of segregation and conflict over the whole range of the Southern economy and society.

Some of this, like sit-ins and boycotts, has been aimed directly at economic targets. When direct action erupts into violence, either from street corner confrontations or by way of police tactics, the same staggering economic results known during school violence crises is felt.

The moral imperatives involved in the change underway in Southern society provide the most important reasons that this change shcould be completed and as soon and as painlessly as possible. This should never be lost sight of. But in another American tradition, segregation and resistance to ending it can be viewed in the old-fashioned and highly convincing terms of dollars and cents.

In an age when money (and the resources it represents) are so desperately needed for solving economic, educational, social and national security problems of America, needless waste of it in any situation has its own moral meanings.

So, once more, from the pages of Southern newspapers, and out of the vision and insights of Southerners, we present some of the price-tag facts and figures about the conflict over segregation during the past few years. There is no way to assess the total cost. Here are only hints and typical examples. But the story they tell is as clear and uncompromising as any balance sheet.

suggestions for handling high cost of conflict

It is worth doing. People understand this like they understand nothing else. Money talks, etc. Handy quotes, handy figures for newspapermen, writers to use are needed; Little Rock is wearing thin.

I agree with the others who have said this ADL stuff is hopeless. It adds little new (I've plucked out and attached what little it does add), and its old information is obsolete. If the old stuff is to be used, I suggest just leaving it in abbreviated form by itself as a section of past history in the back of the pamphlet. I have indicated appropriate cuts in the attached. Then, as Staige, suggested, the emphasis could be on costs of the more recent aspects of racial discord. Rather than state by state rundowns, I would suggest quick summaries and quotes and figures by subject matter. Barbara's file rundown suggests this: arrest costs; disruption of retail business; conventions lost; international aspects (?); migration; effects on investments, bonds; effects on sports; effects on attracting industry; effects on tourism... The ADL rundown on effect on college teacher recruitment is usable... The loss to gross national product... A summary of Staige's findings on private school costs, waste... Figures on duplication costs of segregated schools... and happy stories of losses avoided, as ADL claims in attached for Greensboro... and whatever else...

The introduction would make it clear that these are just random examples of the many different ways racial conflicts cost communities, states, the nation a lot of cold cash. With perhaps a word on the absurdity of this when such money could go into needed programs like education, job training, slum clearance, etc.

The pitch would be of course that by avoiding racial conflict, communities can avoid wasting all this money. This would require some spoken or implicit approval of agitation lest the figures be used against demonstrations...

Dear Mr. Cohen:

Enclosed is a corrected manuscript of The Price We Pay. I think it's in reasonably good shape for publication. We will confer today with a representative of the printers on typography and format.

Would it be possible to get your return reaction in time to send the manuscript to the printers May 14? I realize this would be rushing it. But the material is of such immediate value, the sooner we get it out, the better. also, can you give an estimate of the number of copies you will want?

It's been good working with you on this. I am excited about the publication. The work of Barbara Patterson and others is thorough; I think the impact will be great.

Yours truly,

Dear Stanley:

This is in the way of being a progress report. Type is being set on The Price We Pay. I will make the corrections we discussed in the first galley proofs and send you a copy. We are finding a better item to end it on. We are also re-working the cover, a copy of which I will also send.

For distribution, the suggestion from those here who are more experienced with this sort of thing is that we develop our own distribution plan and forward it to you in order to avoid duplications. As soon as this is done and we know how many copies we will need, I can get an accurate figure from the printer on the cost for whatever number of copies you will require.

I will be in touch with you as these things are completed. I enjoyed meeting you the other day. I feel like we got some crucial wrinkles ironed out.

Some of the vast cost of defying U.S. Constitutional rights in racial matters borne by the South is sampled in a publication issued today by the Southern Regional Council and the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

The publication, "The Price We Pay," itemizes large and small expenses during the past year of resistance. It was issued as the South confronted a new opportunity with federal civil rights legislation to be law-abiding, to avoid such costs in the future, and to develop more fully its own great natural and human resources.

"The Price We Pay" contains 44 pages of reports selected from a large range of periodicals + other sources. They tell their own story of an individual waste of resources and accumulative needless expense that is staggering.

Items range from the $17 billion loss in gross national product estimated as the cost of discrimination against Negroes, to the $138,429.75 spent for police overtime and equipment alone in Jackson, Miss., from late May through August, 1963, to combat demonstrations.

The saga of Greenville, S.C.'s sea lions is included-- expenses borne to convert a swimming pool into a "marineland" for six sea lions rather than desegregate it. The sea lion pool sprang a leak, two of the sea lions died, and there wasn't any money left to feed the zoo's camels and yaks.

Items are arranged to show the price we pay in the economy of communities; in employment; in legal costs; in education; in culture, entertainment, and sports; in tourism and conventions; and in foreign relations.

"Not all of the waste here documented has a price tag," says a brief introduction. "Can the people of Mississippi, for example, afford the cost to the human spirit that comes from being cut off from a culture's highest artistic achievement? Is there enough money in the world to cover the cost to the American nation in international good will lost by unacceptable race relations?"

The introduction points out the "elementary arithmetic" which refutes the argument that the expenses are to be blamed on victims of discrimination rather t an discrimination itself. "The estimated cost of implementing the Civil Rights Act of 1964 for five years-- $100 million-- would be only .6 per cent of the Gross National Product increase-- $17 billion-- which could be realized for one year with full and free use of our human resources."

"If all expenditures and loss could be added up, the sum would be shocking," the introduction says. "The shock is even greater if, in reading each item, one keeps in mind the many and drastic needs in the South for wise use of its public monies and resources to improve society and the lot of its individuals...

"Will southern states, which can least afford it, which so need to develop the potential of their people to the highest degrees of human dignity, continue in the ways documented here to waste the substance of their people?"

The publication ~~was prepared by Barbara Patterson and other staff members of the two organizations. It~~ is available ~~for 75 cents per copy~~ from ~~the Southern Regional Council, 5 Forsyth Street, NW, Atlanta, Georgia, and~~ the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, 315 Lexington Avenue, New York, N. Federal ~~xxxxxxxx~~ civil ~~x~~ rights legislation ~~xxxxxxx~~ gives Southern states a chance to avoid the ruinous costs that defiance has cost in the past, according to a report, "The Price We Pay~~... For Discrimination,~~" published today.

The report, prepared by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith and the Southern Regional Council, documents the vast cost incurred by the South's resistance to equal opportunity. It itemizes the price for discrimination in the economy of Southern communities, employment, legal procedures, education, culture, and tourism. Expenses range from the $17 billion loss in gross national product estimated as the cost of discrimination against Negroes, to the $138,429 spent for police overtime and equipment in Jackson, Miss., from late May through August 1963, to combat demonstrations.

Telling its story through news items and editorials selected from a large range of publications, the report includes the following as reasons why the South can no longer afford discrimination:

-- A failure, in recent years, ~~for~~ in some sections of the South, to attract any ~~significant~~ large amount of new industry.

-- Young, educated Southerners leaving the area rather than "put up with all this racial strife."

-- The "staggering" cost to cities, counties, and states for policing "emergency" situations and for litigation.

-- A loss of, and inability to attract, faculty and students to southern universities.

-- A growing movement on the part of entertainers, cultural exhibitors, and sports promoters to boycott racially segregated audiences.

-- A loss of convention and tourist business.

According to the report, not all of the waste documented has a price tag. It asks if "the people of Mississippi, for example, can afford the cost to the human spirit that comes from being cut off from a culture's highest artistic achievement? Is there enough money in the world to cover the cost to the American nation in international good will lost by unacceptable race relations?"

The introduction points out the "elementary arithmetic" which refutes arguments that the expenses are to be blamed on victims of discrimination rather than discrimination itself. It asserts that the estimated cost of implementing the Civil Rights Act for five years -- $100 million -- "would be only 0.6 percent of the Gross National Product increase -- $17 billion -- which could be realized for one year with full and free use of our human resources."

It goes on to say that if all expenditures and loss could be added up, "the sum would be shocking." According to the report, "the shock is even greater if, in reading each item, one keeps in mind the many and drastic needs in the South for wise use of its public monies and resources to improve society and the lot of its individuals."

"Will southern states, which can least afford it, which so need to develop the potential of their people to the highest degree of human dignity, continue to waste the substance of their people?" the report asks.

The League ~~and the Southern Regional Council~~ Southern Regional Council and the said the report was issued to underscore new opportunities afforded the South through ~~abidance~~ compliance with the Civil Rights Act "to be law abiding, to avoid such costs in the future, and to develop more fully its own great natural and human resources."

"The Price We Pay" is available from the Anti-Defamation League, 315 Lexington Avenue, New York, and the Southern Regional Council, 5 Forsyth Street, N.W., Atlanta, Georgia.

RACE RELATIONS

B 14/AMERICAN RACE RELATIONS TODAY. Earl Raab, editor. While desegregation provides equal opportunity to participate, integration is the achievement of equal group participation. This collection of essays deals with "post-bigotry" problems, that is, factors other than discrimination which seriously deter integration at all levels of American life, such as attitudes toward desegregation, urbanization and minority ghettos, quotas, Northern schools, Black Muslims. R 166/THE CITY AND THE NEGRO. Charles E. Silberman. The author makes a detailed analysis of the American city, its population and problems, and concludes that the city can only be saved if it faces up to the fact that the "urban problem" is, in large measure, a Negro problem. (From Fortune.) 10 pp. 25¢.

B 17/CRISIS IN BLACK AND WHITE. Charles E. Silberman. The author states that though an end to discrimination is a prerequisite to solution of the race problem in America, this alone will not solve the problem. He discusses the damage done to the Negro's personality and self-esteem by discrimination and prejudice and concludes that changes are necessary in the psyches of Negroes as well as whites if genuine, lasting, positive change is to take place. Published by Random House. 370 pp. $5.95.

G 415/EPITAPH FOR JIM CROW. Thomas F. Pettigrew. The author examines the historical, sociological, psychological and political forces which shape intergroup relations in the United States, and traces the development of race relations from the nineteenth century to the present. 59 pp. 75¢.

G 449/GUIDELINES: A MANUAL FOR BI-RACIAL COMMITTEES. George Schermer. A valuable handbook for existing bi-racial committees and those interested in forming such organizations. Preface by Adlai E. Stevenson. 96 pp. $1.50.

DANGER ON THE RIGHT

THE ATTITUDES, PERSONNEL AND INFLUENCE OF THE RADICAL RIGHT AND EXTREME CONSERVATIVES

ARNOLD FORSTER & BENJAMIN R. EPSTEIN

The timely, documented story of the extremists in America—the Radical Right, its conservative allies, and those who support both.

- They run a multi-million dollar a year campaign to divide America, to threaten democratic progress.

- They call Presidents, secretaries of state, and senators "Communist dupes."

- They attack the Supreme Court, clergy, and the American educational system with reckless, unrealistic accusations.

- They belabor the United Nations and belittle the consequences of nuclear war.

- They attract racists, bigots and yahoos with phony nostrums and empty slogans.

- They are financed by tax-exempt foundations, business corporations, and wealthy individuals... plus thousands of frightened average citizens who have succumbed to the propaganda barrage.

- They present a real danger to democratic processes, to democracy itself.

Dear Mr. Cohen:

Leslie asked me to reply to your query about the Southern cities reports.

As you know, we've done the first three. I'm enclosing fresh copies. Brunswick is, I think, about ready for the printers. Between the time of my research and completing a first draft, so much had happened (civil rights law, Goldwater, etc.), I went back down there and added a final section on the changes. I hope it will be out this month, and will of course send you a copy as soon as it is.

Baton Rouge is still a possibility for the last in the series. I want to study it from afar a bit to see if it is any longer feasible.

Meanwhile, I am enclosing a report I did on Jacksonville, and will send as soon as it is out a New South report I did on St. Augustine. It is at the printers, and will be this month's New South. Although these aren't in the series, they are similar enough to the other reports perhaps to be included with them in book form.

We would be interested in hearing from Quadrangle about the thing.

I've been very interested in the reception of The Price We Pay, and pleased.

Yours truly,

Dear Pat:

It was good to hear from you about the Southern cities reports. I'm glad to hear that Brunswick is now done, for I think it will make an important addition. I'll ask the Quadrangle people to consider the four major reports together with Jacksonville and St. Augustine. Perhaps this would be enough, for Baton Rouge may or may not become available. You'll hear from me further on this.

I, too, have been delighted with what is happening re "The Price We Pay." It is a very successful project and I think you and your colleagues deserve unbounded appreciation.

Could you send me several additional copies of the Jacksonville report.

With warm regards, I am,

Sincerely,

Dear Pat:

Thank you very much for your reports on St. Augustine and Brunswick. I can understand why you are so happy with the St. Augustine report. It is excellent. Brunswick is very good also, but I think you really put your heart into the St. Augustine document.

I have sent the material to Quadrangle Books and I should hear from them soon. I imagine they will have some suggestions. I think that a wrap-up chapter, which would include the implications of the reports, would be required. Let us wait until we hear from Quadrangle.

I will be in Atlanta on the 23rd and 24th and hope to see you then.

Can we have an extra copy of the reports.

With warm regards, I am,

Sincerely,

Oscar Cohen

Dear Mr. Watters:

The Spock pamphlet is our guide for style rather than size. There is no reason the Collins piece cannot be considerably longer. Certainly, some cutting is called for, but I do not think it need be extensive.

I look forward to seeing the edited piece.

Dear Oscar:

I'm sending on to you a rough draft of what I have done with the Collins interview. I am sorry to be so long in this; interruptions have been frequent.

As you can see I have broken the material into three sections of three, eight and eleven pages in that order, and tacked on an introduction. The second and the third sections might seem too long to you. Breaking them up further, perhaps with subtitles would be a simple matter. On the other hand, the way I have them now is structurally logical, and could be presented painlessly through good layout and typography.

On that score, I don't see how you could improve much on the basic appearance of the Dr. Spock interview.

I'm also enclosing the cut-up and pasted up version of the original interview so that you can see what liberties I took with Governor Collins's answers, and what cuts I made. Both were few, but you may want to clear them with him.

One further question is whether more cuts are needed. Some of the answers might be trimmed but it would be at the expense of the Governor falvorful way with words --- which to me is the chief charm you have here.

I will be waiting to hear from you about it and what more I might do.

Yours truly,

Pat Watters

Dear Oscar:

Thank you for your good letter. As you say our differences are probably quantitative. The nub of it would be the question of whether the approaches and accomplishments of the New Deal or the Great Society, in its manifestations so far, are enough. I can't agree that they are. I do agree that the one may destroy the radicalism, the good along with the bad, just as thoroughly as the other destroyed the Socialist party, the good along with the bad, of the 1930's. But as I read Harrington (for one) about the New Deal and look about the South today, I am not prepared to celebrate either demise.

I wrote about individuals for whom I have the deepest respect, many of whom I have known over some rough years. I wasn't being charitable toward them; I don't have the right to be. Nor do I think I am taken in. They are among the incredibly small number of people who, against every obstacle, led this nation to its present degree of confrontation with the evil of racism. This can't be taken away from them. If they are in trouble now--of whatever kind---they are due the effort of being understood, and if possible, helped. And if they say or do things with which I disagree, it is only the better part of humility and respect for truth to remember that once before, they were right when nearly everyone else said they were wrong. This doesn't make them right again of course; it does obligate me to examine their positions with more than normal care.

That's all, really, of the most I was trying to say.

I respect on exactly the same rationale your judgements, and appreciate your taking the time and care of your letter. There is much to be gained in knowing how each of us feels, and why.

Dear Pat:

I regret that I haven't responded to your letter, but I have been away on vacation.

Your letter is written with such logic, humanity and eloquence. What can I say?

I think, however, that we may not quite understand each other. The nub of the question is not whether we have made enough social and economic progress so far. Of course, we haven't. The question is whether or not these people are in favor of any society in which you and I can believe. I happen to think they are not. There is a degree of irrationality in their behavior which is disturbing. There is a depth of hatred among many of them which is dangerous. I grant you their courage, sincerity and belief in their ideals whatever they may be. But their objectives frequently do not seem compatible with the kind of democratic and egalitarian society in which we believe. I object to their tolerance of extremists. In short, at this point, I would consider that by and large they are a menace to the civil rights movement. I assume you may ask me to define "they." I think we both know.

The next time I am in Atlanta or when you are in New York, this is a subject for discussion. I would look forward to this very much.

Warmest regards.

Sincerely yours,

Oscar Cohen

DOMESTIC REPORT

AUGUST 1965—VOL. 16, No. 5—PUBLISHED BY THE ANTI-DEFAMATION LEAGUE OF B'NAI B'RITH

'Let Freedom Ring'

Let Freedom Ring, a new voice of the Radical Right in America, whispers—in an area where so many shout raucously. It is a quiet recorded voice on the telephone, the constantly changing and always anonymous voice of a man or a woman with a 90-second sermon of fear called a "patriotic message." It can be dialed at any hour of the day or night in some thirty or more cities. For extremists it is a most promising device in their growing store of propaganda techniques.

On April 6, 1965, after the Selma to Montgomery civil rights march, a man in Baltimore, promised a revealing message, dialed a much-publicized number to hear:

> "The carnival in Alabama is over and the result is increased hatred between the races, two dead, and a Constitution that is about to be ripped to shreds by a panicky Congress bowing to mob rule and White House tyranny."

A New Yorker dialing a Yukon exchange number heard a similar report. Another man in Chicago, or still another in Miami or in Southern Pines, North Carolina, could hear much the same thing. In each city the listener was alone and attentive, the speaker nameless but of seeming authority, the message provocative and extremist.

Let Freedom Ring, with national headquarters at P.O. Box 1775 in Sarasota, Florida, is the creation of William Campbell Douglass, M.D., a Sarasota physician who is a member of the John Birch Society. Douglass explains his operation in a mimeographed prospectus:

> "Let Freedom Ring is a non-profit corporation established to disseminate anti-Communist, anti-Socialist, pro-American broadcasts via a telephone tape recording. Your 'customer' dials a number (just like time and weather) and gets two minutes of anti-Communist dynamite. . . .
> "Let Freedom Ring brings to your area a hard-hitting, often shocking program that is 'on the air' twenty-four hours a day. . . . You will be amazed at the frantic reaction that you will get from your enemies—they will hate it!"

The Fright Network

By the summer of 1965, after less than three years in business, Dr. Douglass's network of telephone "stations" had spread to many of the major cities across the nation. Let Freedom Ring message stations now operate in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit (which boasts ten tape machines with ten telephone numbers), Baltimore, Miami, Dallas, Kansas City, Indianapolis, Wichita, Sacramento, and in several cities in the Los Angeles area. In addition, there are stations in Decatur, Bedford, and Calumet City, Illinois; Jacksonville, Sarasota, and Clearwater, Florida; Knoxville, Tennessee; Boulder, Colorado; Port Arthur, Texas; Long Beach, California; Brockton, Massachusetts; Summit, New Jersey; Nashua, New Hampshire, and Southern Pines, North Carolina. Even as this list is compiled, a dozen additional franchise applications are pending.

Each week, each of these outlets presents a new "patriotic message" to callers in its area—each spoken calmly but so worded as to arouse suspicion, fear and anger, or the urge to enlist in organized Radical Right activity.

Each message continues for a minute-and-a-half, or sometimes two minutes. It is recorded on tape and played automatically to anyone who dials an advertised phone number. This is done by using the Bell Telephone System's Automatic Announcement Service equipment, an apparatus incorporating recorder, playback, and telephone connections in a single unit. This equipment can be rented from local telephone companies at costs varying from $20 to $45 monthly (multiple numbers and other optional devices being available). All such arrangements are made and paid for by the local Let Freedom Ring subscriber.

Radical Rightist Scripts

The automatic phone-tape service is available to anyone, is easily installed, and is cheap enough to make it an economical medium for propaganda. The scripts are supplied by Dr. Douglass—his single responsibility under the franchise agreement—and they cost the subscriber $24 the first year, $12 a year thereafter. The local outlet agrees to use at least 40 of the 52 scripts supplied each year. This leaves "an average of one broadcast per month for the subscriber to air local issues in his immediate area."

LFR scripts, like most of the output of the Radical Right, are lurid visions of a "Communist conspiracy" lurking behind Civil Rights, the UN, the Supreme Court, the last three U.S. Presidents, the State Department, the press, the National Council of Churches, the ACLU, the ADL, and on and on. Early in LFR's history—at the time of the Cuban crisis in 1962—the telephone messages from Sarasota asked:

> "How long will the American people put up with treason right in the White House itself? How long before the American people demand the impeachment of John F. Kennedy?"

And more recently (January 26, 1965):

> "America will soon be in a position of hopeless military inferiority to the beasts of Russia because of deliberate disarmament by traitors in the Johnson Administration."

From such "scripts" it is easily understandable that Let Freedom Ring has been recommended by Robert Welch, founder of the John Birch Society, as a worthwhile interest for his members. Dr. Douglass writes the LFR scripts, compiling his data from "intelligence reports" and other esoteric-sounding sources which he says are "not generally available." The usual Birch line is discernible in much of the material although Let Freedom Ring has on occasions unearthed a "conspiracy" the nature of which suggests that at least some of the Doctor's "intelligence" has been derived from the more excited bulletins and tracts of the far-out fringe.

In his script for the week of April 28, 1964, for example, Dr. Douglass stirred some of his callers' deeper fears (emphasis retained from the original script):

> "The pro-Communist toadies within the Johnson Administration must at all costs keep the truth from the American electorate. If they win the election, they will no longer care what you think, for by 1966 America will have ceased to exist . . . There are only three possible answers to Lyndon Johnson's criminal neglect of these problems that bear so heavily on our very survival:
> "One: Ignorance. . . . With our multi-million dollar intelligence establishment this would seem hardly possible.
> "Two: Cowardice on the part of the President and his State Department pink ladies in striped trousers.
> "Three: Treason, with the President being a captive or willing tool of the Communist Conspiracy.
> "Americans can no longer trust the Executive Branch of our Government."

Seeds of Distrust

Such seeds of distrust have been spread by the recorded telephone voices through ever-widening circles. During the week of May 12, 1964, the unseen patriotic "experts" parroted the following dire warning of Dr. Douglass (emphasis again retained from the original):

> "Another fact ignored by the Press is that the Communist-lining National Council of Churches is openly promoting bloodshed through armed revolution by Negroes. There is documented proof that Negroes are being armed for open revolution this summer.
> "The Communists, working through their errand boys in Congress and the White House, are working feverishly to have passed a bill that will outlaw the ownership of guns by private citizens while at the same time they are urging armed rebellion by Negroes. These carefully coordinated drives are aimed at simultaneously disarming the American people and overwhelming them through Communist-controlled revolts . . . and we also urge our listeners to purchase a rifle or a pistol for home defense. We are not—we repeat—we are not promoting insurrection as does the National Council of Churches. We are merely urging you to exercise your constitutional and God-given right to protect yourself . . ."

The incitement to "anti-Communist" arms-gathering had been buttressed by tales of a weird government plot against such "God-given" rights (LFR broadcast in February, 1964):

> "At the University of Michigan a plan is being developed for the systematic house-to-house search of the entire United States for arms of any kind. The search is to be made by the U.S. Army by blocking off five states at a time, beginning in the western part of the country. The entire civilian population is to be disarmed by the end of 1965."

That horror story so incensed Senator Jacob K. Javits (R., N.Y.) that he queried officials of the Defense Department to establish the truth as a matter of public record. The Senator inserted the following official Department reply in the Congressional Record of October 2, 1964:

> "This charge is absurd, completely false, and reflects the hallucinations of an aberrated mind."

Javits added an interesting note: the story appeared to have been taken bodily from the October, 1963, issue of "On Target," official publication of the para-military "Minute-men" organization.

William Campbell Douglass, M.D., conceived of recorded telephone messages as an "unstoppable" anti-Communist weapon during a long tour of active duty as a U.S. Navy doctor (1957-62). The Navy years did not dull his ideological zeal and soon after leaving the service he set up the first station of Let Freedom Ring in Sarasota. Apparently failing to establish his organization as a common-law trust, he finally incorporated LFR in the state of Florida as an "educational" organization on July 20, 1964.

Douglass was born in Port Deposit, Maryland, on June 2, 1926. He graduated from Sarasota Senior High School, where he was an average student, in 1944. After years spent at many jobs in many states, Douglass entered the University of Miami Medical School, graduating in 1957. After his five-year Navy tour he settled at 6916 Point of Rocks Road in Sarasota, where he now lives with his wife and two children.

In the reception room of Douglass's professional offices at 1812 Hillview Street, there are stacks of Right Wing propaganda materials which make possible, for each patient, an "educational" hour of waiting. These include the latest issues of the Birchite American Opinion magazine and the Dan Smoot Report, and flyers advertising the Christian Crusade radio program of Dr. Billy James Hargis.

At one time Douglass was warned to end his practice of distributing such Radical Rightist material to patients at the local hospital—not merely to his own patients—and he stopped doing so. He continues, however, to supply local news vendors in Sarasota with books such as John Stormer's None Dare Call it Treason and The Strange Death of Marilyn Monroe by Frank A. Capell.

Douglass is a political activist. In addition to his Birch Society membership, he is a member of the advisory board of the Conservative Society of America, the Radical Right political crusade headed by Kent and Phoebe Courtney of New Orleans. The Courtneys have for some years sought formation of a Far Right third political party, which Douglass himself sees as the ultimate answer to the crowding Red "conspiracy."

Third Party Advocate

When, on the last weekend of April, 1965, the Courtneys rallied a "Congress of Conservatives" in Chicago to lay the foundation for a national Right Wing party, Dr. Douglass was listed as one of their featured speakers, along with Birch Society Founder Robert Welch, former Major General Edwin A. Walker, and Medford Evans of the White Citizens' Councils. Home from Chicago, Douglass began drawing plans for a third political party in his own state, which he hoped would offer a slate of candidates in the 1966 state elections and become the Florida unit of an eventual national third party. Late in May he held a meeting with about 300 supporters and announced formation of the Constitution Party of Florida, designed to "resurrect the hopes of anti-Communists throughout this state and the world."

To the founder of Let Freedom Ring, the greatest cause for terror in this country has been the recent chain of developments in the Civil Rights struggle. He has met the challenge with near-hysteria. To the picture of civil anarchy etched in gunsmoke, Douglass has added the cold, contradictory vision of the air-tight police state; in February, 1964, his local outlets were urged to "broadcast" to their callers the following alarm:

> "The 'Civil Rights Act' now before the United States Senate, will, if passed . . . turn America into a Fascist state practically overnight. . . . No business; no church; no club, public or private, would be free of the evil smell of Bobby Kennedy's marshals and spies."

At another time LFR's voices suggested to callers that "It's likely that those three civil rights workers in Mississippi were kidnapped and murdered by their own kind to drum up sympathy for their cause."

While thus stimulating baseless suspicions in propaganda for political goals, Dr. Douglass sets a lofty image for his telephone network, particularly in statements to the press. In January, 1965, he said of Let Freedom Ring: "We want to keep it on a high level—out of the hands of racists, for example." Yet in his script of May 12, 1964, in describing a supposed "secret Negro army," the Doctor had cited, as a reference, The Councilor, an openly racist weekly published in Shreveport by the Citizens' Council of Louisiana, Inc.

Like many of the Radical Right's propagandists, Douglass has often been wildly inconsistent in his assaults. In a press release issued in August, 1963, for example, he argued that "the Communist Party is tickled to death with our playboy President"—and then, barely four months later, he could find reason to pin that same President's murder on "the internal Communist Conspiracy." The effects of a telephone message are often lasting, its "facts" easily forgotten.

The Birch Links

The slant, the novelty, and the unique possibilities of Let Freedom Ring have had a natural appeal for people in the John Birch Society as a tool for "education" and recruitment. The operations of the two organizations have been connected at many stations along Douglass' network, and the alliance has been advantageous to them and to him.

LFR scripts have recommended Robert Welch's American Opinion magazine as well as his book, The Politician ("to fully understand the perfidy and deceit of Dwight Eisenhower"). In the Birch Society's Bulletin of March, 1965, Welch wrote that Let Freedom Ring "has been catching on quite well, spreading gradually, and transmitting some very worthwhile messages"—and he added that Dr. Douglass "will welcome your inquiry."

The Decatur, Illinois, LFR station is sponsored by "Freedom House," a Right Wing bookstore run by members of the Birch Society.

In Philadelphia, callers are told to send money to a certain Post Office box for printed copies of the weekly messages. The Philadelphia Inquirer of August 15, 1964, reported that Paul Corbett, a Birch Society "section leader," had rented the box in question. A check mailed to this outlet as a contribution was endorsed by the local American Opinion bookstore.

In the Los Angeles area, a saleslady at an American Opinion Library, which sponsors one of the local Let Freedom Ring outlets, told reporter Paul Coates of the Los Angeles Times that funds for the phone operation had been "donated by a John Birch chapter in North Hollywood."

The box number of LFR's Miami station (Box 21, Miami Shores) was formerly listed under the name of the John Birch Society.

The Summit, New Jersey, LFR address (P.O. Box 715) is that of an American Opinion Library there. Summit's telephone equipment stands in the 40-foot finished basement in the home of Dr. Forster G. Ruhl, an active local John Bircher. Next to Ruhl's Let Freedom Ring phone equipment stands an almost duplicate set of equipment which, using a different phone number, sends John Birch Society recruiting messages to its callers.

When telephone use of an LFR tape was halted by officials of the Pacific Telephone Company in Canoga Park, California, after many serious complaints, the American Opinion Bookshop (which ran Canoga Park's LFR operation) was represented in conversations with the telephone company by John Rousselot, national relations director of the John Birch Society.

When Dr. William C. Douglass himself was asked in a letter (quoted in LFR's script for December 17, 1963) about the best source of anti-communist information, Douglass replied: "We suggest . . . 'A World Gone Crazy' which can be obtained for $1.00 from American Opinion, Belmont, that's B-E-L-M-O-N-T, Belmont 78, Mass."

Evaluation

Let Freedom Ring services the Radical Right, from its isolated axe-grinders to its largest national membership organization, with a weekly propaganda scare available around the clock. This, as Dr. Douglass has pointed out, makes the LFR message a broadcast scheduled at the caller's convenience—and it is one with a personal and therefore more persuasive touch. Moreover, the telephone message is a quick exhortation which is just as quickly finished, affording the caller no chance for re-reading or analysis. This allows the use of some of the bluntest of propaganda tricks. On May 23, 1965, for example, Dr. Douglass' script read, in part:

> "Under the provisions of the Civil Rights Act, a convicted rapist applying for a job in a girls' school could file suit against the school if they requested a picture with his application. . . . Does this sound crazy?"

Crazy, no—but clever, perhaps, in that the caller has no time to evaluate the words spoken to him so quickly and in so sincere a voice. He hangs up—the LFR equipment has an automatic cut-off, anyway—and all that remains is the image of a rapist roaming the corridors of a girls' school, plus the seeds of confusion and hate.

A further element of LFR's appeal lies in the fact that the subscriber's name and address can often remain a secret, buried in the telephone company's files. His number, though widely publicized, is technically an unlisted one, its holder therefore a legitimate albeit hypocritical claimant to anonymity. Such anonymity—and the ironic "privacy" of telephone messages—insulates the local LFR sponsor against personal responsibility. (Contrast this to the identification and responsibility demanded of publishers and broadcasters.) Let Freedom Ring's nameless voices change from week to week, spreading messages of fright and suspicion that no individual person need answer for.

The question of responsibility nettles many who are concerned about the use of a public communications medium for the spreading of hate. Can nothing be done? The telephone companies, passive but unquestionably unwilling partners in Dr. Douglass' operation, have pointed to the dilemma posed by the question of civil liberties. Their position has been succinctly stated by the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania in a letter to the City of Philadelphia Commission on Human Relations:

> "1. It is the duty of the Telephone Company to furnish services and facilities to anyone who will use the service in a lawful manner. . . . The Pennsylvania Supreme Court has made it clear that public utilities are not censors. . . ."
> "2. Automatic Announcement Service is a regular telephone service which is available to any customer. . . . A user of Automatic Announcement Service determines for himself the content of the messages handled by the service."
> "3. Regardless of its views on the contents of recorded messages, the Telephone Company is prohibited from interfering with the lawful exercise of a customer's right of free speech."

Bell System officials have pointed out that public utilities are prohibited under federal statutes from discriminating—i.e., in offering preferential service or in withholding services at will—and further, that they are forbidden to censor or even to monitor private calls. True, the telephone company may intervene in the case of messages which violate criminal laws (e.g., bookmaking operations or obscene calls) when requested to do so by police agencies. Various courts have held, moreover, that the company may act when it has reasonable cause to believe that the telephone is being used for illegal purposes, even without a specific police request. The crucial difficulty is in proving an "illegal" purpose.

In the present case, this would necessitate a reasonable cause for belief that the material of Let Freedom Ring's tapes constitutes criminal libel. Telephone officials are hesitant to admit that such reasonable cause exists. Mindful that evidence of criminal libel must usually show a tendency to create a breach of the peace, and fully aware that the courts extend the broadest protection to freedom of speech, these company officials say that they would take action only if advised by law enforcement agencies of the existence of criminal libel in specific cases.

One remedial suggestion that has been offered is to extend to this type of telephonic public announcements the Federal Communications Commission's regulations which are applicable to radio and television broadcasting. Such controls, thoroughly tested and upheld in the courts, provide for a certain degree of Federal control under license requirements to maintain "standards of public convenience, interest, and necessity." Is there not, in the telephone company's Automatic Announcement Service, a potential that is profoundly similar to that of a radio station—in that such service provides for the increasingly public use of a public communications medium? The promoter so believes since he speaks of "broadcasts via a telephone tape recording" and of a "program that is 'on the air' twenty-four hours a day."

The telephone company's answer is that phone messages reach only those persons who wish to hear them, thus limiting the 'broadcast' nature of Dr. Douglass' programs and negating any tendency on the part of those broadcasts to create a general breach of the peace. (But no one is forced to listen to radio or TV broadcasts either.)

Such arguments, of course, would not invalidate suggestions of the possible need for new Federal legislation—or for a whole new approach, considering the expanding electronic possibilities in the area of telephone communications. For such arguments do not answer the possibility that wide publicity and advertising of the appropriate phone numbers have given Let Freedom Ring's anonymous broadcasters a greater daily audience in some cities than many a radio news broadcast. Here, the case for "privacy" may indeed be a shaky one.

Dr. Douglass feels confident, from seeing the recent impact of his operation in various key cities, that LFR "cannot be stopped" and that it will become one of the major Right Wing influences within the next two years.

"You will be amazed at the influence that you have on public opinion almost immediately," he states in his prospectus. "Last year, for instance, we were given credit for having killed the UNICEF Christmas Card drive locally—an accomplishment of which we are very proud."

Against the Doctor's pride stands a growing indignation among persons and organizations who recognize the perils inherent in the LFR technique, which Senator Javits has called a "pushbutton approach to mass libel."

Javits warned in the Senate on October 2, 1964, that the Douglass network was "a nationwide organization not run by professionals but by enthusiastic amateurs and apparently inaugurated and dedicated to bringing hate and fear within the reach of all."

The usually conservative California Federation of Republican Women, on May 13, 1965, adopted a resolution calling Let Freedom Ring's messages "false and treacherous propaganda" and asked the FBI to look into the "origin, sponsorship, and objectives of this vicious activity." (The Federation had been particularly angered by an LFR script labeling General Eisenhower "pro-Communist" and accusing the former President of having attended a meeting at which he supposedly had joined in a discussion on "the best way to surrender you and your family to the Reds.")

The question of free speech is bound to arise in any discussion of LFR's gross misuse of public utilities. It is noteworthy, then, that a strong statement on the issue of Dr. Douglass' operation has been broadcast by a leading radio station, for broadcasters certainly have a special interest in the preservation of freedom in communications. WCAU, an important radio voice in Philadelphia, has stated:

> "WCAU believes that such hate messages . . . are feeding the fires of race hatred and possible violence. And we call upon all decent people to renounce such tactics . . ."

Upon all decent people. Here is where the matter most obviously will rest, as so often it does in a free society—a society whose concept of liberty is broad enough to allow for its own abuse.

Dear Henry:

As I indicated on the phone the other day, I would be interested in writing the report on your end of the summer meeting. It would be valuable in our own work to improve law enforcement in civil rights and race matters in the South. And, as I said, my commitments here will mean that the bulk of the work involved will have to be on my own time.

I haven't yet been successful in assessing any kind of price tag for this commodity. The temptation is to say you decide what it is worth, but let me suggest the following as a basis: My wife has been wanting to share with me the joys of such junkets for some time, and I would like to spend an extra day in New York City talking to various people in person that I know now only as phone voices. If you could stand the expenses for both of us, and for the Monday following the meeting, I think it would be equitable and enhancing of domestic felicity.

Let me know your thoughts. In the meantime, I will see you at the ACLU thing in New Orleans. You said you would bring background materials that would be useful for the report. Also, please bring copies of the kind of thing you have previously done.

Yours truly,

Pat Watters

Dear Friend:

During the past week, Fulton Criminal Court Judge Dan Duke, and a former assistant Attorney General for the State of Georgia, called upon Governor Sanders, to take state action to revoke the charters of the five Ku Klux Klan groups operating in the state.

Judge Duke charged that Klansmen take secret oaths to protect fellow Klansmen on trial and such vows take precedence over "the oath of truth and the oaths as a juror" when Klan members serve on juries and as witnesses. He further pointed out that Georgia must act at the state level to assert its power and its responsibility to validate the majesty of its laws if the right of trial by jury in state court is to be preserved and if our state judicial stystem and legal institutions are to retain their validity and power to maintain a system of justice.

Judge Duke indicated that Governor Sanders could initiate charter revocation proceedings and cited successful action by former Governor Ellis Arnall who in 1946 directed the attorney general to move to revoke the charter of the one Klan operating in Georgia at that time.

Subsequent reports indicate that Governor Sanders has requested Attorney General Arthur K. Bolton to investigate the possibilities of such action.

It is our opinion that such action coming at this time would remove any vestigia of respectability normally granted incorporated organizations in our state, and at the same time express the public sentiment of abhorrance toward the Klan as a symbol of corruption, brutality, illegality and bigotry.

You can be of immeasurable assistance in this effort by writing Governor Sanders indicating your support and encouragement for the prompt and forthright action undertaken by him. Your efforts along with those of your friends and interested church and civic organizations will demonstrate the broad based community support which stands forthrightly behind the Governor on this important matter.

Cordially,

Theodore Freedman

Dear Friend:

In May of this year you received a copy of the 1965-66 questionnaire on research and activities in the field of intergroup relations. This questionnaire is part of the annual census jointly sponsored by the Anti-Defamation League and several learned professional societies. We would appreciate it if you would fill out the form and return it to us in the enclosed envelope.

If you feel that someone else on your staff is better qualified to answer the questions, please pass it along. Since our use of the term "intergroup relations" may not be adequately descriptive, let us explain that we are arbitrarily limiting our bulletin to reports of research on relations between groups that are ethnic, racial, religious, or national in character. Caste and class, while not our primary emphasis, will be included where related to these factors.

Enclosed for your information is a flier describing the 1964-65 Research Bulletin which is now ready for distribution. The results of the current study will be published in 1966.

Thanks for sending the Collins script and Dr. Spock booklet. I am starting in on the script today.

I can't recall in the conversation with Mr. Cohen whether we agreed on any specific length. I wonder if your thinking there is that this one should be about the same as the Spock one. This will require a good bit of cutting--too much. But I assume you do want some cutting.

Please let me know.

Dear Oscar:

I am sorry I missed seeing you, too. I am very much interested in the matters you and Paul discussed.

It doesn't appear now that I will be in New York before February, if then. Perhaps a phone call is the best idea. Why don't we think about the week after Christmas? I think its safe to say that I will be available about any time that week you want to call, or the week after, for that matter.

I would like to see the book on housing for possible New South use, and anything else that occurs to you.

Best wishes.

Dear Pat:

Harry Lewis told me of his conversation with you and by this time I assume that Paul Anthony has told you about our discussions in Atlanta. I am indeed sorry that you were not there.

We are very much interested in your new quarterly and would like to help you in any way we can. I am sure we can on the question of promotion and subscriptions.

With regard to the new materials which we are producing which will be of interest to you, I am not sure what you have in mind. If we have materials for review, we will communicate with you. You might consider reprinting segments of our publications. One such publication is a book on housing by George and Eunice Grier which I think is excellent. Parts of it might be very suitable for publication.

The best way to handle this, however, would be to discuss these matters with you. Are you going to be in New York in the near future? If not perhaps we could have a long telephone conversation because I do not think I will be getting down South for the next two months.

With warm regards, I am,

Sincerely,

ADL SPECIAL REPORT

Southern Office
ANTI-DEFAMATION LEAGUE
OF B'NAI B'RITH
41 Exchange Place, S. E., Atlanta, Ga.
Telephone: 523-3391

LEGISLATIVE DIGEST - MARCH, 1966

1 - TEXAS: A brief, special session of the Texas Legislature was convened and passed a state-wide system of voter registration, without payment, following a declaration that the Texas poll tax was unconstitutional by a federal district court. In addition to the annual registration system beginning in 1967, the law also sets up a one-shot, 15-day free registration period to begin 7 days after it is signed by the governor. This period will allow registration by eligible persons who fail to do so under the old poll tax system before the January 31st deadline. Those who paid this year's poll tax before the deadline are automatically registered under the new system. If the Supreme Court takes action to uphold the earlier court decision, these additionally registered persons will be allowed to vote in any subsequent 1966 elections. Under the new law, registration will be from October 1st to January 31st and will be conducted by deputy registrars operating in fixed locations during prescribed hours. The bill now permits unlimited mail registration, requiring only that mail registration applications inform the person registering that to register falsely is a felony. Even though the legislature has passed the state-wide voter registration bill, the state is pursuing its appeal to the United States Supreme Court on the question of the validity of the poll tax.

2 - GEORGIA:

A) Continuing in the matter of the refusal of the Georgia House to swear in and seat Representative elect Julian Bond, of the 136th District - Atlanta, the three-judge Federal Court voted two-to-one to uphold the Georgia House of Representatives in its refusal to seat Julian Bond. Judges Griffin, Bell, and Lewis Morgan stated that it was not the Court's business to say whether the House's action was "the wisest course". Chief Judge Elbert Tuttle's dissent was simple: he held that the Georgia Constitution specifically states and limits the basic qualifications for the Georgia House, that Bond meets these qualifications, and that beyond this, the Georgia Constitution expressly gives to the people the right to choose their representatives. This dissent was not based upon a judgement of the wisdom, or lack of wisdom, of the House's action, or upon the contents of Bond's statements on Viet Nam. An appeal to the United States Supreme Court has been filed. The special election that was called to fill the vacant seat for District No. 136 was won by Julian Bond again, as the only candidate from that district. Georgia House Representative W. Jones Lane, of District No. 64, following the special election of Julian Bond, introduced into the Georgia Legislature some suggested changes for the Rules Committee, which, in effect, makes it easier for the Rules Committee to refuse to seat Representative Bond in the Georgia Legislature. The question is tentatively moot at this time, since the 1966 session of the Georgia Legislature closed on February 18th.

B) Georgia House Resolution No. 118 - 218, which sought to create "a Committee of the House and Senate on Un-American Activities, and for other purposes, for the State of Georgia", died in the Rules Committee. It is believed that the marshalling of public opinion, by responsible groups within the State of Georgia, was mainly responsible for this bill never leaving the Rules Committee.

C) Senate Bill No. 230, by Senators Downing of the 1st District, Miller of the 43rd (author of the bill), and Minish of the 48th (and others) - "An act to provide that all colleges and universities which receive state funds shall prohibit any person from using the facilities of such colleges and universities for speaking purposes, entertainment purposes, or any purposes whatsoever when such person is known to be a member of the Communist Party or is known to advocate the overthrow of the Constitution of the United States or of the State of Georgia, or who has pleaded the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States before any duly constituted legislative committee of the United States or any state thereof regarding Communist or subversive connections or activities, or connection with any secret organization on the United States Attorney General's list of subversive organizations." The bill, which had first been committed to the Education Committee, was recommitted to that committee by the full Senate, from which it did not have time to emerge to pass before both Houses of the Legislature adjourned. Senator Frank Miller, of DeKalb County, author of the bill, stated that the bill, however, had served its purpose and that he he had been given assurances that university system officials had "gotten the message".

D) Georgia Senate Bill No. 38, introduced by Senator Webb, of the 11th - "a bill to provide procedures for searches and seizures for the suppression of evidence illegally seized" - has been passed by the Georgia Legislature. The bill provides that a peace officer may search a person without a warrant, for the purpose of:

Protecting an officer from attack
Preventing the person from escaping
Discovering or seizing the fruits of a crime for which a person has been arrested
Discovering or seizing any articles used in the commission of the crime for which the person has been arrested

A search warrant may be issued, under the bill, by "any judicial officer authorized to hold a court of inquiry to examine into an arrest of an offender against the penial laws".

E) Georgia Senate Bill No. 130, by Senators Johnson of the 38th, Westberry of the 37th, Ward of the 39th, Thompson of the 34th, MacIntyre of the 40th, and Salome of the 36th, which is - "A bill relating to the compilation of tax returns and the preparation of tax digests by the tax receivers so as to delete therefrom the requirement that the names of colored taxpayers be compiled separately on the tax digest and that a report be submitted to the State Revenue Commissioner of the amount of taxes returned by colored taxpayers." This bill was passed by the Georgia Legislature and removes the necessity of keeping separate pink cards for Negro and white cards for White taxpayers. The effective date of the bill is January, 1967.

F) Georgia House Bill No. 338, by Etheridge of the 123rd, Overby of the 16th, Tucker of the 36th, Grahl of the 52nd, Vaughn of the 117th, McCracken of the 49th, and Daugherty of the 134th, which was a bill - "to provide for the defense of indigents; to provide to the appointment of counsel; to authorize the establishment of the Office of Public Defender; to provide for compensation and expenses; to provide for matters relative to representation of indigents; to provide for a determination of indigency; to specify persons who may represent indigents; to provide for the substitution of public attorneys; to provide for personnel, facilities, and expenses for the Office of Public Defender; to provide for records and reports; to provide for penalties; to provide for appropriations and funds; to provide for other matters relating to the foregoing; to provide for severability" - did not pass the Georgia House.

Dear Pat:

I enjoyed your article on Mississippi in Dissent even if I do not agree with all of it. I was deeply moved. It is the best thing on the CDGM I have read. Congratulations.

The tragedy of Head Start is that as an educational measure it is largely without value, partly because it is an isolated device which should be integrated into a larger process. But the health and welfare aspects - well, that is something else. It has meant much in this respect. I hope to talk to you about this when I am next in Atlanta.

Warm regards.

Sincerely,

Oscar Cohen

Dear ADL Commissioner:

A few days ago I received the enclosed letter from a man who heads a pseudo-political society which preaches hatred, pronounces false words as truth and remains, no matter what else he pretends to be, a spider on the body of American conscience.

This letter addressed to me in somewhat complimentary terms as "Head Jew" speaks of the eventual triumph of the "white race" over the Jews and the Negroes. It promises that "the Vikings" will fall upon us with a "vengeance."

He of course accuses us of being leaders in the Battle for the protection of communists and talks angrily of our "money and power." He claims he doesn't "hate " us. He is impersonal. He is "simply determined to exterminate" us.

His target date for the beginning of his crusade is August 28th. The place Washington. His vow is to break the "Jew terror" and "black army." All in all a pleasant letter full of the old hatreds, the insane complexes of thought, and the familiar threats.

I share this with all of you as a ghastly reminder that the alarums of the winter ring into the summer; that the ghosts of the past materialize into something less phantom-like in the present.

The letter serves to tell us again that the lunatics still range the moors of hatred and prejudice, and that the constables have to remain on duty.

Head Jew
Anti-Defamation League,
New York City,
New York

5 July, 1963

Dear Jew:

Until yesterday, I myself could not be sure of our victory. My calculations might have been awry, and the White Race more cowardly than I reckoned. But I know now that when you Jews have pushed them FAR enough, they are the same deadly race of conquerors which has been teaching you Hebrews the lesson of life for more than 4,000 years. You will never learn. You will keep pushing and maddening the Viking you think you have chained up until, in a burst of miraculous strength which you never can understand, he bursts your chains of gold and falls upon you with a vengeance.

Our smashing success in Richmond in spite of your press blackout should be something for you to think about. If I could do it now, with all the lies and hate you have spread about us, and against all your machinery of public information, - wait until you see what can be done after two MONTHS of hard work in just this area! I will soon astound you and the world with our WHITE mass in Washington on August 28, regardless of what your black troops do. Can you have any doubt that I will get the signatures I need to run for Governor in 64? ---or that I will WIN, -inspite of your damnable lies and terrorism?

Keep listening to your Gentile "friends", Jews, that everybody loves you. It causes you to keep miscalculating, as you have been doing. A lot of people are AFRAID of you, but after watching us survive all your lies, your jails, insane-asylums and the rest for five long years, and then seeing us CHEERED in Richmond, they are getting over their fears.

It is YOUR turn to be afraid. I will not make the stupid mistake of getting overconfident or lawless, as you always imagine, and as so many other would-be Jew-fighters have done. Little by little I will banish the fear of you Jews from the hearts of our people, and organize them into a machine for legal power which all your lies and terrorism can't stop. We've taken the worst you had and grown stronger all the time.

Now you can reassure each other that I am just boasting and acting the fool, but in your hearts, you know better. I write this to help weaken you, to make you realize how useless have been all your efforts to PUSH Gentile officials, to force race-mixing for the benefit of Jews, to terrorize, every day, another thousand or so Americans. Every one who is terrorized, and is forced into smiling at you and telling you he loves you and hates us, --is burning with desire for revenge inside of his. There are more and more every day, and you are making them yourselves. Every time you go to a Chief of Police and FORCE him to your will, he may do as you demand, but he HATES you for it. Every time you get a prosecutor to falsely prosecute us, he may do it, but he learns just what you are, and he hates you for it. Every time you force American newsmen to betray their trust and lie, or to distort or suppress legitimate news, they may do it, but they, too, build up a little dynamo of hatred for such Jewish tryanny.

Especially you are in trouble for leading the battle for the "rights" of Communist traitors and race-mixers, while you preach ruthless suppression of American "extremists" as you call them. YOU are the extremists, and you have FORCED decent Americans to be "extremists" in self-defense.

I truly feel sorry for you gentlement up there in your air-conditioned offices with all your money and power. We are poor, hungry, few and weak. But we have self-respect. We know we are HONEST and FEARLESS. And we are as sure to win now, as winter will follow this summer. You are living on a volcanoe which you keep reassuring each other has been "capped". Well maybe it IS capped, Jews, but the fire and the pressure grows every day. Our people are ready to FIGHT Communism and race-mixing, and I need not tell you that that means they will wind up fight YOU, although most of them still do not know it yet.

Now you can run to Bobby, whom I have no doubt privately hates you and your p pressure tactics as much as any American, and maybe he will finally grab us. It will make no difference. I have been preparing for this battle for ten years, and will give a good account of ourselves. As usual, you are always off timing. If you had done it four years ago, I could not have survived. And if you had blasted us allout even three years ago, itowould probably have blown us away just by the pressure generated. Now it is too late, Jews. No matter WHAT you do, it will "back-fire".

I know you probably sincerely believe I a full of "hate". Strangely enough, even after all you have done to me I am not. I have become quite detached and professional about it. I am sure a man who runs a louse exterminating firm has no passionate hatred for lice. I have no hatred for Communist traitors, race-mixers, etc, such as so many Jews are. I am simply determined to exterminate such inhuman vermin as betray our Race and Republic like the Rosenbergs were exterminated for such treason.

When I was able to gather almost a thousand young Americans in Richmond, and get them CHEERING IN THE STREETS for a NAZI, --after all your outrageous movies, magazines, TV shows and other efforts to picture us as immoral murderers, I knew we were over the top. If you couldn't stop us before, you will NEVER stop us now.

If you continue to imagine this is idle boasting, observe what happens August 28th, Jews. We will break no laws to deliver ourselves up into your hands, but we will break your JEW TERROR and your BLACK ARMY once and for all.

August 28th, Jews!

Adios!

Your Master.

FOR RELEASE SUNDAY, OCTOBER 24

More than twenty top-ranking journalists will analyze the impact of news reporting on the racial revolution and the attitudes of the American public at a unique three-day conference for newsmen from across the nation to be held at the University of Missouri.

The conference, "The Racial Crisis and the News Media," is co-sponsored by the Freedom of Information Center at the University's School of Journalism and the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. It will be held November 14-16.

George P. Hunt, managing editor of Life magazine is keynote speaker. Participants and their topics are as follows:

-- Reporting the Racial Crisis in the South: Buford Boone, publisher, Tuscaloosa News; Hodding Carter 111, managing editor, Delta, Miss. Democrat-Times; Hugh Boyd, publisher, New Brunswick, N.J. News.

-- Round Table Discussions: William Peters, producer, NBC Reports; Louis Martin, vice president, Michigan Chronicle.

Benjamin R. Epstein, national director of the Anti-Defamation League, said the conference had been called to give newsmen a "much needed opportunity to sit down together, exchange techniques and experiences, and establish guidelines for reporting the many delicate situations connected with race relations."

The League, a 52-year old human relations organization, has a vast educational program to improve intergroup relations and promote "justice and fair treatment for all citizens."

According to Dr. Earl F. English, dean of the University's School of Journalism, some sixty newspaper, radio and television editors and reporters are expected to attend. In addition, the conference proceedings will be published "to provide a working document for news media and schools of journalism."

The conference will probe problems in gathering and reporting racial news, the effect of racial tension situations on the free flow of news, and the role news reporting plays in the racial crisis itself and intergroup attitudes

Dr. Paul L. Fisher is director of the Freedom of Information Center, founded in 1958 as a research source for background material and current events relating to news access.

Subject: The High Cost of Conflict

Basically, I think ADL's idea of up-dating this pamphlet is a good one. But I think the stress should be placed on the recent examples of such costs, not those of several years ago. We should, I feel, concentrate on business losses incurred from boycotts, demonstrations, and community tension; we should attempt to show too the cost to the taxpayer of physically enforcing segregation, (e. g., costs of special police forces, housing and feeding of arrested demonstrators). Further, I think we might include some examples of "positive" self-interest data (e.g., Commerce Department figures on Negro spending and Negro buying power).

Rather than opening the pamphlet with the same quotes used in the earlier publication, I would suggest that we might open with this excerpt from the Henderson pamphlet:

> "Fifty per cent of the nation's Negroes are concentrated in the South, and the South receives approximately 20% of the nation's total income. A conservative estimate is that the South loses from $5 to $6 billion annually because of racial discrimination."

And we might also have an excerpt from Jim Montgomery's August 29 story, headed "Racial Bias Takes Big Price in South."

These statements could be the pamphlet's "violin piece," the piece that sets forth the theme of our discussion. In an introductory section I would begin by referring to the so-called "critical summer" or the "summer of discontent," emphasizing that the epidemic of demonstrations around the South this summer was costly both to the taxpayer and the businessman. For example, it cost Alabama taxpayers more than $200,000 to send special state riot-control forces to Birmingham, Tuscaloosa, and Gadsden, while 37 days of militia law in Cambridge, Md., cost the state at least $176,000. A prominent retail merchant in Charleston made this statement in late July: "Since this [the Negro demonstrations] started in early June, business along the street is off anywhere from 20 to 50 per cent, depending on who you talk to."

The opening section could be titled "The General Situation." Besides pointing to the negative, it could also accentuate the positive by noting that, in ADL's words, "some Southern communities are meeting their responsibilities constructively and, as a result, have improved their economic situations."

I have no objection to doing a state-by-state breakdown of high cost examples. But I would do it somewhat differently than ADL has done in its draft. For example, take Alabama. I would open with a brief general statement, noting all the ruckus there in recent months. Then, following Potomac's format in "The Economic Impact of Racial Unrest" or something similar to our civil rights synopses, I would have a city-by-city rundown of cost examples and examples of positive action, with excerpts from news stories and statements made by local businessmen. We might have a final short graf headed "The Outlook for Alabama" in which we sum up the problems and economic prospects for the state in the future. Or we could follow the state-by-state section with a concluding section similar to ADL's "Toward the Future" (see 51, ADL draft).

The emphasis should be, I feel, on short, snappy excerpts rather than on a rambling discussion. Rather than an interpretative "think piece," I would present the kind of information that speaks for itself and needs no interpretation. What we need, in my opinion, are shorter, more dramatic "$ & ¢" stories. I think we've got some good ones in our high cost file.

DOLLARS FOR DEFIANCE

The Price We Pay

-Introduction-

The debate of our decade -- over whether the United States shall legislate to procure, to protect, and to prosecute for, full citizenship for Negro United States citizens -- has captured the front pages of our newspapers. And while the heavy artillery of morality, legality, tradition, and to a softer degree, political practicality, has boomed through the presses and across the speakers' rostrums, the cost of racial discrimination has not fully been discussed as a basic issue. Southern editors, national press services and newspapers, and civic leaders from Washington office buildings to Mississippi Lions Club luncheons know and have said they know that systematized prejudice pinches the municipal, county, state, and national purse. Often they have said exactly how much it costs.

Dollars for Defiance samples the thinking and reporting of these money-minded. In the subsequent examples they write and speak, not as their brother's keeper, but as the fiduciary of all their brothers' funds. This collection is directed at the pocketbook of the taxpayer first, and at his conscience secondarily.

While the left hand of a reader flips the pages, the right can punch an adding machine and tally up the price we are all paying for segregated housing, education, voting, employment, and places of public accommodation. Another column of figures can subtract from the local or national budget the funds spent to preserve an unequal system and the resources deployed from a small school's music department, for example, to a riot-control tank. The dollars and cents speak for themselves.

Not all of the waste here documented has a price tag. There is probably not enough money in the world, for example, to cover the cost to the American nation in international goodwill lost by unacceptable race relations. Can any people afford the ultimate cost to the human spirit that comes from cutting itself off from a culture's highest artistic achievements, as has much of the South through segregation?

The figures quoted, in sum, indicate how very much the South has spent for the simple and base purpose of depriving Negro Americans of their constitutional rights. There are probably those who would try to use the figures to blame not themselves for being so easily parted from their money, but to blame the Americans who by demanding constitutional rights for all have forced the expenditures. If so, they belabor the point we make by continuing to throw good money after bad. And any such rationale in support of continued spending founders on an elementary exercise in percentage; the estimated cost of implementing H.R. 7152 (see page 46) for five years -- $100 million -- is .6 per cent of the Gross National Product increase --$17 billion-- which would be realized for one year (see page 42) with full and free use of our human resources.

For our purpose is not so much to ask has it been worth it in the past, but to raise the question for the future of whether a people will continue to tolerate such a waste of hard-earned money. The table of contents of this financial report follows generally the outlines of the federal legislation on civil rights and public accommodations. Every community in the South faces in this legislation a decision as to whether it will be law-abiding or law-defying.

Only the partial dollar cost of a decade of defiance is documented here.

Will the South, which can least afford it, which so needs to develop the potential of its people to the highest degrees of human dignity, continue to pour its money down a rat's hole?

In Loss of and Inability to Attract Faculty.....

"The racial situation has kept some people from joining our faculty, even though we offer them a greater opportunity than anyone else," says Dr. S. Richardson Hill, dean of the University of Alabama Medical Center here [Birmingham]. "One doctor had already decided this was the best place for him. But after he talked it over with his family he decided against it."

.....Wall Street Journal, Sept. 19, 1963

Oxford, Miss., May 16 (AP) - Chancellor J. D. Williams said today 16 professors have resigned from the University of Mississippi faculty. That's four more than the average year-end turnover, Williams said.

A survey by the Associated Press indicates, however, that a total of 35 professors either have quit or have their resignations pending.

Southern newspaper

.....New York Times, May 17, 1963

...in Little Rock, although racial unrest was sparked by school desegregation, protests over segregated public accommodations further inflamed the environment. Under these conditions, recruitment of technical people became extremely difficult. According to the provost for medical affairs of the University of Arkansas ... the Medical Center has had its faculty recruitment program brought to a virtual standstill. "So many of the persons we approach and invite to join the faculty are diverted by the events that have been taking place in the community."

Oxford, Miss. - Although two Negro students were registered quietly at the University of Mississippi this week, the aftermath of last fall's rioting still plagues the school.

The number of new students who applied by June 1 for the fall term total 884, 30 per cent below last year's total of 1,264, according to figures compiled by the registrar's office.

The biggest decrease has been in the number of out-of-state students ...

A Houston jury in a state civil court last week O.K.'d a move by the trustees of Rice University to break away from two stipulations of the institution's founder [not to charge tuition and not to admit Negroes].

In Rice's case, more than 88% of the school's $5.9-million worth of research contracts are government supported.... Whether or not Congress adopts a strong civil rights law, it is clear that federal agencies are under pressure to put their money, where possible, in integrated colleges ...

In the light of such statistics, Rice trustees could see no future for their university, regardless of its recognized scientific stature in Texas, unless a court would allow them to bypass the two conditions of the University's charter.

Particularly, they [the trustees] said, continued exclusion of Negroes would cripple Rice's ability to attract a top-grade faculty as well as carry forward its research effort.

The crisis is, Dr. [William] Willard [vice president of the Medical Center, University of Kentucky] finds, clearly delineated. There is a sharp decline in the number and quality of applicants to medical schools. Dr. Willard names no institutions. But the schools described in Group One, where research and experiments are conducted, are, the report says, "not handicapped by sponsorship which restricts admission of students by race, creed or color as in some Group Two schools." The marginal schools, and those most burdened, are, therefore, in the South ...

In 1960-61 the ten schools in Group One averaged $11.3 million [in expenditures] per school. Group Two averaged $1.7 million. Federal grants for research naturally -- and properly -- went largely to the Group One institutions.

Several witnesses at a civil rights hearing here [New Orleans] today testified that industry in the South was penalizing itself when it discriminated against Negroes.

Because of this discrimination, they said, the brighter and better educated young Negroes migrate to the North and never return.

About 750 of the brighter boys of New Orleans go to school at St. Augustine's. Father Messina [Rev. Millsaps College reaffirmed its segregation policy in a statement in the current edition of the Methodist Advocate.

Roanoke, Va. Nov. 12 (AP) - Roanoke School Superintendent E. W. Rushton attacked the tuition grant program last night in some of the strongest terms yet from an educator.

The cost rise is "alarming" ... said Rushton.

He said money has been laid out for the grants year after year while spending has been cut for teacher salaries, school plant operation and maintenance.

For every child who gets a grant, the city loses more money - an average of $100 in the State support allocated on the basis of children in average daily attendance.

School Board Business Manager A. F. Fisher estimated today that the total cost of the program to date thus exceeds $225,000, or about the cost of a new eight-room elementary school.

Gov. George Wallace's war against "the central government" could be far more costly to the people of Alabama if the federal government ever decides to fight back.

Moreover, the Defense Department is now cutting down on the number of military and naval bases and installations over the country. And, when all other considerations are close to even, defense advisers may decide that it would be wise to close an installation in a state that persists in fighting the federal government rather than a similar installation in another state that is more cooperative.

Rep. Kenneth Roberts got some figures together recently showing that in the fiscal year than ended last June 30, the Defense Department alone spent in Alabama more than $700 million in payrolls, upkeep, contracts, and the like.

There is no doubt whatever that Alabama gets considerably more than its proportionate share of federal tax dollars, considering its population and the amount of federal taxes its citizens pay.

However, while the state's over-all business advance continued, economists in other Southeastern states remained convinced that Mississippi would suffer in later years because of the racial outbreaks.

They cited Little Rock, Ark., as evidence, noting that the industry stopped locating there for two years after the racial troubles in 1957.

A leading economist said he expected the number of new industries in Mississippi "to start declining by the middle of 1963, and to continue shrinking for a long time to come until and unless, the state shows that it is willing to rejoin the Union."

Industrial development people admit that the turmoil is frightening away prospective new industry. Sidney M. Smyer, a prominent real estate man who has been active in business groups talking with Negroes, says: "This situation is going to have definite effects on locating further business here [Birmingham]. People aren't going to come where there is trouble - it's hard enough to get them when you have a favorable climate." W. Cooper Green, executive vice-president of Alabama Power Co., sums it up: "Violence hurts - labor violence, criminal violence, racial violence. You have to live it down."

...The severe economic damage caused by racial unrest has forced the city's business community into action....Birmingham is endowed with a rich supply of raw materials and with ample resources of labor. But the flow of new industries into the area was halted by the onset of racial violence....As one businessman puts it: "We have become the world's headquarters for racial violence, and nothing worse could happen to a city."

And then, on the other hand.....

Huntsville, once a sleepy, dusty town of textile mills, stately mansions of excellent architecture, and mill-town slum housing, now is an exciting, dynamic city of confidence in its future and poise in its present. It eschewed violence or incident in the desegregation of its schools. It is, next to Mobile, the oldest municipality in the state, and yet no city in the South has so freed itself from the dead hand of the past.

The four-lane Parkway Drive, lined with new retail businesses and handsome motels, also runs through old cotton fields. In the 1930's, the land, worn out with cotton growing, was selling for about $4.00 an acre. Today, the asking price is $3,000 per acre.

This section and the following one on court costs document ~~the~~ public outlays which for the most part result from demonstrations and other actions instigated by Negroes. The plaint is sometimes heard in the South that ~~if~~ Negroes are therefore guilty of great waste of taxpayers' ~~originating~~ money. The ~~argument~~ argument stops short of the true cause of the waste. The true cause is of course the cause of the demonstrations and other actions, which is to say the denial by discrimination of rights guaranteed by the U.S. ~~Constitution~~ Constitution. Greenville, South Carolina, is having its problems. Faced with a suit to integrate its municipal swimming pool, the city council voted last October to convert it into a "marineland." "Integrated pools operate at a loss," Alderman W. L Bouton ... explained in proposing the switch. The economy-minded council apparently had no alternative but to import six sea lions from California. Since then, however, it's been just one thing after another... The trouble began as soon as the sea lions were flown in by jet from Santa Barbara. They not only needed a series of vitamin and antibiotic inoculations on arrival but fifty pounds of fish a day as well.

Yet the "animal groceries" budget had already been exceeded by $378 at that point and the $1,500 ration allowance that was provided "obviously left no margin," one alderman found, "for feeding camels and yaks." (There was no question that camels and yaks deserved treatment equal to sea lions')... It was discovered that the pool had sprung a leak .... The costs, however, turned out to be manageable, and for several days the local papers carried dolorous pictures of the woebegone seals dryly sitting it out on the shower-room benches while the pool was drained and the repairs made. In mid-January a $1,200 concrete island with five spiral decks was lowered into the pool, and there is talk of a stainless-steel slide to come. But this gives no assurance yet that the sea lions will learn to be as happy as kids, black or white, in a swimming pool. At the end of January, one sea lion was found dead of unkown causes at the side of the pool, and another died at the veterinarian's.

For Segregated Housing

He [Emerson P. Schmidt, chief economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce] noted that while there has been no absolute drop in the volume of federally-financed house construction since the anti-discrimination order was issued in November, there has been a drop in the proportion it represents of all new house construction.

.....Atlanta Constitution, July 1, 1963

Not only is the impulse to new home ownership an inevitable expression of the middle class Negro's aspirations and accomplishments, its realization would have a salutary effect on the economy at large.

Recently the Housing and Home Finance agency prepared a series of estimates of the extent to which new construction would be augmented if non-white families were permitted and inclined to participate in the housing market in a manner identical to that of the white families. The calculation for 17 metropolitan areas in the United States indicated that potential demand accumulated among non-white families with incomes between $7,000 and $10,000 a year amounted to 45,000 units, and that demand in all 212 metropolitan areas may be as high as 200,000 units.

This figure represents approximately one-eighth of the total annual volume of new construction and one-sixth of the annual number of new one-family units. Were the backlog to be made up during the remaining portion of the decades of the 1960's, the demand for new construction would be increased by 2 to 3 per cent a year. This could be a welcome addition during a period in which net household formation is expected to taper off.

.....The Mortgage Banker, February 1964

...If backward attitudes prevail, Atlanta can become a predominantly Negro city by 1975.

And since the existing housing squeeze will increasingly drive well-off Negroes as well as whites to homes outside the city limits, in order to make way for city slums to house the poorest Negroes and whites, then the city's tax base will erode and progress will wither.

Then city business will falter, and with it job opportunities, so that the poverty of the city's poor will begin to feed on itself and perpetuate the cycle of decay.

What the city faces, therefore, is not a racial debate but an economic crisis. Poor whites, trapped in city slums, will be hurt along with poor Negroes. And the well-off whites, along with the well-off Negroes, who withdraw into suburbs will find the source of their prosperity - a strong central city - evaporating.

THE PRICE WE PAY

In Loss of Conventions and Tourist Business

...A week or so ago, the National Lutheran Council decided to meet in Charlotte after the New York Times reported that eight hotels and motels in that city had been desegregated. Earlier, the council members had discounted Charlotte as a meeting site. The executive director of the council said that "we would prefer (as a matter of principle) not to be in a place where the hotel space was segregated." Thus Charlotte gets a convention that will bring 70 people there for three days.

Last Friday, the North Carolina Association of Broadcasters said that it had cancelled plans to hold its June convention at a motor hotel in Wrightsville Beach because the management refused to provide accommodations for representatives of a member radio station owned by Negroes. Instead, the association will meet at a New Bern hotel.

There will surely be other such instances as more and more organizations desegregate their membership and as the consciences of Americans become increasingly aroused to the need for racial justice. And in time the realities of business may overcome the fears of those who still feel that discrimination pays off.

THE PRICE WE PAY

In Lost Tourist Business

The business community generally has begun to recognize that the Negro's rising disposable income represents a large and growing portion of the nation's buying power. However, this is far less true in the area of public accommodation.

I have asked my staff to prepare a tabulation of average Negro and white expenditures for "Admissions," "Food eaten away from home," and "Automobile operations" (a key to travel, and therefore spending for hotels and motels). The tabulation is based on a study published several years ago by the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania.

These data show that Negroes in large northern cities spend more than southern Negroes of the same income class in all of these expenditure categories, even though white families in northern cities spend less than similar families in southern cities.

In the same income group, northern Negroes spend more than northern whites for "Admissions," but southern Negroes spend less than southern white and Northern Negroes. Negroes in both the North and South spend less on "Food eaten away from home" than white people in the same income groups, but the difference is much greater in the South.

The table also shows that Negroes in both the North and South spend much less than whites of the same income class on "Automobile operations" (40 to 60 per cent). This statistic certainly suggests that Negroes are doing considerably less traveling by automobile than white people in the same income group. Since Negroes spent close to the same amount, on the average, for the purchase of automobiles as did whites of the same income level, I believe the absence of suitable facilities along our important North-South highway routes must be the discouraging factor.

SALES MANAGER CITES COSTLY EFFECTS OF RACIAL TROUBLES ON SELLING ABROAD

Buffalo, N.Y. - I have just returned from a selling trip through the greater and lesser Antilles where for years we have been selling machinery and equipment to these off-shore areas in the Caribbean and the Atlantic.

Both the whites and the blacks now refuse to buy anything American from us even though, personally, I have made many friends for the past many years.

Russia, Japan, Canada and England have their salesmen in these prosperous islands and invariably they talk about how the whites treat the colored people in the United States.

Last year the U.S. Department of Commerce reported exports to these same islands amounted to $180 million but the steamship companies so far this year are noticing that shipments are few.

ELLENDER'S BOOMERANG

Washington - Twenty-two ambassadors from African nations get together here yesterday to tell the world what it already knew - that Africa thinks even less of Sen. Allen J. Ellender than he thinks of it.

A Louisiana Democrat and ardent segregationist, Sen. Ellender likes to go around telling anybody who will listen that Negroes are incapable of self-government. He said it again on television Sunday.

The statement brought the usual reaction. On Monday, Secretary of State Dean Rusk, speaking for an Administration that is up to its neck in racial problems, said the Senator did not speak for the government or for a majority of Americans.

The Africans had heard this before, and were not impressed. They gathered in the Liberian Embassy and issued a communique that said, in part:

"The language used by the Senator was needlessly offensive to our countries with which the United States government has friendly relations...

"It is difficult to ignore Sen. Ellender's remarks or to dismiss them as the fully privileged announcement of a private citizen in view of his position as a senior member of Congress and of the Senate Appropriations Committee...

"It is a grave disservice to the cause of world peace and understanding for a person occupying a prominent place in the public life of a great nation to provoke a return of the archaic debates on whether ethnic differences can be held to justify a claim of superiority by one race over another. That theory has proved been baseless and its revival is likely to be source of incalculable mischief."

Last December, while on a taxpayer-financed junket to Africa,

Senator Ellender also said Negroes were unable to rule themselves. The remarks received wide publicity all over the continent and caused the State Department considerable embarrassment.

One result was that four countries on the Senator's itinerary refused permission for him to visit.

In March, Sen. Ellender held a press conference here in which he said he had no apologies for his views. He called Africans "thinskinned" and still appeared nettled that he had been refused travel rights in four of the nations. He added:

"The Negro in Africa is no different from the Negro in America. The minute you say whites are a little ahead of the Negro it's like shaking a red handkerchief before a fighting bull."

The official policy of the United States, of course, has been to support independence for new African states. It is aiding these countries to the tune of $500 million a year.

Air mail brought cuttings from newspapers in the new African countries showing treatment of the Birmingham riots and bombings within four days after the first brutalities. These mailings - to our State Department, to members of many delegations in the United Nations, and to individuals - have continued. They include photographs.

The result of the madness at Birmingham, and the following statements by Governor Wallace, Bull Connor, and others in political leadership in Alabama and Mississippi, have quite literally paralyzed the foreign relations of this country's representatives in Africa and seriously damaged them elsewhere.

THE PRICE WE PAY

In Employment

Racial discrimination in employment was singled out Wednesday as one of a complex set of forces which, together, are costing the American people more than $30 billion a year in personal income, most of it in the Southeast.

Ironically, it was not in Washington or at a civil rights forum that this estimate of economic loss was cited.

An Atlanta economist presented the calculation in a rather more academic setting in Minneapolis...

Dr. Joseph Airov, associate professor of economics at Emory University, was referring to the regional differences in per capita income in which the Southeast ranks hindmost among the eight major regions of the United States.

.....Jim Montgomery column in Atlanta Constitution, August 29, 1963

New Orleans - Several witnesses at a civil rights hearing here testified today that industry in the South was penalizing itself when it discriminated against Negroes.

Because of this discrimination, they said, the brighter and better-educated young Negroes migrate to the North and never return. This often leaves unfilled jobs for which they could qualify and discourages establishment of new industry for lack of skilled workers, they added.

Mr. Kerns [J. Harvey Kerns, executive director of the Urban League of Greater New Orleans] charged that although the Southern Bell Telephone Company had been advertising in New Orleans for months for telephone operators and other specialized workers, it had turned down all Negro applicants.

Representatives of the Boeing Company and of Kaiser Aluminum, both of which have national policies of equal opportunity in employment, said they had found difficulty finding skilled Negro help here.

.....New York Times, July 10, 1963

In recent years, its failure to attract any significant amount of new industry and its reliance on the limping steel industry - U.S. Steel Corp.'s Tennessee Coal & Iron division is the area's biggest employer - have combined to slow Birmingham's economy. In 1957, the metropolitan area had its highest employment, 246,000. Today, the total is estimated at 228,000.

Some Birmingham citizens say that in recent years large numbers of their best educated young men and women have been deserting the city to find opportunity elsewhere. It hasn't all been due to the lack of economic opportunity, says one young citizen. "We lost ourselves a generation; they just don't want to put up with all this racial strife."

In Georgia, the median income to support each individual white person is $2,470, each Negro $927. White unemployment is 3.7 per cent, Negro 6 per cent. Weltner [Rep. Charles L. Weltner, D. Such an atmosphere is a serious problem for companies that need to hire executives and highly trained workers. Rust Engineering Co., for example, employs some 400 people, mostly graduate engineers, in Birmingham. George M. Rust, executive vice-president, says flatly that his company can't attract the trained engineers it needs. He pins the blame directly on the racial troubles.

"Periodically we run help-wanted ads in newspapers around the country," Rust explains. "We generally get 10 to 15 responses to each ad. About the time of the demonstrations last May we ran 10 ads from which we got just two answers." He goes on: "One highly skilled man we needed badly put us off because he wanted to see how the racial situation developed. Finally he decided not to come."

.....Business Week, Sept. 28, 1963

The race trouble in Little Rock a few years ago caused so many people to leave the state that Arkansas lost two congressmen after the 1960 census.

Some Southerners maintain that states' rights protect their choice of economic suicide rather than social progress. However, the impoverished and ignorant migrants moving from the South are flooding Northern cities where there is no work for cotton pickers. Without education enough to hold a city job, these people become permanent relief clients.

Those who must support them do not have much sympathy for the states that have cheated them of at least an eighth-grade education and have practiced such mean discriminations as barring them from the public library.

Segregation is expensive, and it is not pleasant to pay in Chicago for a policy decided upon in Mississippi or Alabama.

Gross National Product

If non-whites had the same labor force participation and employment rates as the whites and if they were distributed geographically and occupationally (and thus in terms of wage and salary income) as whites with the same educational attainments -- if, in other words, non-whites were able to make the same contribution to production, given their present educational attainment, GNP would be increased by about 1.8 per cent.

Furthermore, the 1.8 per cent estimate relates only to wage and salary income and does not attempt the difficult measurement of the change in the labor component of entrepreneurial income. Gains will occur in the labor productivity of the self-employed adding further to the 1.8 per cent increase in GNP.

The above considerations suggest that the gain in Gross National Product might well be as much as 2.5 per cent (about $13 billion at today's level of GNP).

...The shift to full utilization of the present capabilities of the non-white population (and the resultant GNP increase of about 2.5 per cent) would assist significantly in meeting our economic growth objectives in the coming years.

If non-whites had the same educational levels as whites and if the economy fully utilized their education, GNP today might be perhaps 3 per cent higher (inclusive of the 2.5 per cent estimate reported above). This amounts to about $17 billion at today;s levels of GNP.

American society robs itself when it refuses equal job and educational opportunities to people because of their race, creed or religion.

That's the feeling of Hobart Taylor, Jr., of Washington, D.C., the executive vice chairman of the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity.

...Taylor prefers to approach the issue of desegregation on economic grounds.

The Gross National Product of the United States, for example, would be increased by at least $30 Billion a year if job discrimination were ended, he said. The Gross National Product now stands at $600 Billion.

"Our economic system needs to be arranged so that everyone strives to his fullest," he said. "If he doesn't, the country is that much poorer."

The economic evil about discrimination, he said, is that it makes many feel they cannot rise above a certain level, so they tend to give less than their best.

Taylor said one of the most harmful fallacies in the nation is that there are only a certain number of jobs available for the work force.

The truth is, he says, that as more people are given the opportunity to produce, the more wealth and jobs there are created.

Enforcing Civil Rights Legislation

Civil Rights, as proposed in the omnibus bill now pending in Congress, won't come cheap.

Administrative expenses of the program were set out in a letter to the House Judiciary Committee, which now is seeking right of way for the bill to floor.

Nicholas Katzenbach, deputy attorney general, estimated that over a five-year period these would run close to $100,000,000, broken down in this way:

1. To Department of Justice, for enforcing new guarantees of voting rights and access to public accommodations and facilities, $923,920.

2. To Department of Health, Education and Welfare for technical help to schools as they desegregate, $10,095,000; to Justice for legal work in this connection, $699,870.

3. To Civil Rights Commission, operating under broader power granted in the bill, which also makes this agency permanent, $1,425,000.

4. To Justice Department, for enforcing nondiscrimination in Federally assisted programs, $66,350.

5. To proposed new Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, $5,760,000; to Labor Department for special studies in this field, $75,000.

6. To Department of Commerce, for special voting census to determine how many Negroes are denied franchise, $1,800,000.

These outlays total $20,845,140 for the first year of the new program. Subsequent years might be somewhat less expensive since the special voting census will not be a recurring project.

S O S NEWSLETTER

1520 Jefferson Avenue March 15, 1961

Quiet presently prevails in the struggle for open public schools. However, this lull should not be taken to mean the fight is over. Despite rumors of compromise between state and federal government and an apparent relaxation by the legislature of the bonds placed on the Orleans Parish school board, there are other indications that harassment of the board will be continued and that financial strangulation of the system may well be attempted.

A report that a legislative committee intends to "investigate" administration costs of the Orleans Parish school system confirms this point of view. Such an "investigation" is both unnecessary and a useless expenditure of taxpayer's money. It was only a few weeks ago that one of the nation's outstanding competent management consulting firms completed a study of our school system. This firm not only commended the operation for its efficiency but pointed out the significant progress made in recent years and the amazing economy exercised. Ultimately, the organization paid the highest tribute of all. It hired, for its own consulting staff, Dr. James F. Redmond -- the superintendent of schools who led in establishing this most creditable organization.

We ask therefore: what significant contribution can be made by a group of legislators unprepared and untrained in the conduct of such an analysis? If they were sincere in their efforts, they would need only to review the comprehensive report rendered by Booz, Allen and Hamilton. Obviously, this would save taxpayers many hundreds of dollars. The only conclusion: added harassment of the Orleans Board is in the offing.

Further indication that the fight is not over: a newspaper headline: "Louisiana Leaders Pledge U. S. Court Defiance." In the story, legislators indicate they have subpoenaed various materials held by Supt. Shelby M. Jackson and taken other steps to relieve him of functions that have caused him to be the object of federal contempt proceedings. Further, the story indicates that the funds previously reported released may be "delayed" for some time yet.

Another conclusion: our school system is not yet free of the possibility of further attempts at financial strangulation.

Hence: our fight to keep schools open will continue, our efforts to educate the public will continue.

* * * * * * *

SOS STATURE HAS GROWN.

This is the first newsletter since the school crisis exploded back in November, principally because board members and hundreds of other members have been engaged in executing parts of the SOS program. If you've followed the newspapers closely, you are certainly aware that we have been active.

These activities have not only drawn New Orleans attention, and been of assistance in awakening the public here, but have drawn nationwide attention. All members should take pride in the fact that the organization has achieved such prominence and that all of us had the courage to speak out publicly and repeatedly for open schools in difficult and trying times. If the organization has remained silent, it would have surrendered the purpose its members set for themselves when they were organized 11 months ago. Silence would have been tantamount to defeat.

Many people in New Orleans have done excellent work behind the scenes to keep the schools open. But this particular purpose of SOS -- to educate the general public to the need for open schools -- could not be carried out in silence. Public education of this kind functions in large part by publicity. To this end, each SOS member should be publicity agent for open schools. Talk to your neighbor about the desperate need for public education! Phone your friends and tell them that private co-op schools are not the solution to the current problem! Have a coffee party and sell open schools when you pass the cake!

FIFTH SPECIAL SESSION

On February 18, the president of SOS testified before a legislative committee on the administration's mis-labeled local-option bill. Contrary to the Georgia local option bill, the Louisiana bill cannot be construed as valid local option, since it does not provide for keeping schools open even if a community votes for open schools. Administrative leaders have said repeatedly that should New Orleans vote to keep schools open, efforts to cut off funds would not cease.

It is evident that administration leaders will use St. Helena as a testing area for present local option and tuition grant laws. A local option election has been called in St. Helena for April 22. The Louisiana grants-in-aid program will be implemented if the parish votes to close schools rather than comply with federal court orders and utilize the pupil placement plan.

In Virginia, the pupil aid program is being seriously questionned now. The chairman of the Virginia Pupil Placement Board, E. J. Ogglesby, has stated that he thinks the law violates the U. S. Constitution because it discriminates against pupils attending parochial schools. A suit indirectly assailing the tuition plan is at present in the U. S. District court in Richmond. Until many questions concerning grants-in-aid are settled, Louisiana people should not be misled into readily accepting the plan as an answer to the current problems.

SOS STORY TOLD

Our organization was represented among a group of some fifty who attended the third annual conference on schools in transition sponsored by the U. S. civil rights commission at Williamsburg, Va., during February. The conference was attended by educators, parents and other citizens from communities faced with federal court orders to desegregate public schools. Among them were representatives from the Prince Edward, Va., Foundation; school superintendents from Roanoke, Norfolk, and Front Royal, Va.; Atlanta, New Orleans, and Baton Rouge. Mrs. Mary Sand served as SOS's representative.

President Kennedy, in a telegram to the meeting, praised New Orleans educators, parents and other citizens who are working to keep public schools open for "quiet intelligence and true courage". He said: "This is no time for schools to close for any reason, and certainly no time for schools to be closed in the name of racial discriminiation." President Kennedy said of those in New Orleans who have tried to carry out the desegregation order: "The whole country is in their debt, for our public school system must be preserved and improved. Let me also pay tribute to the school children and their parents, of both races, who have been on the frontlines of this problem. In accepting the command of the constitution with dignity, they, too, are contributing to the education of all Americans."

In his message, President Kennedy said "our very survival as a free nation depends on preserving and improving the public schools." If the U.S. is to give world leadership, he said "we must be true to the great principles of our constitution -- the very principles which distinguish us from our adversaries in the world." The President summarized: "Let me here pay tribute to these educators -- principals, officers of school boards and public school teachers. The constitutional requirement of desegregation has presented them with many new responsibilities and hard challenges. In New Orleans today, as in many other places represented in your three conferences, these loyal citizens and educators are meeting these responsibilities and challenges with quiet intelligence and true courage."

Dear Paul:

Thanks for your note of March 16th. I have been out of town for a few days and just returned.

As yet I have not heard from Henry Cabirac, but I feel certain that he will probably call after he gets himself settled a bit. In the meantime, I plan to check with Jack Nelson but he is out of his office now; but I shall try again shortly.

Thanks for the info; I appreciate it. Hope to see you again shortly.

Kindest regards.

Sincerely,

Irwin Schulman

A group of Catholic laymen have established an organization designed to promote interracial justice and charity in the Archdiocese of New Orleans.

At a meeting March 23, at Notre Dame Seminary, approximately 300 laymen and lay women voted to establish the Catholic Council on Human Relations of the Archdiocese of New Orleans.

They elected C. Ellis Henican, New Orleans, their president. Other officers elected were: First Vice-President, Dr. Paul Hebert, Baton Rouge; Second Vice-President, Dr. Leonard Burns, New Orleans; Secretary, John P. Nelson, Jr., New Orleans; Treasurer, Mrs. Thompson B. Burk, New Orleans.

Members of the Board of Directors are: Francis C. Doyle, Harry Charbonnet, Shelly Schuster, Dr. Nick Accardo, Miss Iona Berteaux, William Joseph Rouchell, Charles DeBlieux, James Gilly, Miss Norey Smith, Numa Rousseve, Basil Moss, Ben Canaday, Charles Denechaud, Elliot Keyes, all of New Orleans; Senator J.D. DeBlieux, Dr. B.V. Barranco, Andrew Bahlinger, John Burk, A.A. Lenoir, Herman Scluter, Dr. Myron Walker, all of Baton Rouge; Dr. John Fisher, Cut-Off; Thomas Ragusa and Frank Cucchiara of Hammond; Dr. Charles Daunis, Vacherie; J.R. Schoen, Covington; Edward Lapeyrouse, Houma; Dr. Richard Dawes, Gramercy.

The Rt. Rev. Msgr. Charles J. Plauche stated that the Council was formed with the approval and blessing of the Most Rev. Joseph Francis Rummel, Archbishop of New Orleans.

Mr. Henican said the purpose of the organization is to improve relationships among peoples of all races and national origins in the Archdiocese. He added that it will promote the teachings of the Catholic Church on interracial justice and charity and will work to correct the mistaken image that some persons have of the Church's official position on these matters.

"While this is a Catholic laymen's organization," he said, "we invite all citizens of good will to consider the approval of the objects of the newly created Council and to join with the Council in this community wide undertaking."

It is the Council's hope, he said, that attitudes of Christian charity will permeate all phases of community life. Its aims are fourfold:

(a) To promote good relationships among peoples of all races in the Archdiocese of New Orleans;
(b) To make known the teachings of the Catholic church on matters of interracial justice and charity, particularly as summarized by all of the cardinals, archbishops and bishops throughout the United States in their statement issued in 1958 and entitled "Discrimination and the Christian Conscience"; and the application of these principles to everyday living experiences;
(c) To work in cooperation with public and responsible private agencies in strengthening the fabric of America's democratic way of life through the promotion of good human relations; and
(d) To exhort all of the clergy, religious and laity to offer their daily prayers, good works and sacrifices for the peaceful and charitable solution of all problems of human relations.

Msgr Plauche said the responsibility for these aims lies with the Catholic layman as well as well as with the clergy.

Mr. Henican reported that Council members will conduct a program of education within the Catholic pariehes and will promote the Council's ideals in all phases of community life.

Mr. Henican says anyone interested in further information, please call 866-4455, or write P.O. Box 4366, New Orleans, Louisiana.

He released the attached statement on the Council's purposes and aims:

cf following pages

March 23, 1961, Catholic Council on Human Relations of the Archdiocese of New Orleans

Statement of purpose:

The Catholic Council on Human Relations of the Archdiocese of New Orleans has been established under the guidance and direction of the Most Reverend Archbishop of New Orleans.

According to Article II of the Charter of the Catholic Council on Human Relations of the Archdiocese of New Orleans, the objects and purposes are stated to be:

(A) To promote good relationships among peoples of all races in the Archdiocese of New Orleans;

(B) To make known the teachings of the Catholic Church on matters of interracial justice and charity, particularly as summarized by all of the Cardinals, Archbishops and Bishops throughout the United States in their statement issued in 1958 and entitled "Discrimination and the Christian Conscience"; and the application of these principles to everyday living experiences;

(C) To work in cooperation with public and responsible private agencies, in strengthening the fabric of America's Democratic Way of Life through the promotion of good human relations; and

(D) To exhort all of the clergy, religious and laity to offer their daily prayers, good works and sacrifices for the peaceful and charitable solution of all problems of human relations.

We have been motivated towards the formation of this Council out of a deep sense of the demands of the great Christian law of love of neighbor and respect for his rights, taught to us by Christ both by deed and word. These demands have been spelled out for us by the authoritative statement of all the Cardinals, Archbishops and Bishops of the United States issued in 1958, and entitled "Discrimination and the Christian Conscience." No document can better express both the reasons for the formation of this Council of Human Relations, and its goals. Here is the official statement of this newly formed work in Christ's Church. And it is only right and proper that is should be so, for as Catholics we believe that by the disposition of Christ Himself, the Roman Pontiff for the whole Church, and the Bishops for the faithful entrusted to their care, are the properly constituted shepherds of the flock of Christ; to them has been divinely given the right and duty to teach, rule, govern and sanctify those in their charge. As Pius XII stated, in his allocution of May 31, 1954: "Besides the lawful successors of the Apostles, namely, the Roman Pontiff for the Universal Church and Bishops for the Faithful entrusted to their care, there are no other teachers divinely constituted in the Church of Christ." (The Authority of the Church in Temporal Matters, NCWC, Washington, p. 2). As loyal and faithful Catholics we must, then, accept the authorative teaching of the American hierarchy and respond to their call to action.

The Bishops have taught us that "Discrimination based on the accidental fact of race or color, and as such injurious tohuman rights regardless of personal qualities or achievements, cannot be reconciled with the truth that God has created all men with equal rights and equal dignity." (Paragraph 12). They have further stated that: "Legal segregation, or any form of compulsory segregation, in itself and by its very nature imposes a stigma of inferiority upon the segregated people. Even if the now obsolete Court doctrine of 'Separate but Equal' had been carried out to the fullest extent, so that all public and simi-public facilities were in fact equal, there is nonetheless the judgment that an entire race, by the sole fact of race and regardless of individual qualities, is not fit to associate on equal terms with members of another race. We cannot reconcile such a judgment with the Christian view of Man's nature and rights." (Paragraph 16). Finally they add that: "It is a matter of historical fact that segregation in our country has led to oppressive conditions and the denial of basic human rights for the Negro. This is evident in the fundamental fields of education, job opportunity, and housing." (Paragraph 17).

Faced with such authoritative teachings, the Catholic laymen forming this Council on Human Relations, will to answer the call to action of the American Bishops. Together with the Bishops, we as Catholics and southern citizens of the United States, realize that the problems which face us in the domain of human relations in the Archdiocese "are rooted in Decades, even centuries, of custom and cultural patterns" and that "changes in (such) deep-rooted attitudes are not made overnight." (Paragraph 22). We know that our action must be both prudent and courageous, quiet, prayerful and decisive. But act we must. We equally deplore a "gradualism that is merely a cloak for inaction" and a "rash impetuosity that would sacrifice the achievements of decades in ill-timed and ill-considered ventures." (Paragraph 23). We must "seize the mantle of leadership from the agitator and the racist," (Paragraph 24), "Root out of our hearts bitterness and hatred. The tasks we face are indeed difficult. But hearts inspired with Christian love will surmount these difficulties." (Paragraph 25). It is our prayer that this Council on Human Relations will, with God's grace, meet full face the challenge of our times and under the direction of the Most Reverend Archbishop of New Orleans yield fruit a hundred-fold.

While this is a Catholic laymen's organization, we invite all citizens of good will to consider the approval of the objects of the newly created Council and to join with the Council in this community wide undertaking.

MR. HENICAN SAYS ANYONE INTERESTED IN FURTHER INFORMATION, PLEASE CALL 866-4455, OR WRITE P. O. BOX 4366, NEW ORLEANS, LOUISIANA.

HE RELEASED THE FOLLOWING STATEMENT ON THE COUNCIL'S PURPOSES AND AIMS:

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

THE CATHOLIC COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS OF THE ARCHDIOCESE OF NEW ORLEANS HAS BEEN ESTABLISHED UNDER THE GUIDANCE AND DIRECTION OF THE MOST REVEREND ARCHBISHOP OF NEW ORLEANS.

ACCORDING TO ARTICLE II OF THE CHARTER OF THE CATHOLIC COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS OF THE ARCHDIOCESE OF NEW ORLEANS, THE OBJECTS AND PURPOSES ARE STATED TO BE:

(A) TO PROMOTE GOOD RELATIONSHIPS AMONG PEOPLES OF ALL RACES IN THE ARCHDIOCESE OF NEW ORLEANS;

(B) TO MAKE KNOWN THE TEACHINGS OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH ON MATTERS OF INTERRACIAL JUSTICE AND CHARITY, PARTICULARLY AS SUMMARIZED BY ALL OF THE CARDINALS, ARCHBISHOPS AND BISHOPS THROUGHOUT THE UNITED STATES IN THEIR STATEMENT ISSUED IN 1958 AND ENTITLED "DISCRIMINATION AND THE CHRISTIAN CONSCIENCE"; AND THE APPLICATION OF THESE PRINCIPLES TO EVERYDAY LIVING EXPERIENCES;

(C) TO WORK IN COOPERATION WITH PUBLIC AND RESPONSIBLE PRIVATE AGENCIES, IN STRENGTHENING THE FABRIC OF AMERICA'S DEMOCRATIC WAY OF LIFE THROUGH THE PROMOTION OF GOOD HUMAN RELATIONS; AND

(D) TO EXHORT ALL OF THE CLERGY, RELIGIOUS AND LAITY TO OFFER THEIR DAILY PRAYERS, GOOD WORKS AND SACRIFICES FOR THE PEACEFUL AND CHARITABLE SOLUTION OF ALL PROBLEMS OF HUMAN RELATIONS.

WE HAVE BEEN MOTIVATED TOWARDS THE FORMATION OF THIS COUNCIL OUT OF A DEEP SENSE OF THE DEMANDS OF THE GREAT CHRISTIAN LAW OF LOVE OF NEIGHBOR AND RESPECT FOR HIS RIGHTS, TAUGHT TO US BY CHRIST BOTH BY DEED AND WORD. THESE DEMANDS HAVE BEEN SPELLED OUT FOR US BY THE AUTHORITATIVE STATEMENT OF ALL THE CARDINALS, ARCHBISHOPS AND BISHOPS OF THE UNITED STATES ISSUED IN 1958, AND ENTITLED "DISCRIMINATION AND THE CHRISTIAN CONSCIENCE." NO DOCUMENT CAN BETTER EXPRESS BOTH THE REASONS FOR THE FORMATION OF THIS COUNCIL OF HUMAN RELATIONS, AND ITS GOALS. HERE IS THE OFFICIAL STATEMENT OF THIS NEWLY FORMED WORK IN CHRIST'S CHURCH. AND IT IS ONLY RIGHT AND PROPER THAT IT SHOULD BE SO, FOR AS CATHOLICS WE BELIEVE THAT BY THE DISPOSITION OF CHRIST HIMSELF, THE ROMAN PONTIFF FOR THE WHOLE CHURCH, AND THE BISHOPS FOR THE FAITHFUL ENTRUSTED TO THEIR CARE, ARE THE PROPERLY CONSTITUTED SHEPHERDS OF THE FLOCK OF CHRIST; TO THEM HAS BEEN DIVINELY GIVEN THE RIGHT AND DUTY TO TEACH, RULE, GOVERN AND SANCTIFY THOSE IN THEIR CHARGE. AS PIUS XII STATED, IN HIS ALLOCUTION OF MAY 31, 1954: "BESIDES THE LAWFUL SUCCESSORS OF THE APOSTLES, NAMELY, THE ROMAN PONTIFF FOR THE UNIVERSAL CHURCH AND BISHOPS FOR THE FAITHFUL ENTRUSTED TO THEIR CARE, THERE ARE NO OTHER TEACHERS DIVINELY CONSTITUTED IN THE CHURCH OF CHRIST." (THE AUTHORITY OF THE CHURCH IN TEMPORAL MATTERS, NCWC, WASHINGTON, P. 2). AS LOYAL AND FAITHFUL CATHOLICS WE MUST, THEN, ACCEPT THE AUTHORITATIVE TEACHING OF THE AMERICAN HIERARCHY AND RESPOND TO THEIR CALL TO ACTION.

THE BISHOPS HAVE TAUGHT US THAT "DISCRIMINATION BASED ON THE ACCIDENTAL FACT OF RACE OR COLOR, AND AS SUCH INJURIOUS TO HUMAN RIGHTS REGARDLESS OF PERSONAL QUALITIES OR ACHIEVEMENTS, CANNOT BE RECONCILED WITH THE TRUTH THAT

GOD HAS CREATED ALL MEN WITH EQUAL RIGHTS AND EQUAL DIGNITY." (PARAGRAPH 12). THEY HAVE FURTHER STATED THAT: "LEGAL SEGREGATION, OR ANY FORM OF COMPULSORY SEGREGATION, IN ITSELF AND BY ITS VERY NATURE IMPOSES A STIGMA OF INFERIORITY UPON THE SEGREGATED PEOPLE. EVEN IF THE NOW OBSOLETE COURT DOCTRINE OF 'SEPARATE BUT EQUAL' HAD BEEN CARRIED OUT TO THE FULLEST EXTENT, SO THAT ALL PUBLIC AND SEMI-PUBLIC FACILITIES WERE IN FACT EQUAL, THERE IS NONETHELESS THE JUDGMENT THAT AN ENTIRE RACE, BY THE SOLE FACT OF RACE AND REGARDLESS OF INDIVIDUAL QUALITIES, IS NOT FIT TO ASSOCIATE ON EQUAL TERMS WITH MEMBERS OF ANOTHER RACE. WE CANNOT RECONCILE SUCH A JUDGMENT WITH THE CHRISTIAN VIEW OF MAN'S NATURE AND RIGHTS." (PARAGRAPH 16). FINALLY THEY ADD THAT: "IT IS A MATTER OF HISTORICAL FACT THAT SEGREGATION IN OUR COUNTRY HAS LED TO OPPRESSIVE CONDITIONS AND THE DENIAL OF BASIC HUMAN RIGHTS FOR THE NEGRO. THIS IS EVIDENT IN THE FUNDAMENTAL FIELDS OF EDUCATION, JOB OPPORTUNITY, AND HOUSING." (PARAGRAPH 17).

FACED WITH SUCH AUTHORITATIVE TEACHINGS, THE CATHOLIC LAYMEN, FORMING THIS COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS, WILL TO ANSWER THE CALL TO ACTION OF THE AMERICAN BISHOPS. TOGETHER WITH THE BISHOPS, WE AS CATHOLICS AND SOUTHERN CITIZENS OF THE UNITED STATES, REALIZE THAT THE PROBLEMS WHICH FACE US IN THE DOMAIN OF HUMAN RELATIONS IN THE ARCHDIOCESE "ARE ROOTED IN DECADES, EVEN CENTURIES, OF CUSTOM AND CULTURAL PATTERNS" AND THAT "CHANGES IN (SUCH) DEEP-ROOTED ATTITUDES ARE NOT MADE OVERNIGHT." (PARAGRAPH 22). WE KNOW THAT OUR ACTION MUST BE BOTH PRUDENT AND COURAGEOUS, QUIET, PRAYERFUL AND DECISIVE. BUT ACT WE MUST. WE EQUALLY DEPLORE "A GRADUALISM THAT IS MERELY A CLOAK FOR INACTION" AND A "RASH IMPETUOSITY THAT WOULD SACRIFICE THE ACHIEVEMENTS OF DECADES IN ILL-TIMED AND ILL-CONSIDERED VENTURES." (PARAGRAPH 23). WE MUST "SEIZE THE MANTLE OF LEADERSHIP FROM THE AGITATOR AND THE RACIST," (PARAGRAPH 24), "ROOT OUT OF OUR HEARTS BITTERNESS AND HATRED. THE TASKS WE FACE ARE INDEED DIFFICULT. BUT HEARTS INSPIRED WITH CHRISTIAN LOVE WILL SURMOUNT THESE DIFFICULTIES." (PARAGRAPH 25). IT IS OUR PRAYER THAT THIS COUNCIL OF HUMAN RELATIONS WILL, WITH GOD'S GRACE, MEET FULL FACE THE CHALLENGE OF OUR TIMES AND UNDER THE DIRECTION OF THE MOST REVEREND ARCHBISHOP OF NEW ORLEANS YIELD FRUIT A HUNDRED-FOLD.

WHILE THIS IS A CATHOLIC LAYMEN'S ORGANIZATION, WE INVITE ALL CITIZENS OF GOOD WILL TO CONSIDER THE APPROVAL OF THE OBJECTS OF THE NEWLY CREATED COUNCIL AND TO JOIN WITH THE COUNCIL IN THIS COMMUNITY WIDE UNDERTAKING.

Dear Henry:

We were very pleased to note that the Catholic Council on Human Relations was born on schedule and received reasonably good coverage in the local press. With a board meeting scheduled April 6, you seem to be maintaining your good start and momentum. The quality of your leadership looks good, although some of the names are not known to me.

I presume you will be channeling most of your energy to membership and organization for the time being. When you get to the point of program planning, perhaps we can talk further. I am sending along a few newsletters which will give you some idea of what some councils on human relations are doing here and there. Generally speaking, they function in the area of communication, public education, fact finding and research, trouble shooting and negotiation.

I would urge you to consult with the two staff people in the area of human relations in New Orleans, Mr. Irving Schulman of the Anti-Defamation League, and Mr. Harvey Kearns of the New Orleans Urban League. When you get to the point of special solicitation of non-Catholic membership, I would suggest that you talk with Mrs. Moise Cahn, Mrs. Betty Wisdom, Dr. Al Dent, president of Dillard, and with Mrs. C. W. Coffey.

I will probably be getting back to New Orleans in early May and hope we can have somewhat more time together then.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

Dear Paul:

Thanks for the information you sent me recently, particularly that on the Washington schools. This is just what the Chairman of our Public Relations Committee has been looking for in case we would like to counter Perez's poisonous propaganda to the effect that there has been strife because of the integration in Washington schools.

We started our membership drive today after the Archbishop, Monsignor Plauche and Henican had addressed the pastors of the archdiocese last week. In the meantime we are working on other plans to submit to the Archbishop to keep the program moving. Lets hope we can get it off the ground.

If the Council can raise funds to be able to keep me as Executive Director and if the Directors permit me to attend I'll see you in Atlanta in September.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Paul:

Thanks for sending me General Clay's speech so that I can send to our Directors and committee people. You people certainly put out some fine literature and I am going to take advantage of it, all that I can.

Your wife probably told you that I called you while I was in Atlanta on my way to the convention to discuss your letter regarding whether or not you should establish an office in Louisiana. There is certainly much to be said for this, but I would like to discuss it with you further at the Interagency meeting in Atlanta, which I will attend, if you think you would like to wait that long to get my opinion on it. Incidentally, I haven't received a notice of the meeting yet and would appreciate as much information as you could give me on it, so that I can make reservations in time.

In an attempt to determine what to do and how to do it, we have made a survey of eight other dioceses and I am enclosing a chart which indicates some of the things that have been done in the Catholic community in these particular places. Perhaps this exchange of information will be helpful to both of us.

Hope to see you soon in Atlanta.

Yours sincerely,

Henry

Mr. Henry Cabirac
Catholic Council on Human Relations
P. O. Box 4366
New Orleans, La.

Dear Mr. Cabirac:

A few newsclips and one short list are enclosed; this is the only material we are, at this time, able to supply in answer to your request for information on and "success stories" of desegregated hospitals in the South. We are assuming you are interested only in actual integration of physical hospital facilities - wards, post operative facilities, and such. If your interest extends to desegregated training programs in teaching hospitals, or to hospitals which do admit both white and Negro patients but maintain segregated wards and other facilities, please let us know and we will send you further materials.

The only instances of complete hospital facilities desegregation in the Southern and border states which we are able to document are: V.A. hospitals in all states, and North Carolina's Cerebral Palsy Hospital at Durham. We know of no published surveys in this area; one study of North Carolina hospitals has been completed and should be released at an early date. It was prepared by the North Carolina Advisory Committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights (the Subcommittee on Medical Care. You may want to write Mr. McNeill Smith, 700 Jefferson Standard Building, Greensboro, N.C., for a copy when it is available.). We have a draft of this study in our files, and although extensive quotation would not be in order until after formal publication, you may be interested in the following information taken from the draft:

State-owned Hospitals (other than mental hospitals):

North Carolina Cerebral Palsy Hospital, Durham: No segregation in any form.

North Carolina Orthopedic Hospital, Gastonia: Some degree of desegregation (in post-surgical facilities, primarily).

North Carolina Memorial Hospital; Adult beds for non-whites are all on one floor; obstetrical and pediatric allotments for whites and non-whites are on the same floor (as I interpret the report) but may be segregated in some wise (this point is not clearly stated).

The four state tuberculosis hospitals; "Every degree of segregation and desegregation."

Other than state-owned hospitals;

Quoting from the study; "In those institutions now receiving white and Negro patients, segregation usually prevails according to wing, corridor, ward, or on some area basis. In certain of these, space may be sued interchangeably for white or for colored, but never simultaneously save in the premature nurseries."

One of the enclosed newsclips pertains to litigation which was this summer brought against segregated James Walker Hospital, Wilmington, N.C.

We are currently involved in a survey of teaching hospitals which may turn up more information relating to the area of segregation practices within the hospitals. We will send you any information we obtain.

Sincerely,

Marge Manderson
Administrative Secretary

Enclosures

Newselips and other records indicate that the following Southern hospitals are to some extent desegregated:

1. Variety Children's Hospital, Dade County, Florida
2. Mercy Hospital, Charlotte, North Carolina (Catholic)
3. Charlotte (North Carolina) Memorial Hospital
4. The University of North Carolina Hospital
5. Charlotte (North Carolina) Rehabilitation and Spastics Hospitals
6. North Carolina Cerebral Palsy Hospital, Durham
7. Central Carolina Convalescent Hospital, Greensboro, North Carolina
8. All V. S. hospitals, in all states
9. Catholic hospitals in Charleston, S. C.; Raleigh, N.C.; San Antonio, Texas (Also border-state St. Louis, Mo.).

Dear Mrs. Mauderson

Thank you for the information regarding the desegregation of hospitals. It appears that efforts in this field have lagged behind those in the school system. It is our hope that our Southern Field Office will be able to speed up these efforts primarily in the Catholic field and of course this will influence the other secular and religious hospitals. Regarding your comment on which cities have desegregated their Catholic hospitals you could add at least one in Atlanta and all those in Washington D.C.

Please inform me if there is any help I can give you any time in the future.

Dear Paul:

Your request has been forwarded to both C. Ellis Henican and Matt, for permission to send you our mailing list. Perhaps you aren't seeking the names of the people in our Catholic Council of Human Relations in New Orleans, but just the people with whom I have communicated in the south, or the rest of the country from other various interracial Catholic councils. We have over 400 signed applications in our New Orleans council, totaling over 600 people as some of these are couples, whereas, I don't think that we would have 400 names to give you from the National Catholic Conference.

You probably realize that since I have just started my job as of the first of October as the Southern Field Director, that I haven't made very many contacts yet, so I would have to secure the majority of these names from Matt.

As soon as I get clearance from both Henican and Matt, and hear from you, I will forward you whatever information I can.

See you in San Francisco next week.

Yours sincerely,

Henry

Dear Henry:

It was good to be with you at the recent conference at Waveland. I was poking around in New Orleans Monday and Tuesday and would have liked to see you, but there simply wasn't time to do everything before I left the city.

We are preparing a mild promotional campaign in connection with our monthly New South magazine and we are anxious to obtain lists of persons whom we can assume to be interested in the general subject matter. If it is possible and ethical, we would like to receive copies of any mailing lists of members of the National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice - or would it be better to restrict it to Southern members? If we secure the names, they will be solicited by us and sent a sample copy of New South. We will not mention the way the names came into our hands. We plan to do this with a number of concerned organizations. We also plan to exchange subscription lists with such magazines as The Progressive, New Republic, etc..

Let me know your thinking.

Sincerely,

Dear Paul:

In an effort to get the Bishops of some southern Dioceses to desegregate all of the Church facilities as quickly as possible, I would appreciate, if you have the information, trying to send me which public facilities have been desegregated in the cities where we have made surveys as indicated on the chart which you received, plus Atlanta and Dallas.

It is my hope that by showing how far ahead the Church in these cities, excluding Atlanta, has been of the rest of the community, that possibly we might encourage the Bishops in other areas where less has been done to move ahead. Regardless of what the situation is, it would be interesting to compare results. I realize that the civil community doesn't have such things as retreat houses and diocesan organizations, but whatever information you can supply, I would appreciate.

Thanks.

Please add Mr. Norman Melun, 4330 Ridge Road, Dallas 29, Texas, to your mailing list as he is the president of the Dallas Catholic Interracial Council. Since the entire Dallas Catholic facilities have been desegregated for some years, the main objectives of their Council should be to reach more Catholics and also to work on the various community problems. When I was in Dallas recently, I talked to Clarence Laws and second only to registering voters, is improving employment opportunity for the Negro, therefore, I would appreciate you sending him your pamphlet entitled "The Negro and Employment Opportunities in the South", published by the Houston Council on Human Relations. Thanks.

Dear Paul:

It is my understanding that the Southern Regional Council is trying to make up its mind whether or not to staff an organization in Mississippi at this time. Although I am much nearer then you are, I wouldn't give you an opinion as to what should be done. I am sure that every bit of information you have will help you reach a decision and, therefore, I am enclosing a copy of a letter sent to me regarding our program.

It has been several weeks since I wrote you regarding our desire to add a staff person to encourage voter registration in southern Louisiana and east Texas. Can you give us any indication at this time as to what the situation is and also, let me know whether you need any additional information.

Has there been any change in the plans to hold our next Inter-Agency meeting in January on the 11th and 12th, in Washington, D.C. This will probably be an ideal time for me because there is a tentative program planning meeting of the National Catholic Conference on January 13th and 14th, in New York.

Whatever information you can give me on these matters would be appreciated.

Dear Mr. Cabirac

Recently I received notice that your office had been opened in New Orleans. I do not know how my name got on the list for receiving the circular of notification, but I am very happy that it did.

Would it be within your line of duty to furnish me with some information on the Conference? I am very much interested in interracial justice and wish to help in any way that I can.

Yours very truly,

Mr. Henry Cabirac
Catholic Council on Human Relations
1046 Baronne Street, Suite 2
New Orleans 13, La.

Dear Henry:

There has been no change in the Interagency Meeting in Washington January 11 and 12. I look forward to seeing you there.

Concerning your desire to add a staff person to encourage voter registration in Southern Louisiana and East Texas, the voter registration project here is not yet staffed and operating. We hope that it will be so shortly after the first of the year. You should remember that its very existence is not yet supposed to be known. No requests for funds can be processed until the office is staffed. This will not be handled through SRC but through the separate project office. If you would care to write more details, however, I will pass them on to the project staff when it is in being. I would expect that they would need more data on the amount of money you would need, the kind of activities such a staff person would conduct, whether he would concentrate in certain communities, etc.. It would seem to me that the idea would certainly be well worth considering.

We are not thinking in terms of staffing anything in Mississippi at this time. A Mississippi meeting was held recently involving many of the same people you met at the Dillard conference in June plus others. They are establishing some machinery for continuing consultations but are a long way from setting up anything very formal or thinking in terms of staff. Thank you for the letter from Mrs. Baroni. If you have no objection I will pass it on to those in Mississippi who are working in this direction. Bishop Brunini is a member of the steering committee that the Mississippi people have established. Its secretary is Dr. Dan Beittel, president of Tougaloo College in Tougaloo, Mississippi, outside of Jackson.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling

Dear Paul:

It was nice to see you at the NAIRO Convention in San Francisco. Regarding your question as to when I will be in Texas, I am going to make a two day trip to Dallas and Fort Worth either next Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday, and I will be in Galveston, Houston and San Antonio later in November or early December. If this coincides with your visits, please let me know.

Regarding our discussion on our desire to conduct a campaign to register Negro voters in southern Louisiana and eastern Texas, we would be in an excellent position to handle this because better than 25% of the entire Catholic Negro population of the country lives in this area.

One of the advantages our organization, which is tax exempt, can offer is that it is bi-racial and influences the community more than an all white or all Negro organization. An additional benefit of this would be once the large Catholic Negro community is awakened, they would probably bring additional pressure to bear on the Bishops in the various dioceses.

If we could secure funds to add a staff person to devote his time exclusively to this, we would probably be able to yield profitable results. When you realize that out of a potential of 140,000 Negro voters in Metropolitan New Orleans, only 35,000 are registered, you can realize what a job there is to be done in the area outside of New Orleans.

If you would like additional information, please let me know and I'll be happy to furnish you with it.

Yours sincerely,
Henry

Dear Paul:

Thank you for the information regarding the voter registration program. I will keep this matter confidential until I hear otherwise from you. In the meantime, I am beginning to prepare a presentation which I hope to be able to submit to you in the near future.

Regarding Mrs. Baroni's letter, I have already sent a copy to Bishop Brunini, Rabbi Mantindand, Aaron Henry and Joseph Cross. I was in Jackson and Natchez the beginning of last week and had an opportunity to talk to Bishop Brunini, the school superintendent, the editor of the Catholic newspaper and Mrs. Baroni in Natchez. From the information that I have, both from people in Mississippi and outside, I would say that you would probably be wise not trying to staff an organization there now, as I am afraid it might not last too long.

You will find enclosed a list of names which you might find helpful. I was in Houston and Galveston two weeks ago and met with some of these people who have had somewhat of an informal Council existing for a while and appear eager to organize formally. When I was in Jackson and Natchez this past week, I picked up the following names, but had no opportunity of verifying their interest or attitude: Mrs. Felix Webster, Jackson, Miss.; Mr. Wilson Minor, Jackson, Miss.; Mr. Guy Knolbloch, Jackson, Miss.; Mr. John L. Kennedy, Holly Springs, Miss.; Mr. Joel Blass, Williams, Miss.; Mr. Joe Wroten, Greenville, Miss.

I hope to be able to get some names for you from the Dallas area in the near future.

I'll see you at the Southern Inter-Agency meeting and in the meantime, happy New Year.

Yours sincerely,

Henry

Forgive me for failing to send you the names of Catholics in Houston who are interested in forming a Council. While I was there recently, I had the opportunity to spend several hours with Mrs. Dumbauld and Steve Wilson, Executive Director of the American Friends Service Committee. I have asked Vincent Williams, who will apparently lead any Catholic Council that is formed in Houston to work as closely as possible with both of these organizations.

When we meet in Washington, I would welcome your opinion on the situation in Texas.

Happy New Year.

In order for us to determine what would be the best use of it, I would like to send a copy to all of the members of our Public Relations Committee, and therefore, would appreciate you sending me 25 copies.

This letter will probably reach you after you have arrived in New Orleans and I have seen you, but I know it is more convenient for you to have a written reminder and therefore, I have used this means to do so.

I would also like to have a map similar to the one on the wall at the Potomic Institute indicating the percentage of Negro population in various areas of the South. If there is any cost, please send us an invoice.

Dear Paul:

Matt sent me a copy of a letter the other day from Bill Osborne indicating that he had written Bishop Schexnayder to get his reaction to a conference which he would propose holding for some southern bishops who had desegregated some of their facilities and others who hadn't, to stimulate such an action. He indicated in the letter that he had received encouragement from you and, of course, I can understand your reason in doing this, however, I am somewhat afraid that Bill's actions may alienate some of the more conservative southern bishops because they would tend to establish a relationship between Yankee interference and progress in the racial field which, of course, would be extremely harmful.

As I believe I have mentioned to you in the past, it is my belief, and I think you agree, that eliminating the racial barriers in the parochial schools of New Orleans is a bottleneck for the remaining southern dioceses which haven't done it and now that we have broken this log jam, it is my intention to contact the remaining southern bishops one by one, hoping that we will be able to get something started. I might also add another danger of Bill's move is that it might give some southern bishops who haven't moved a feeling of consolation when they see that there are a fair number of others who haven't and may return to their own dioceses more determined not to do anything than they were when they left. As I mentioned, my technique would be trying to knock them off one by one until there would be only a few remaining and then hold such a conference, preferably under the Southern Field Service's auspices.

I would appreciate your reaction to my thoughts on this matter because I value your advice.

We have been able to talk Archbishop Rummel into removing the racial barriers in all of the Catholic schools in the Diocese of New Orleans, from kindergarten through the 12th grade, and the order will be implemented by Archbishop Cody. However, it would be harmful to us to let the public know we were instrumental in doing this.

If New Orleans isn't blown off the map by then, I'll see you in Atlanta.

Yours sincerely,

Henry

Henry is a cantrom fellow. On the other hand, I don't think this is our business, either to encourage or to discourage to agree with Cabrae or with Osborne. I think our position should be to help Osborne if the Catholics decide this is a good thing to do.

Dear Henry:

I somehow failed to raise with you during the Interagency Meeting the Foster matter about which you wrote on March 26.

I certainly have no quarrel with the line of reasoning you put forward. We did tell Bill Osborne that we thought this would be "a useful project." This was due partly to courtesy and partly because we did not see the objections or difficulties which you point out. I did not see this as an example of "Yankee interference," since it seems to be aimed exclusively at Southern persons and personnel, with St. John's serving as host.

I hope we have done no disservice to your own strategy and planning.

Dear Paul:

You had asked me to let you know what, if anything, was being planned to prepare the community for public school desegregation in New Orleans. On Saturday April 14, I had a conference with Henican and he feels that since Archbishop Rummel, with Archbishop Cody's assistance, is handling the Catholic school situation so firmly, or is that an understatement, that we should shift our emphasis to helping to prepare the entire community. In fact, he specifically suggested getting the names of the officers of the New Orleans Hotel Association so that we might meet with them in order to try to get something going here, and also to work on the Darwin Fenner Committee who last year was able to achieve peace and law and order in the community for the 1961 opening of public schools. These matters will be discussed at our directors meeting and I will be able to let you know more after the meeting.

Regarding Bill Osborne asking you whether or not you thought it was a good idea to get the southern bishops together, I realize that as a matter of diplomacy you had to answer yes and I am sure it wouldn't have made much difference one way or another what you said. The only' thing I would like to ask you to do is to refrain from encouraging him on this as we believe that for one thing it would be detremental to the Southern Fueld Service to have this meeting come off outside our organization, but even more important, we do believe that even the suggestion of this meeting to some southern bishops could do harm because it was suggested by an outsider. You may think this to be extreme, but just

Thanks for the report on the organizational meeting of the Mississippi Council on Human Relations. I was happy to see that you survived for the sake of your dear wife and the benefit of furthering progress in human relations in the south.

It was indeed unfortunate that Bishop Brunini didn't attend. I am even more sorry that the unfortunate publicity revealed his name because now I am sure he will be subject to criticism and feel less free to do whatever he could within the Church in Mississippi to further racial justice. Regarding Father Scanlon's absence, as I told you, he would have come, but his office said that he was out of town.

Dear Henry:

Thank you for the Interagency minutes. We will process them and get them out as quickly as possible. The Interagency Conference does consist of regional and national organizations with a concern for problems in the field of race relations, although a number of the agencies also have program interests in other areas. We have from time to time touched on matters relating to religious tensions such as anti-Semitism in the South, religious bigotry in the presidential election, etc.. It would certainly be quite appropriate for the group to discuss religious differences and I would not think this too "controbersial" for the Interagency Conference. It may well be complex, but I think we could agree on a topic for discussion of workable size and scope.

You will find enclosed the minutes of the Southern Interagency Meeting. I realize that they are longer than the average minutes that are sent out, but I would rather have more in it and you can condense it if you want, rather than to be lacking anything.

Paul, here is a matter on which I would like your advice. Are our various southern agencies limited to the racial field, or would they be broad enough to include discussions of religious differences? Actually, what I have in mind is the possibility of increasing cooperation among the various groups by ironing out some of the misunderstanding that may exist among the various religious and secular organizations. On the other hand, this may prove so complex and controversial that it might do more harm than good at this time. Please give this some thought and let me know how you feel about it.

Dear Paul:

Happy to hear that you will be able to take your trip to Europe, you lucky dog. Probably half of the joy will be in thinking of us peasants slaving away while you are enjoying yourself over there. Anyway, have a nice trip.

Irv Schulman asked me to request you to try to persuade Gladys Cahn to postpone the announcement of the formation of the New Orleans Community Relations Council until after schools open in order to try to avoid making it appear that it is an organization formed to handle a crisis that we hope will not exist. He believes that you exert a lot of influence over her and could do this easily. Incidentally, I am in agreement with Irv on this idea.

You get around probably more than anyone else in intergroup relations in the south and therefore have a fairly good idea as to what, if any, misunderstandings between various religious groups, or between religious and secular groups, might be preventing the maximum progress in achieving racial justice. My idea for discussing these differences was not merely for the sake of enlightening others on religious beliefs, but primarily to eliminate anything that might prevent all of us from reaching our common goals. I would appreciate you letting me know whether or not you think there are matters worthy of discussion.

Yours sincerely,

Henry

We were pleased to receive your comments on our progress in our undertaking. Your letter was read to our group and we were gratified, especially in the contents of the second paragraph of your letter dealing with individual bishops' interpretation of the policy of the Church.

We are desirous of having you come to Pensacola again, at your convenience, so that we can compare notes and get some further advice from you. I have received an answer to my letter to the Bishop which is very explicit in his refusal to consider integrating our schools. We would like to know where to go from here. I am sure that your presence would inspire more of our interested persons to meet with us. If you can arrange such a trip, we would appreciate your advising us a bit beforehand so that we can have time to pass the word. Dear Leslie:

Your letter of explanation to me sounds just like a letter that I would write. I realize that the last thing in the world that we would want is to become embroiled in an argument with unfriendly people. What I had in mind was only successful legal action, but then I can see that you have considered this and are using it where it is effective.

You will find enclosed a copy of a letter from the Students Nonviolent Coordinating Committee which has indicated a desire to help us with " an impending crisis." Although we are eager to have all legitimate intergroup organizations such as theirs work in New Orleans, I am just wondering if you might help me urge them not to move in here prior to the opening of schools. You will find enclosed a copy of the minutes of our Public Relations Committee which I think indicates the low pitched type of program we are attempting to use and is apparently proving successful. Would it be possible for you to talk to these people and try to dissuade them from coming here before September? If I were to write such a letter, I am afraid it would be misconstrued.

Please let me know what you think of this.

Dear Sir:

The Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee has recieved a letter from Matthew Ahmann of the NCCIJ telling us of the Southern Field Service that has been established in New Orleans and asking that one of our field representatives get in touch with you. At this time SNCC does not have any of its staff in your area due to a number of things such as a lack of funds and field personnel, not to mention a distinct distaste for "criminal anarchy" charges. The way things shape up now, however, I am planning to be in New Orleans sometime around the first part of July.

We have had a number of requests from students in your area that SNCC send in a field representative to work with them. We are also cognizant of the impending crisis that integration of the Catholic schools in September might bring. SNCC feels that I might be able to be of some service in the area because I am a Catholic.

These plans are, of course,subject to change at any time so I can't say definitely that I will be there. I do look forward to meeting and talking to you as you would undoubtedly be of great aid to us.

I do not know what action, if any, he has found it possible to initiate. He did say it would receive careful consideration and I expect to hear from him this week.

On the matter of the New Orleans Community Relations Council, I am not sufficiently sure that I agree with you and Irv on this matter to intervene with Gladys Cahn. There is always some reason why the time isn't right and these things can drag on forever. I will, however, call Gladys sometime this week to "check on progress of developments" and at that time I will advise hereagainst any public announcement until the group is fully organized with selected leadership and respectable strength. I think it quite possible that this may achieve the same purpose.

Dear Henry:

Les and I have discussed the matter you raised with him concerning the proposal of SNCC to initiate activity in the New Orleans area.

I really don't think there is any way we can help you on this. It would be artificial for us to take the initiative in raising the matter and would rather clearly indicate you had contacted us about it. I'm afraid that any such suggestion from us would not be likely to be effective and would be probably "misconstrued," as you put it. These youngsters are eager and ambitious and feel the need to be involved in everything, and have direct contact with student groups everywhere. Adults can and should counsel with them on the spot and when asked, but counsels of moderation and caution generally meet with little favor.

If I were you I would write Hansen indicating your belief that the parochial school situation is moving well and does not require assistance and expressing your willingness to meet with him if he does come to New Orleans. If we have an opportunity to comment informally on the New Orleans situation while talking with SNCC representatives, we will try and do so.

On a matter raised in an earlier letter, I have not been conscious that "misunderstandings between various religious groups, or between religious and secular groups" are handicapping cooperation among the various religious and secular agencies working in intergroup relations. I believe that the important thing is for each group to understand the motivations, the goals, and the limitations of all groups. I think these things are fairly well understood among the groups participating in the Southern Interagency meetings. I believe that you made a good contribution in this direction by speaking to this group last time about the structure of the Church and your method of operation. In other words, I think topics along this line would be appropriate, but I have not myself noted any particular need in this direction.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling

Dear Paul,

Thanks for working so hard to get some prominent non-Catholics to call on Archbishop Toolen. This should definitely help the situation. You will find enclosed a copy of Dr. Boyd's letter which I had intended sending you in my last letter.

By now you have probably spoken to Gladys Cahn and learned that we are proceeding with the formation of the Community Relations Council in all seriousness and hope to have our organizational meeting, which will not be publicized, by the 26th of this month. She has probably told you that Ted Baptist, Dr. Burns, Mrs. Keller, and others have been selected as officers of the group. This is fine as far as I'm concerned as long as it is not publicized before the opening of schools in order to avoid the impression that it is an organization formed to fight an impending crisis. Knowing Perez and his associates, they could very well use the knowledge of the formation of this organization to their advantage in stirring up trouble in September if it was widely publicized.

When I think of you and Midge enjoying yourselves on your trip to Europe, I turn green, but this could quickly be remedied by a night in the French Quarter the next time you are in New Orleans.

Yours sincerely,

Henry

Dear Henry:

Mr. King, the Chairman of the School Assistance Committee in Pensacola, has indicated the Committee does not feel it appropriate to approach the Archbishop for fear that their law and order function will be misunderstood. They do not want to give the appearance of favoring desegregating anything.

This is unfortunate, as the Commistee has real status in the community.

We have, however, succeeded in activating certain individuals, ministers and otherwise, who are not Catholics and who will either write or telephone the Archbishop. I talked with Jack Sisson by telephone this morning. He is one of my best contacts, as he is yours, in Pensacola. He indicates that he has been able to stimulate some letters from non-Catholics on this point.

I wish we could do more, but I am off to Europe tomorrow and time has run out.

Goodbye,

Dear Paul,

Thanks for your suggestions on Hansen. You are right about it looking awkward for you to try to give them any advice on New Orleans, but if the opportunity presents itself, I would appreciate you briefing them on what the situation is here. My personal feeling is that New Orleans is potentially the most explosive situation in the South if we permitted it to get out of hand, but if we carry it out properly things could go smoothly. Before writing you, I had already written Hansen telling him that I would be glad to meet with him and asked him to notify me when he was coming.

Recently I noted that the proportion of people living in urban areas in Mississippi to those of rural areas was rather low - 37% if I'm not mistaken. Do you know if there has ever been a study made of the proportion of the population living in metropolitan areas as compared with the rural areas in the various states in the South in relationship to the progress that has been made? I realize that this is only one of the many factors having a bearing on the situation, but it does seem as if there would be some importance in it.

Yours sincerely,

Henry

Dear Paul:

How was your trip? Did you find any discriminatory practices in Europe which would call for the establishment of a Council on Human Relations?

Getting down to serious business, I would like for you to recall my request for your opinion on whether or not it would be beneficial to discuss certain items of tension or friction that might be preventing the maximum of cooperation between the various agency groups. There are two at the moment that come to my mind. You probably missed much of the storm of protest that was raised over the Supreme Court decision to eliminate prayer from all public schools, but it was one of the hottest things in years. Southern senators who have probably never been in a church in their life are saying, "They put the Negroes in our schools and have taken God out."

In the opinion of many, the Jewish agencies who have pushed this thing have won a battle, but possibly lost the war. This particular ruling has given the White Citizens Councils and other hate groups just the ammunition they have been looking for to prove that is only the atheistic groups who are striving for racial justice.

Another item which I don't think is causing as much friction in the south as in the North, but perhaps is making some southern bishops resentful of certain agencies, is the drive for a bill for federal aid to education which would exclude religious schools.

What is your opinion as to whether or not we would create greater understanding and harmony if we discussed these issues? Let me make this unmistakenly clear. If you don't think that we would be increasing the effectiveness of our total movement, i.e., the effort of all southern human relations agencies, I would prefer not to have these matters discussed.

Dear Henry:

It is my opinion that it would be useful for the Southern Interagency Conference to discuss openly some of the differing agency policies and tactics concerning the issues you mention. Although the group exists primarily for the purpose of closer coordination concerning race relations in the South, we are, after all, concerned with all inter-group issues and have from time to time in the past considered matters of inter-religious tensions, etc..

I think our group is certainly sufficiently sophisticated that such a discussion would have positive rather than negative results on our talks.

I would suggest, however, that we save these discussions for our second meeting in late winter. I note that at least one or possibly two of our Jewish representatives will not be present for the September meeting.

Our trip to Europe was fabulous. I am engaged now in talking with foundations about support of a European Southern Regional Council that would operate in southern France, southern Italy and Greece, and for which agency I would serve as traveling field representative.

Sincerely,

You've probably been asked to give your opinion on a conference in Florida to discuss the extremist situation. What do you think of this? Do you think it would be profitable at this time?

I received a request from the National Council of Jewish Women in New York to send them the minutes of our next Southern Inter-Agency Meeting. What is your opinion of this.

If you think it will cause too much inconvenience, please let me know and I can bring my own can of sardines for our Friday luncheon at the Waluhaji, but if it won't, I would appreciate them serving me some kind of fish. These minority groups create all kinds of problems.

See you soon.

Because time is limited, I would appreciate you sending a copy of the letter I hope you will write me to Matt at the National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice, #21 West Superior St., Chicago 10, Illinois.

Do you think that you will have broiled lobster or Oysters Rockefeller for our Friday meal at this coming Southern Interagency meeting?

We have not been asked our opinion on any conference in Florida to discuss the extremist situation and it would be hard to give one without more information.

The National Council of Jewish Women is supposed to be a participating agency in the SIC. We regularly send minutes to them in care of Miss Hannah Stein, who is listed on our books as Executive Director at their New York Office?! What should we do to clarify this with them?

The Waluhaje Hotel assures me that some form of sea animal will be available at the Friday luncheon. There is a nearby grocery store just in case.

Dear Mr. Cabirac:

Mrs. Frances Pauley, Director of the Georgia Council on Human Relations, has recently been apprised of two Catholic laymen in Savannah, Georgia, whom you might be interested in contacting.

They are:

1. Mr. John W. Ahern
   908 West DeRenne

2. Mr. Percy L. Miller
   507 W. 36th Street.

We don't know whether Mr. Ahern is a Negro or is white. Mr. Miller is a Negro; Mrs. Pauley's sources advise that he would have influence with the Bishop.

I hope this information doesn't reach you so late that it is useless. Perhaps, if you are on the road, your office will forward it on to you.

Thanks for the Miami names. I hope to eventually go there so that I can make use of them. Would it be possible for you to give me the names of a few Catholics in Birmingham, Alabama?

Paul, after giving it long consideration I don't think it would be a good idea to bring up the federal aid to religious schools at our Southern Inter-Agency meeting, but it might be well to discuss the Supreme Court ruling on the prayer in public schools, if there is room on the agenda.

Odile told me today that she secured box seats for you and Midge for her father's carnival ball which will be February 13, 1963. I do hope that you will be able to take advantage of this opportunity.

Dear Paul:

Matt telephoned me yesterday to discuss several matters with me and one that he mentioned was the fact that we have a proposal pending with the Field Foundation. Thus far we have managed to survive but don't have the kind of funds that we really need to operate properly. As an example we don't have a sufficient travel budget for me this year and in order to really do this thing properly we should have another man. We would certainly appreciate your putting in a good word for us with Field, if it is possible for you to do so.

You had asked me to remind you about checking on the "moonshine" in a keg about a month before attending the Southern Interagency meeting in Atlanta, but as long as I am thinking of it, I thought I would mention it to you now. The only problem here for me would be getting the stuff back to New Orleans. I could just see the revenuers picking me up for possession of illegal whiskey. However being from an old French New Orleans family, there is a bit of that smuggling blood in me and if it were at all possible I would certainly like to give it a try.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Paul:

You are invited to serve on the Southern Field Service Program Planning Committee for the Southern Leadership conference which will be held sometime next summer. Our first meeting will be Tuesday October 30 at 8:00 p.m. at 6211 S. Tonti. The following is a suggested agenda.

1) Purpose of the conference. 2) Place at which it is to be held. 3) Securing the permission of the ordinary of that particular diocese. 4) Resource people to be invited. 5) Subject matter to be included. 6) People to be invited to work on the program planning committee.

Forgive the short notice for this particular meeting but we had some difficulty determining when it could be held and we promise to give you more notice in the future. For those of you who live out of town we would welcome your comments and suggestions.

Yours sincerely,

Henry Cabirac

Dear Henry:

On names in Birmingham, about the best I can do is Father Edward L. Foster, 3160 Highland Drive, and Father Phillip Schaeffer, Holy Family Church, 1910 - 19th Street, Ensley, Birmingham 8. Father Foster, particularly, has been very active in this area in the Catholic community. Norman Jimerson of the Alabama Council tells me that there has been some police harassement of Catholics because of their integrated churches in some of the roughest churches in Birmingham. On a trip to Birmingham, you should contact Jimerson at Room 1224 Comer Building, AL-pine 2-2722.

I have had no luck with the keg yet, but I am trying.

Thank you for the appointment to the Program Planning Committee. I will try and make an occasional meeting to show that I mean well.

About the Mardi Gras, I'm afraid you can't count on us as yet. We hope to come, but will not know until I can see whether I will have a normal business trip over that way at around the right time. What with a new car, Christmas, etc., we simply will not be able to handle the financing of both of us on a special trip. If you can hold the seats awhile fine, if not go ahead and turn them over and we will understand.

We do appreciate your thinking of us.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling

Dear Committee Member:

You will find enclosed the unedited minutes and the agenda of our first Program Planning Committee meeting for a Southern Field Service Leadership Conference.

In order to try to make the meeting as graphic as possible for those who missed it, we have felt that it was better that you should get the minutes in such a form in order to bring you the true atmosphere.

You will note that our next meeting will be held Tuesday November 20 at 8:00 p.m. at 6211 S. Tonti Street to review the brief that has been prepared for Archbishop Cody and subsequently Hallinan and Lacey, to approve the budget for the conference to discuss the suggested resource people and to refine, if necessary, our approach to Archbishop Cody. Another question which should be raised at this time is if C. Ellis Henican, president of the New Orleans Council is going to be invited to serve on the liaison committee should the New Orleans Council, assuming we hold this in New Orleans, act as co-host with the Southern Field Service.

Please consider this your notice of your next meeting and the tentative agenda. If for any reason you will not be able to attend, please inform us.

Yours sincerely,

Henry Cabirac

Dear Paul:

Congratulations on your new position. Ted Baptist read us your letter at the Community Relations Council meeting, Monday November 5 announcing that you had decided to move to Washington. Needless to say, I am happy for you but regret the fact that we will not have an opportunity to work as closely as we did previously.

You need not reply at this time because I am sure that you are just getting settled, but I am still looking forward to you and Midge being able to make the carnival ball. You had better take advantage of this exuse to get back to New Orleans, because you will not be visiting here as much as you did previously.

Good luck in your new assignment and I will probably see you at the NAIRO convention.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Paul:

Thanks for the Birmingham names you sent. I am quite eager to visit there to see just what can be done as I understand that they have a bishop that is more progressive than Archbishop Toolen, although he is under Archbishop Toolen.

In reply to your question as to whether I can hold the seats until you can determine whether you and Midge can come, I can.

CONFIDENTIAL

1961-1962

This report will present the facts, both public and behind the scenes, that led up to the desegragation of parochial schools of the Archdiocese of New Orleans, and of the effect its accomplishment has had on New Orleans and on the rest of the South. It will point up the role that the New Orleans Catholic Council on Human Relations and the Southern Field Service have had on these developments.

Introduction: As you know, the desegregation of New Orleans parochial schools is now an accomplished fact. Despite some minor disturbances and harassment by a radical group, the admittance of Negroes to previously all white parochial schools has been accepted with relatively little ill effect on the community or the parochial school system. Enrollment is now approximately 98% of last year's peak enrollment, and this figure is expected to rise one or two per cent before the end of the year.

Developments leading up to desegregation were involved and the New Orleans Catholic Council on Human Relations and Southern Field Service played an important part in making desegregation a reality.

I. THE CATHOLIC COUNCIL AND ITS ROLE IN MOTIVATING ARCHBISHOP RUMMEL TO DESEGREGATE THE SCHOOLS

A. The Council was organized in March, 1961 with the help and guidance of National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice and, specifically, of Jack Nelson, one of its officers. We were able to secure as our president, C. Ellis Henican, prominent attorney and a member of the power structure of New Orleans. Msgr. Plauche, Chancellor of the Archdiocese, is Chaplain of the Council, and I am its Executive Director. Mr. Henican, Msgr. Plauche and I devoted a considerable amount of time to the selection of our Board of Directors, believing that it must contain a broad spectrum of the population, including some of the members of the power structure, if we were going to be effective. This done, we conducted a survey of what had been done in other southern dioceses and compiled a report of this for the Directors, usging that we approach Archbishop Rummel to desegregate the schools immediately.

In August of 1961, after securing the support of our Directors, the Chaplain, the Chairman and I met with Archbishop Rummel in an attempt to persuade him to desegregate the schools. We had no immediate success, but our Chairman did not bite his tongue in telling the Archbishop of the urgency of desegregating the Catholic schools. Although Archbishop Rummel did not appear to be influenced at the meeting by what we said, we learned from the Chancellor afterward that he had adopted many of Mr. Henican's ideas and this appeared to be the beginning of the turning point.

Months before this meeting and following it, I devoted much of my time to encouraging individual Council members to write letters, make telephone calls, personal visits and send wires urging the hierarchy to issue the order, but not to identify themselves as Council members in order to avoid the accusation of being a pressure group.

At one of our early meetings with the archbishop, he indicated that the reason he was not favorably disposed to school desegregation at that time was because his Superintendent of Schools had not recommended it. Although we believe that the ordinary himself should have seen the need to take action, we felt that under the circumstances, we must try to favorably influence the superintendent and in turn get him to recommend it to the archbishop.

Knowing the Superintendent of Schools feared possible enactment of punitive state laws, designed to stop the Louisiana Catholic schools from desegregating, we discussed the matter with a well disposed member of the state legislature. After ascertaining his judgment of possible state action and knowing him to favor immediate desegregation, I arranged a meeting for him with the Superintendent of Schools in November, 1961. He was able to favorably influence the superintendent by telling him that it did not appear that the state would enact punitive measures because 1) the people of the City of New Orleans had indicated to the rest of the state their desire to keep the public schools open even though they looked with distaste on the token desegregation; i.e., the entrance of the four Negro children into the New Orleans schools, and therefore the state had drawn the battle line at New Orleans, and 2) at this particular time the state's treasury was at an all time low and the state administration was far more docile because they were trying to secure a favorable settlement from the federal government in the Tidelands issue.

B. Between November, 1961 and February, 1962 we met a number of times with the archbishop and sent him many further recommendations on the desirability of desegregation and the best methods to successfully bring it about. Our various Council committees worked hard preparing these recommendations and second gressing the moves being made by our opposition, working just as hard to discourage the archbishop from issuing the desegregation order. One of their greatest talking points was the possibility following desegregation of a tremendous loss of parochial pupils to the public schools. To offset this argument, Mr. Henican met with Judge J. Skelly Wright to discuss the possibility of his ordering desegregation of all six grades of the public schools. If this were done at the same time that parochial schools were desegregated, we felt that pupil loss would be no problem. From this time on we maintained liaison with Judge Wright and as a result feel that we were responsible for his order to desegregate all six grades in all public schools. Although this order was revoked, the net effect was for greater progress, and it certainly helped the cause.

C. In November of 1961, at a meeting of the Chancellor, the Superintendent of Schools, Archbishop Rummel and myself, the archbishop declared that he would desegregate the Catholic schools. From then on it was mostly a matter of getting him to issue the order. At this meeting he authorized me to meet with the Justice Department, inform them of our contemplated move and secure their cooperation in whatever manner possible.

In January of 1962, when I met with Mr. Burke Marshall in Washington, D. C., he assured me of the Justice Department's support and I reported this to the archbishop.

In order to reinforce Archbishop Rummel's desire to desegregate the schools, we were able to get our Priest Advisory Committee to present him a written recommendation that this be done. However, it was not until February, 1962 that we secured his firm commitment to desegregate, and it was not until March 27 that the desegregation order was made public.

II. STEPS TAKEN TO IMPLEMENT THE ORDER

A. Following are the minutes of two Public Relations Committee meetings, one held March 27, the day that the order was made public, and the other, June 7. During this time Archbishop Cody, who had been placed in charge of education by Archbishop Rummel, met on two other occasions with the Public Relations Committee for advice on various matters which needed immediate attention. The Public Relations Committee is composed of four newspaper men, including the editor of Catholic Action, two public relations directors for hospitals, a public relations director of a university, a business man, Father Romogosa who is Director of the Bureau of Information for the Archdiocese, a doctor of psychology and a doctor of sociology. These people were selected because of their professional competence and their dedication to racial justice.

"The Public Relations Committee of the Catholic Council on Human Relations, Archdiocese of New Orleans, met Tuesday evening, March 27, 1962, with the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Charles J. Plauche, Chancellor and Council Chaplain, to discuss developments that may follow the decision to open all Catholic elementary and high schools in the archdiocese to all Catholic children."

"Msgr. Plauche described the clergy conference that afternoon at which Archbishop Joseph F. Rummel announced the decision and Coadjutor Archbishop John P. Cody gave preliminary details on methods of implementing it, advising priests to be patient and kindly in discussing the matter with individual parishioners but cautioning them not to expatiate on it in sermons or at parish meetings and not to give statements to representatives of news media, particularly from outside New Orleans."

"Msgr. Plauche answered a number of questions on details of the issue and there was extended discussion of several points. In line with the counsel to priests from Archbishop Cody, it was felt that the Speakers' Bureau of the Public Relations Committee should remain quiet for a period of from six weeks to three months until the proper authorities feel that definite good can be accomplished through explanation of the issue by speakers at parish meetings, etc. The danger of mob reaction if talks were given in meetings at present was pointed out. It was recommended that the pastor be present during such talks when it is feasible to present them."

"It was felt that answers to requests for information, protests, and the like, should be handled by the clergy on an individual, personal basis. If "rump" sessions of parents' groups occur, it would be best to talk individually with the leaders rather than address groups. Teaching by action at present is more effective than extended discussions or explanations. It was suggested that furthering attendance of both races at Catholic gatherings would assist in emotional conditioning."

"Newsmen brought up the point that news media will clamor for statistics on the number of Negroes accepted in Catholic schools at registration, April 13 and 14, and at the opening of school. They argued that it is customary to use such statistics in news media and that presenting accurate figures might avoid misleading stories that could inflame emotions."

"Other committee members argued that to adopt a policy of not releasing such information is a position of strength based on sound principle. To give statistics of this kind in itself points up racial differentiation whereas to adhere firmly to a policy of not providing them upholds the stand of the Church that, as all are one in Christ, there should be no racial bias. Even though a pupil's race is indicated on school census cards, a copy of which is sent to the Orleans Parish School Board, the Archdiocesan School Office, pastors and principals can simply say that such statistics are not compiled."

"Though this does not preclude the fact that newsmen can and probably will gather such statistics from personal observation in preparing stories on direction of their superiors, the accuracy of such information is the responsibility of the reporter and news medium, and the principle upheld by Catholic authorities is maintained. To preserve good will with news media, however, and to protect individual reporters from criticism by their superiors, it was suggested that a responsible authority (who ideally would be Archbishop Cody) should meet with the proper executives of local newspapers and responsible TV and radio stations before the school registration dates and explain the policy of not giving out such statistics and that this policy will be firmly maintained."

"As there is serious reason to believe that punitive legislation may be introduced at the coming session of the State Legislature, it was considered highly important to compile data on the immense contribution that is made to the state through the operation of Catholic schools. These data should include the number of children enrolled in Catholic schools, costs of operation the state and civil parish school boards would have to assume if Catholic schools were closed, the capital outlay that would be needed for building schools to care for Catholic children, and so on. These figures should be broken down according to individual civil parishes."

"It was felt also that it would be of extreme value for the Archdiocese to have a representative at the legislative session armed with such data for presentation to legislators and ready otherwise to answer questions of attempt to offset the proposal of dangerous measures. Though Henry Cabirac, Council Executive Director, expressed willingness to serve in this capacity, it was pointed out that the Council could be attacked more readily than the Archdiocese and that the person doing this work would have a stronger position if representing the Archdiocese."

"The matter of appointing a subcommittee of the Public Relations Committee for immediate service if necessary was advanced. It was explained that questions may arise in which the probable reaction of news media or of various sections of the public with which committee members are familiar may be desired. It was brought out, however, that given members of the committee might not be available at a specific time, and that all members will be glad to confer by telephone or otherwise at any time if available. Furthermore, a special meeting of the committee can be called if desired. The Rev. Elmo Romagosa, Director of the Bureau of Information; Mr. Cabirac, and the Committee Chairman have a list of members, their addresses and telephone numbers. The committee includes men of long experience on newspapers and with other communications media, in public relations and similar fields, the head of a university department of psychology, and so on, and can draw upon the services of other experts as needed. Committee members are unanimous in offering to serve in any capacity and at any time that they can do so."

"The Public Relations Committee of the Catholic Council on Human Relations, Archdiocese of New Orleans, met from 5 to 7 p.m. Thursday, June 7, 1962, in the Archdiocesan Administration Building. Present were the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Charles J. Plauche, Chaplain of the Council, seven members of the committee and Matt Ahmann, Executive Director of the National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice."

"There was detailed discussion of several points relating to the desegregation of Catholic schools and allied matters. A major one concerned methods of helping effect an orderly transition with acceptance of changed conditions by adults involved. The general feeling was that the situation as a whole is favorable and that the presence of Negroes at meetings of parents' clubs previously all-white would quickly be accepted as routine. It was felt, however, that quiet preparation could help establish better relations at the beginning."

"It was suggested that pastors and principals could enlist the aid of well-disposed white parents to welcome Negro parents and otherwise work for smooth operation of the new program. Seminars for the instruction of prospective leaders in this field can be arranged through the Council if pastors deem them desirable."

"As advocated previously, argument should be avoided. The basis of acceptance should be simply that of obedience to the Church. Resignation of officers and members who feel they cannot work under a desegregated program should be accepted. If necessary in extreme cases, a club can be disbanded and reorganized with members and officers willing to work for the new program."

"It was felt that the preparatory phase of the program could be more effectively put into force through a directive to pastors from the Most Reverend Apostolic Administrator. The committee recommends this proposal to His Excellency for his consideration."

"A second major topic discussed was the avoidance of unfavorable and inflammatory publicity at the opening of schools. It was believed that the local daily papers and responsible radio and television stations would wish to adopt this procedure. Since harmful publicity previously came to a great extent from national networks and news media, which did not present the complete picture, it was suggested that the responsible executives of these media - the heads of news or religion departments as the case might be - be approached with an appeal for fair and accurate coverage at the time the schools open and treatment in depth later so that the New Orleans story might be properly told."

"It was agreed that this contact should be made with the proper persons in NBC, CBS andABC networks, concerning television in particular; Associated Press and United Press International. National publications such as news magazines, the New York Times, etc., could be approached also if deemed desirable."

"It was felt that most effective contact in this field could be made by the Most Reverend Archbishop Cody. The Committee offers this recommendation to His Excellency for consideration."

"In regard to publicity concerning the general membership meeting, the Committee agreed that there should be only a brief announcement prior to the meeting and afterward a factual story of election officers and other business transacted."

B. Archbishop Cody met with the Mayor, Chief of Police and the Press and received assurances from them of their cooperation.

C. In order for you to get the complete picture of conditions under which the New Orleans Council is attempting to operate, you should be informed of Archbishop Cody's attitude on Catholic Interracial Councils. Perhpas some of you already know that in Kansas City he refused a group of Catholic lay people, including the editor of his diocesan paper, permission to form a Council. Archbishop Cody's reason for doing this was his belief that it is primarily the responsibility of the ordinary to use his authority to secure racial justice in his diocese and since this is a highly complex operation, does not want matters complicated by groups of well meaning people who may not be entirely familiar with the situation.

We have to agree with Archbishop Cody that it is primarily the responsibility of the ordinary, but believe that once we can successfully start even a limited program, he will become more enthusiastic. Let me assure you that Archbishop Cody has deep convictions on the matter of racial justice and charity and will act vigorously to implement these in the Archdiocese of New Orleans and the entire province.

Knowing his past attitude on Councils, our chairman was for a while reluctant to make any recommendations to the archbishop. However, after much consideration and encouragement by other Council leaders, he wrote a letter to Archbishop Cody outlining suggestions for Council action. The archbishop's reaction to this was favorable - he replied that he wished the Council to continue, he promised financial help and suggested a meeting to work out a program.

D. On the assumption that a most important factor in changing attitude was to provide white Catholics with the opportunity of meeting and getting to know Negro Catholics, I encouraged several Council members to encourage Negro parents to register their children at formerly all white Catholic schools. This was something that was handled behind the scenes because we did not feel that we could officially make this a part of the New Orleans Council's program because of the high tensions that existed in our area at that time. We ran into certain difficulties anyway. We worked quite successfully with organizations like Caritas and individuals like Father McManus, leading raco relations priest for the Josephites. However, when Msgr. Bezou, Superintendent of Schools, discovered that some of the Caritas people were encouraging Negro parents to enroll their children in white schools, he reacted unfavorably and in fact called Dr. McGrower of Caritas to his office to criticize her for this program. One of the results of this campaign was the discovery that tuition in the formerly all white Catholic schools was higher than in the Negro schools and it became necessary to raise funds for part of the tuition money. This was done quietly through interested individuals in order not to give the impression to the community that we were bribing Negro children to enter white schools. The majority of those we encouraged to enroll now pay their own way, but the Southern Field Service is still concerned with raising approximately $1200 in tuition money.

Our success in gaining Negro students for previously all white parochial schools favorably effected the public schools in New Orleans. During the summer when the New Orleans public schools were attempting to determine how many Negroes were going to be accepted, we met with them and told them that there were approximately two hundred entering approximately thirty-five schools throughout the archdiocese. They were surprised and gratified to learn this as they felt that the Catholic schools were going to be so crowded that we would only permit fifteen to twenty to enter and therefore they had used this as a criteria for attempting to establish a more or less equal amount for their schools. Here again the liaison resulted in a greater number of Negro students entering the public schools. It is worth mentioning this because it is an indication that whenever a Catholic facility removes its bars, it affects a similar public facility and therefore we believe that the removal of race restrictions in hospitals, retreat houses, diocesan offices and construction employment, parish organizations etc., has a beneficial effect on the total community.

III. REACTION OF THE COMMUNITY

A. The Clergy

The clergy of the Archdiocese were summoned to a meeting on the afternoon of March 27, at which time Archbishop Rummel made the announcement. He was interrupted by applause from the clergy which lasted three or four minutes. Four times during his talk he was interrupted again by applause and upon finishing had to ask the clergy to stop applauding. This reaction does not mean that all the clergy in the Archdiocese suddenly became enthusiastic about racial justice, because from time we receive reports of priests who are attempting to evade the implementation of it. However, it is an understatement to say that their reaction at the meeting was heartening. As is indicated from the Public Relations Committee meeting, Archbishop Cody then spoke on the implementation of the desegregation order.

B. The Laity

Perhaps the best general guage that can be used to measure the acceptance of the laity is the fact that attendance at Mass, reception of the sacraments, Sunday collections and school registrations are excellent. Here again this does not mean that the majority of the laity are enthusiastic about desegregation, in fact, we know that they are not. However they are reluctantly obeying. Of course, there is a segment of the Catholic population, perhaps 20%, that favors it.

A few weeks after the initial flurries of protest on the opening of schools in September, it became apparent that desegregation was having little effect on school enrollment. It is presently 98% of last year's enrollment, and this figure is expected to rise before the end of the year. This was much better than we expected - especially considering the fact that this was the first time in the Deep South that rural areas such as Covington and Morgan City had been successfully desegregated.

Many of you who have followed the New Orleans school situation closely will remember that shortly after the announcement a group of arch-segregationists started attacking the Church. I would like to explain their movement and its effect on the community so you can better appreciate all of the problems involved. An initial response to this radical group's first appearance was the spontaneous action of a group of laymen favoring the desegregation order. They publicly announced their support of the archbishop, stated that they would obtain a signed petition indicating that there was widespread support, and that they would be willing to debate with anyone on this matter. The same night that they released their statement to the news media, the archbishop summoned them for an interview and thanked them for their support but urged them to discontinue their efforts immediately because of the danger of polarizing the population and antagonizing some of the more reluctant members into open opposition. The leader of this group was extremely disheartened at this and it was not until he was ordered by the archbishop to stop that he did so. As it has turned out, this has been the right move.

The Excommunicated Catholics and their followers - The excommunication of Leander Perez, Jackson Ricau and Mrs. B. J. Gaillot was an unfortunate but extremely necessary action, and although we all pray that these three and their followers will at some time return to the fold, it appears very unlikely. The Ordinary issued letters of warning to approximately ten Catholics who were publicly voicing their objections to his order, but only took action on those who continued to do so and it so happened that the three who were effected have been the most outspoken and objectionable for a long period of time and perhaps by coincidence the least respectable in the eyes of the community.

Their excommunication did not modify these people's activities - they continued to picket the seminary, the archbishop's residence and hold meetings every two or three weeks to encourage the boycotting of the collection plate, staying away from Mass, building private segregated schools, and boycotting of Catholic school registrations. Upon a request from the hierarchy, we had all these meetings covered and sent written reports to the hierarchy. What the arch-segregationists said at these meetings was absolutely fantastic, and it was obvious that their statements were directed at the lunatic fringe, a group of approximately 350 who attended these meetings.

To give you indication of the lengths to which this group went, we have enclosed the picture on the following page. This movement to start a schismatic Church did not get off the ground, but at the time there seemed to be a danger that they might lure some of the more reluctant clergy. On this score, the archbishop had to speak sternly on several occasions to some priests and even had to send one priest outside of the Archdiocese because of his support to the Whtie Citizens' Council.

It was for this reason; i.e., the possibility of a full blown schism that we were extremely, perhaps at times overly cautious, in order to avoid doing anything that might cause such a thing, particularly when it came to avoiding all publicity until scools were successfully opened. We felt that what happened in New Orleans would have a tremendous influence on our cause in the entire country. We thought that if Catholic schools could be opened successfully with a good attendance and a schism prevented, that ordinaries, not only in the South, but all over the nation, would be encouraged by this example to act in a more forthright manner, using their authority to achieve racial justice. On the other hand, if there were large numbers of parents who withdrew their children from the schools and particularly if a schism were started, you can imagine how this would have dampened the spirits of the other ordinaries who might be contemplating taking authoritative action on any Church facilities. As it turned out, our feelings in this matter were justified. Desegregation has been achieved in a peaceful manner and its effect on the city and the rest of the South has been salutary. As we previously mentioned, desegregation of parochial schools actually served to increase the number of Negroes enrolled in public schools.

IV. OTHER ACTIVITIES

A. Reverse Freedom Rides

According to Harvey Kerns, director of the New Orleans chapter of the Urban League, this recriminatory tactic, the brain child of the New Orleans White Citizens' Council, has generated far more publicity than it has results. As you well know there has been over the past 15 to 20 years a mass migration of Negroes from the South to the North, and it is doubtful that this scheme has increased this move one per cent. While not achieving the arch-segregationists' aim of appreciably decreasing the Negro population of the South, the reverse freedom rides have given them a great deal of moral support because of the reaction of the northerners. We realize that no section of the country wants another section's welfare people, and that the people and officials of northern communities have a just complaint against these rides, but their widely publicized reaction has added fuel to the segregationists' propaganda mill. They now self-righteously and jubilantly declare that the white northerner wants to give the Negro all of his rights so long as he stays in the South. From the point of view of the southerner working for racial justice, northern resentment against the reverse freedom rides works against their cause. And the less publicity given northern sentiments, the better for us.

B. Formation of a Community-wide Human Relations Council in New Orleans

A group of the New Orleans Catholic Council members and myself have been instrumental in creating enthusiasm and working with other members of the community to form this organization. The originators of this organization have called upon the Executive Directors of ADL, the Urban League, the Social Welfare Planning Council and myself to serve as consultants for them, and it is possible that they might secure some type of staff aid. We believe that this is an extremely important development in the community because it provides an organization which is more representative of the entire community than any now in existance and will, therefore, be able to reach certain areas that the existing organizations cannot.

V. EFFECT OF ARCHBISHOP RUMMEL'S ACTIONS ON THE REST OF THE SOUTH

As we stated in our last report, other southern bishops have posed the question, "You wouldn't expect us to desegregate our schools when Catholic New Orleans hasn't desegregated their's." We believe that the bottleneck has now been broken, an example has been set, encouragement has been given, and a pattern established, not only for the South, but to the entire nation. Approximately two and a half months after this Archbishop Hallinan announced his decision to desegregate all Catholic schools in the Archdiocese, grades one through twelve. To the best of our knowledge, the New Orleans order to desegregate all grades of all Catholic schools in the Archdiocese was the first time that such a sweeping move has been made in the deep South.

Incidentally, I have corresponded with Archbishop Hallinan for eight months and I visited with him in Atlanta last April, informed him of what we had done in New Orleans and left pertinent information with him which we had gathered in our surveys of other southern dioces and encouraged him to make the move.

If you will note, since the Archdioceses of New Orleans and Atlanta have issued the orders to desegregate their schools, there are no archdioceses or metropolitan sees which have not issued orders to desegregate schools. And incidentally, attendance at Atlanta parochial schools has been higher this year than ever before.

VI. APPLYING THE EXPERIENCE GAINED IN NEW ORLEANS TO THE REST OF SOUTH

The methods learned in motivating the ordinary to issue the order in New Orleans can be profitably applied throughout the South, even where schools have been desegregated, or at least where a start has been made to desegregate the schools. We have found in some dioceses that the city in which the bishop resides may have desegregated their schools, but other large cities have not. Perhaps the best example of this is the Diocese of Nashville where the Catholic schools in both Knoxville and Chatanooga still remain segregated, and even in Nashville itself there has not been much done recently to implement the bishop's order of 1954 to desegregate the schools. In addition to schools, there are other Church facilities which have not removed their barriers.

Because of the success of the desegregation of New Orleans schools, I have been able to promote the idea among other southern dioceses. Recently I visited Bishop McDonough of the diocese of Savannah which geographically takes in the southern one half of Georgia. After giving him a favorable report on the conditions in New Orleans, I asked him if he would consider desegregating all twelve grades of his schools next year in conjunction with Bishop Reh of the diocese of Charleston, South Carolina which encompasses the whole state. In neither of these areas have the public schools desegregated. He urged me to ask Bishop Reh with whom I had an appointment within the next few days to see how he felt about this because Bishop McDonough was favorable to the idea. When I asked Bishop Reh, he said he was extremely favorable to the idea and would discuss it with Bishop McDonough at the Ecumenical Council in Rome. I then informed Archbishop Cody of the willingness of these two bishops to give this matter serious consideration and stressed the fact that the more dioceses that could do this at the same time, the easier it would be on the various dioceses and the more beneficial effect it would have on the image of the Church. Since Archbishop Cody was in Rome when I wrote this note, I have not received his reaction yet. It is my hope that he as the head of the province of New Orleans will be able to persuade at least the dioceses of Lafayette and Baton Rouge, Louisiana to move, perhaps in conjunction with Savannah and Charleston in the fall of 1963. As of this time out of twenty-four dioceses in the fourteen confederate states all except seven or eight have desegregated their schools. I am not sure whether the diocese of St. Augustine, Florida has done it or not.

According to intergroup relations resource people, the most effective way found of changing attitudes is to use authority to effect institutional changes. In order to do this, it is necessary to motivate the gatekeepers to make changes. In the case of Church facilities, this naturally means the ordinary of the diocese.

It is particularly important in the South where the average person is less capable than the northerner of absorbing abstract ideas and hasn't developed a conscience regarding racial justice - a conscience is built on knowledge and experience - that the Church lead the way in this field. Even among well disposed lay people, you will find a reluctance on their part to take the first steps because they feel that they should follow rather than lead the Church in such matters. Their attitude is that if racial justice is right, why doesn't the Church act and not just talk about it. The example set by the bishops Chile in their recent program of land distribution is an excellent one because it sets an example for all right thinking Catholics to follow.

Just as the personalities of people differ, so do those of ordinaries and therefore in some cases we find some who have been very forthright in their actions to achieve racial justice, whereas others have not. Let me say at this point that we regard all ordinaries as men of good will, but some of them, because of their age, background, area of the country in which they live, and other factors, have not made certain vital moves which we regard as necessary.

In order to motivate the ordinary to move, we believe that there are certain steps which the laity can take. Naturally, it is easier to do this where there is an existing Catholic Council on Human Relations or Catholic Interracial Council, but even where there is not - in fact, in some dioceses we know that the ordinary would refuse permission to form one - we are encouraging those Catholics with deep convictions to make personal visits, send telegrams, make telephone calls and write the ordinary expressing their complaints in a respectful manner and making a plea that something be done. We have also worked with other religious groups quite successfully. For example, at my urging Wade Mackie of the American Friends Service Committee is encouraging Catholics in the Diocese of Baton Rouge to request Bishop Tracey to desegregate the schools as quickly as possible.

Despite our shortage of travel funds, we have visited a few places and have maintained correspondence with our existing Councils, with people in other cities I have visited, and certain other key people who either wrote for information or with whom I initiated correspondence.

We believe that the following areas are of special interest:
San Antonio - We visited our Council there and learned that they are participating with other agencies in a program to desegregate community activities. We also met with His Excellency Archbishop Lucey and secured his permission to make a survey with the idea of making recommendations for the incorporation of a nondiscriminatory hiring clause in all Church construction contracts. We have had to postpone this because we needed additional information from certain resource people in Washington, D. C. and we were unable to go to Washington because of our financial limitations. It is hoped that we will be able to resume activities on this in the near future, and persuade Archbishop Lucey to include such a clause. If we are able to do this, it will be the first such clause in any diocese in the country.

Pensacola, Florida - There are Catholics, mostly Negroes, with deep convictions who are attempting to persuade Archbishop Toolen to change his policies. Thus far, they have not met with any success, but we know that their pleas must be pricking the conscience of the archbishop.

As you can see from the letter on the following page, he does not seem to be favorably disposed to doing anything despite the fact that there are no punitive laws to stop him and the public schools in this area are desegregating on a pupil placement basis in all grades this fall without any major objections from the community. You might also be interested in knowing that when one of the priests in this area learned of my visit, he investigated me but was disappointed to learn that I was not connected with any subversive organizations.

Mobile, Alabama - Several years ago the state of Alabama was successful in preventing the N.A.A.C.P. from operating. This has definitely hurt progress, but we are attempting to stimulate a group we have met in Mobile to encourage them to make known their hopes and aspirations to the bishop and also to sue for desegregation of the public schools, recreational facilities, etc.

Atlanta, Georgia - Although the Catholic population of the Archdiocese of Atlanta is only one per cent, this city obviously is considered important by both Chruch and secular officials as was indicated by the Holy See's recent decision to make it the metropolitan see of a new province and to appoint Archbishop Hallinan as its head. There is a small but enthusiastic group of Catholics working for racial justice. It is important that we have a vigorous group here because Atlanta is the headquarters for the majority of southern agencies.

Nashville, Tennessee - George Barrett, a long time friend of Matt and former chairman of the Tennessee Council on Human Relations, invited us to Nashville to meet with a group of people interested in forming a Council. Unfortunately, because of the lack of funds, we were unable to accept the invitation. However, while Matt was lecturing at the Fisk Race Relations Institute last June, he met with the group and got them started.

Dear _____:

Sorry to have kept you waiting so long for an answer to your letter but this is the busiest time of year and I don't think I have been at my desk for more than a few hours the past two weeks.

I easily understand your problem and believe you understand mine. We have always tried to give to the Negroes of the Diocese the same opportunities as the whites. We have tried to integrate them in our Holy Name Society and our meetings and parades and in many other ways. In regard to the schools we have hesitated because of the fact that we know that if we accept colored children for our schools that we will lose a great number of the white children and it is a question in my mind as to whether it is best to lose fifty children and accept two. You are in a position to send your child to a school that will accept Negro boys and save all the difficulty and trouble that we would run into in Pensacola.

There is another side to the question. The colored people of West Florida and Alabama have never accepted their obligations and perhaps that is one reason why the high school in Pensacola is not up to the standard it should be and this is true all over the Diocese. Anything that the colored parishes have has been given to them either by a community or by the diocese and it is not easy to keep these places going.

I am sure without doubt that integration is coming in the next few years but I don't think we are ready for it just now. I hope you will see my point of view and send your boy to an institution outside of the state that will give him all that you desire.

Asking God to bless you, and with all good wishes and prayers, I remain

Sincerely,

Panel on Human Relations at the Knights of Peter Claver annual Convention - Clarence Laws, a Catholic and a native of Louisiana and presently Southwest Director of the N.A.A.C.P., Mrs. Ora Mae Martin, a Catholic writer and the person who was influential in getting Archbishop Rummel to desegregate the Eucharistic Congress in New Orleans in 1938, and I presented a Panel on Human Relations in Lafayette last summer. We attempted to point out that the Church's teachings on this point were unmistakenly clear and encourage these people to exert more strenuous efforts to work for interracial justice. Father Perry, a member of the Board and Chaplain of the organization, informed me that the Board at this convention of the Knights of Peter Claver had voted to send the National Catholic Conference $490 and the Southern Field Service $600. News of this was indeed encouraging to us, not only because we could use the money, but because it is an indication that the Southern Catholic Negro is beginning to awaken to his responsibilities to do something about discrimination.

Southwide Voter Registration Campaign - The largest single undertaking at the moment throughout the South is this campaign which has been underway since spring. We are encouraging all of our member Councils to cooperate with the agencies in their areas which have been given a grant to work on this. We have also discussed with the officials of the Voter Registration Project the possibilities of a grant for the Southern Field Service to staff a voter registration drive in Southern Louisiana and Eastern Texas and will continue to work on this.

We felt that it was appropriate to outline our goals for the second year of the Southern Field Service operation. The following is based on the assumption that we have an adequate budget.

AIMS AND OBJECTIVES OF THE SOUTHERN FIELD SERVICE

October 1, 1962 to September 30, 1963

1. Work with people of conviction and try to influence other people of good will particularly those in influential positions, to make a great effort to encourage the ordinary of their dioceses to remove all racial barriers as quickly as possible in order to give the people a living experience in interracial activity which is the most effective way of changing attitudes.

2. Prepare for and hold a Southern Field Service leadership conference in New Orleans in June of 1963.

3. Conduct a workshop or school for training people in direct action techniques to bring economic pressure to bear on such institutions as stores, lunch counters, hotels, theaters, etc., to desegregate and offer merit employment to minority groups.

4. Encourage the increase in the formation of Catholic Councils and strengthen those already in existance.

5. Secure foundation money for a voter registration project in Southern Louisiana and Eastern Texas.

6. Find ways of raising at least a small portion of our budget in the South in order to continue to receive the major portion of our budget from foundations.

7. Encourage Councils to actively cooperate and participate with the various local agencies who have been given grants by the Voter Registration Department of the Southern Regional Council to conduct a southwide voter registration campaign.

8. Persuade at least two southern ordinaires to insert in all of their Church related construction contracts a nondiscriminatory hiring clause.

9. Continue to urge southern Catholics and non-Catholics alike to work for racial justice in the total community through our own Councils, through cooperation with other responsible agencies and in cases where neither exists, to work through an informal group for these purposes.

10. Establish an integrated youth center as a pilot project.

11. Continue to work closely with the Josephites and increase our effort to develop close cooperation with other Negro orders, to help furnish the leadership to end discrimination in the Church and in the total community.

12. Attempt to stimulate the Negro fraternal orders such as the Knights of Peter Claver into becoming a militant organization to work for racial justice.

13. Encourage the formation and development of a diocesan priests' movement to carry out our aims.

14. Increase diocesan employment of minority groups and encourage influential people in the community to hire on a merit employment basis.

15. Continue our newsletter.

Again, we would like to take this opportunity to express our gratitude for the support which the National Catholic Conference and Taconic has given to both the Southern Field Service and to all of the southern Councils, particularly the New Orleans Council. Without this support it is quite possible that conditions in New Orleans might be chaotic and certainly not encouraging for progress anywhere in the South.

MINUTES OF THE SOUTHERN FIELD OFFICE
PROGRAM PLANNING COMMITTEE MEETING

Re: Southern Field Service Leadership Conference

The Southern Field Office Program Planning Committee met on October 30, 1962, to discuss a proposed convention during the summer of 1962.

Mr. Laws called the meeting to order with a few words about the proposed conference, which aims at encouraging and promoting human dignity and justice in human relations. Purpose of the summer meeting is to take a closer look at Catholics and what we are doing race-relations-wise; some non-Catholics will be invited to make some contributions in this area. Areas to be covered include Catholic education, employment practices, hospitals, retreat houses, diocesan organizations, parish organizations, etc. and in addition to them, votor registration because this has the most significant effect on community climate. The conference should stimulate the hierarchy, clergy and the laity into carrying out the work of human relations in their respective dioceses.

Fr. Schiffer suggested that we get a dynamic speaker, such as Archbishop Lucey of San Antonio (a bishop, anyway) for our main speaker. Fr. McManus added that the bishop would have to be a convener and stated that our first function would be to examine our own deficiencies that is those of the Catholic community.

Fr. Putnam suggested Archbishop Hallinan of Atlanta; Dr. Pausons commented that we could have all three archbishops as conveners. Mr. Cabirac mentioned that the Catholic Interracial Council in San Antonio was fairly active while the one in Atlanta was new. Mr. Morial said we should let the archbishop decide which city would be best. Concensus of opinion in the group was that Mr. Cabirac should write to the three archbishops, asking them to jointly convene the conference this summer.

Mr. McColloster asked about accommodations. Fr. McManus said that a centrally located place would be better and less expensive. Mr. Francis pointed out the advantages of having the conference in the same place where the planning was being done.

Mr. Cabirac asked that a couple of priests go along with him to see Archbishop Cody, to give the proper feeling of this being a clerical as well as a lay activity. Mr. Morial added that a list of the planning committee should be shown to the Archbishop. Mr. Laws said a committee should be appointed for the visit.

Mr. Morial asked what is Archbishop Cody's attitude toward the Council. Fr. McManus mentioned that he had talked to the Archbishop about school desegregation; that Archbishop Cody feels that Church structure is sufficeint to handle this problem. Orders from the top down. No interference needed.

Manner of approaching the archbishop discussed: Fr. McManus suggested that we present to him the idea of representatives of the Southern Interracial Councils discussing problems under the leadership of the Archbishop. Fr. Schiffer elaborated on this and Fr. Putnam quoted the Archbishop's appreciation of lay effort. Mr. Francis mentioned the danger of appearing to be a pressure group - stressed that we wish to be of service. One angle mentioned by Fr. McManus - so many problems on race remain unsolved because people do not have good communication and don't discuss their problems. Mr. Laws suggested that we get Msgr. Flauche's advice on who would be an acceptable committee; Mr. Cabirac, would follow up on this. Names suggested are:

LIAISON	Mr. Henican	Fr. McManus	Fr. Andrew Smith
COMMITTEE	Fr. Perry	Msgr. Raine	Msgr. Flauche
	Mr. Francis	Rev. Mother Byrne	Mr. Cabirac

Discussion of material to be presented to the Archbishop by the committee. Fr. McManus to prepare brief on the conference. Mr. Laws suggested that a memo be prepared ahead of time and attached to our request for audience, so that the Archbishop would have an opportunity to look it over.

In a moment of digression, Mrs. Martin expressed the idea that motivation as well as opportunity should be given to Negroes so that they will be willing to move forward, especially in the field of employment. She mentioned her dislike of "forced" situations. Fr. McManus pointed out that you must "prime the pump". After so many years of discrimination, desegregation must be somewhat "forced" at the beginning. This is one reason for the Council - to find out how to get Negroes accepted and how to sell them on the idea that they are accepted. Fr. Putnam helped here to clarify and Mr. Laws further stressed the idea that only qualified Negroes should be placed in new situations.

Another brief point of digression -- during much of the discussion the contributions by Dr. Pausons were very valuable and Fr. McManus mentioned how important it is to have a psychologist of the fine quality of Dr. Pausons on our planning committee.

Returning to the matter of the bried which Fr. McManus would prepare, Mr. Laws, as well as Fr. Putnam and Dr. Pausons, stressed that it was important to use a positive approach.

Corrections on the agenda were discussed and revised agenda is attached.

Length of time for conference discussed - two to two and one-half days.

Place - Seminary suggested by Fr. Schiffer. Ursuline could be used for the ladies' accommodations. Mr. Francis said Xavier University was available.

Funds - Mr. Cabirac mentioned that money might be secured from foundations. (Fr. Putnam said we should be able to tell the archbishop how we stand financially).

Resource people - Fr. Schiffer suggested a psychologist or sociologist on how to influence people (1- how to influence the white community; 2- how to influence the negro community.) Fundamentals on this explained. St. Louis school superintendent suggested by Fr. Putnam. Someone from the hospital in Raleigh. VA Hospital in New Orleans might be a good contact for a resource person, but here the economic situation would not apply. Fr. J. Fitzpatrick, SJ of Fordham suggested. Fr. Putnam mentioned the NCCJ program on Channel 4, Sunday 11:00 - 11:30 a.m. on Human Relations.

General discussion about whether we can see the archbishop at all, with his involvement in the Vatican council. Fr. Putnam mentioned that the archbishop calls the chancery each week; Fr. Schiffer said that the person he calls should be our initial contact.

Group voted to meet again in three weeks with the brief - Tuesday November 20.

Below are listed committees appointed - and revised agenda.

Dear Henry:

We can't immediately find--for certain--any "Catholics with conviction" in Montgomery and Knoxville.

The best I can offer are two good people who will be reliable sources of information on who in their communities may fit your requirements. They are:

Dear Paul:

Thanks for giving me John Wheeler's name. He did supply me with some helpful information regarding the employment situation in North Carolina, and it's quite possible that I might invite him to speak to some of the Catholic Interracial Councils later in the year.

Could you either list at the bottom of this letter or jot down on a piece of paper and return to me air mail, special delivery names of any Catholics with conviction in either Montgomery, Alabama or Knoxville, Tennessee? A friend of mine from Pensacola, Jack Sisson in whom I have great confidence is visiting these particular areas and has agreed to contact anyone there who I think might be appropriate.

Good luck in your new position. I'll be looking forward to your visit to New Orleans in the near future.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Henry:

John Popham, Managing Editor, The Chattanooga Times, is your best source of information in Chattanooga. I don't know his religious persuasion, but he's a good man.

Is this again for Jack Sisson? I'm sure he's a good man, but I always have a little uneasiness about putting persons whom I don't know with the good, and usually few, contacts in the region. Hope I shall have an opportunity to meet Sisson soon.

Your inquirées are no bother. Always glad to help.

Sincerely,

Paul Anthony

Dear Paul:

Thanks again for the Chatanooga name. You're right to express some concern about giving the name to someone else to contact and perhaps I will regret it, but in this particular case I have a lot of faith in Jack Sisson plus the fact that in the diocese of Tennessee there's little to lose because the bishop is ill and aging and will probably be retired soon. In fact I'm trying to speed up that process by getting as many complaints into him as possible.

The postponement of the Southern Inter Agency meeting to April 18 and 19 is better for me than the former date. I'll look forward to seeing you then if not sooner when you come to New Orleans.

Yours sincerely,

Henry

Dear Paul:

George Barrett, one of our Directors asked me today to ask you to write James O. Bass at the American Trust Building who is the Chairman of the Metropolitan Mission on Human Relations of Nashville to inform him that since some hotels and motels in Nashville have been desegregated that the Southern Interagency Conference will be held there. They needn't know that we represent such a small number of people.

He also asked that you send a blind copy to Ed Shay, Executive Vice President of the Chamber of Commerce of Nashville and to himself George Barrett, Stahlman Building, Nashville, Tennessee.

Can you do this for them, please?

Dear Henry:

Have checked with Charles (Wittenstein, Chairman of SIC) who says he would prefer having the group act at the Nashville meeting, commending the city with said commendation going to Bass. I see no problem either way but this should accomplish the same purpose though not with the same timing.

Incidentally, the Chamber of Commerce here has said that Atlanta's hotel integration now enables it to: "go after the 40% of the convention business which was automatically unavailable where segregation was a policy." George May want to suggest that Ed Shay write Atlanta about this.

Best.

Could you do this as quickly as possible?

Thanks.

Dear Henry:

Enclsoed are the materials requested for Charleston. I hope to go there soon and would be happy to have suggestions on persons to see. This one may be tough.

It is unlikely that I will be coming to New Orleans anytime soon. My brief efforts there to encourage and strengthen the Council have been--in my opinion--a complete failure. I suspect the New Orleans people are of the same opinion. More importantly, our sense of priorities and potentialities puts our legitimate concerns about the city somewhat down the scale.

Hope to see you somewhere soon.

Dear Paul:

Thanks for the large variety of material which you sent me in answer to my request. I will see Father Friend this weekend and give it to him.

When I asked you to send me this material, I should have requested that you send me an additional copy for my own use. I would appreciate your doing this when you have the opportunity.

It's distressing to realize that the New Orleans Community Relations Council has not progressed any further than they have. Whether or not you are aware of it, New Orleans borders on a crisis, and we are doing everything that we can to maintain peace and, at the same time, make progress.

I look forward to seeing you at the Southern Interagency Meeting, if not sooner.

Yours sincerely,

Henry

Mr. Paul Anthony
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W., Room 201
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Paul:

Would you be able to reach any influential people in either Mobile or Birmingham, to try to approach Archbishop Toolen and Bishop Durick to desegregate their Catholic schools along with the public schools this year, in order to spread it as far as possible and minimize making target areas of the public schools?

We have been working in both places for awhile, trying to encourage Catholic negroes to register their children in white Catholic schools, and believe we are making some headway. Dr. Hazeur, 474 E. Creek Circle Drive, Mobile, Alabama, is heading this drive, and Father Paul Downey, 1327 Sixth Avenue South, is heading this drive in Birmingham, Alabama.

The more weight we could put behind this effort, the greater chances of success we would have.

As you probably know, Archbishop Toolen has been the outstanding advocate of separate, but equal, facilities of all southern Catholic bishops; but, this fall he is opening his schools in Pensacola, which is part of his diocese, to negroes.

Whatever you could do to aid in this matter would be a contribution to the community and certainly would be appreciated by me.

Yours sincerely,

Henry

Dear Henry:

We will follow-up in Birmingham on your request to encourage desegregation of the Catholic schools though I am not certain how effective this will be.

In Mobile, it will be somewhat more difficult since we are currently getting considerable unfavorable publicity from the ultra-right there. However, we will try there too. My reports, like yours, about Archbishop Toolen are not encouraging though the Pensacola breakthrough does hold out some hope.

Best.

Dear Henry:

Charles and I are now working on the next Interagency Conference meeting. Very likely the meeting will be held in Washington in mid-February. (At the last meeting we were asked to consider holding the meeting there and it now seems especially appropriate that we do so.)

The new director of the President's Committee should be appointed by then. We will try to get him; if not, the suggestion of Percy is a good one.

Will confirm date and place as soon as possible.

In the meantime, all good wishes for the season from all of us here.

Dear Paul:

Would you be able to send me a sample of whatever literature you might have available providing resource information for businessmen, politicans, labor leaders, professional men, attorneys, and the secular news media to implement the principles of racial justice in their own area. We are trying to put on a Southern Leadership Conference in Atlanta which will be a meaningful, practical, problem-solving conference, and whatever information we can supply to the various groups on success stories in their own fields and techniques on how to do it will be helpful.

I have written Bishop Carroll of Miami for an appointment and as soon as I hear from him, I will inform you so that we may set the date for our Southern Interagency Steering Committee meeting.

Seasons greetings to you.

Dear Henry:

Under separate cover, several items we have available for your needs. The most appropriate is the L-Report concerning Charlotte. In a few days I will be sending you a publication which we are now producing, "Transition Without Tragedy." This contains some material you might be able to use, though excerpted. As you will see, the book is a highly specialized one and would not be appropriate for use in its entirety.

Incidentally, the name Southern Leadership Conference comes close to that of Martin King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference. Will it cause any confusion?

Look forward to getting a date for the January meeting.

Best.

Southern Field Service

Report of Activities, 1962-63
Program Goals 1964

Report of the Director
Southern Field Service of the National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice
November, 1963

Substantial foundation grants secured by the National Catholic Conference have enabled me to cover a much larger area of the South in the past 12 months. The successful breaking of the bottleneck in the Southern Catholic community; that is, the desegregation of the Catholic schools of New Orleans, has also permitted me to shift my emphasis so that we have not had to concentrate on one particular area as I had in the previous 12 months. You will probably recall from my last report that many of the Southern Bishops were reluctant to move as long as "Catholic" New Orleans hadn't.

Although I have traveled extensively during the last 12 months -- approximately 120 days -- it still has been insufficient to meet the needs of the 14 states which I have been assigned. This was true several years ago and has become increasingly acute during the stepped-up Civil Rights program of the last six months. What is needed is additional staff working out of the New Orleans office or dividing the present territory. Half of the territory would still be larger than any other Civil Rights organization covers.

We maintain communications in a number of ways with the other Civil Rights organizations working in the South, but primarily through the Southern Interagency meetings which are held three times a year. At these, approximately 40 Civil Rights agencies are represented. Our influence has been increased by my election to the Steering Committee of this organization. I have also been invited to meet with Dr. Martin Luther King, Roy Wilkins, Jim Farmer, Oscar Lee, Jim Forman, Whitney Young, Jean Fairfax, Glenn Smiley, Bill Oliver and Frank Graham, to help plan over-all strategy for the South.

EFFECTS OF NATIONAL CONFERENCE ON RELIGION AND RACE

There is an increased awareness and desire on the part of many of the leading clergymen of the three faiths to work to ameliorate the South's racial problems. The simultaneous desegregation of the Knoxville, Tennessee hospitals is an excellent example of what can be done when the three faiths work together. It is unnecessary to say that this kind of effort has increased cooperation, ecumenism and goodwill among the various faiths.

The National Conference on Religion and Race has some solid accomplishments in the South, and there is an even greater potential which is being tapped. However, in most of the deep South, the predominant Protestantism has not been able to achieve the results which can be effected in the Catholic community because of its administrative system and the authority of its Bishops. Some race relations experts, such as Father McManus, a Josephite priest, believe that substantial additional progress can be made in the total community by concentrating our own efforts on the Catholic community.

SOUTHERN FIELD SERVICE LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE

This Conference has been scheduled April 30, May 1, 2, and 3 at the Hilton Inn in Atlanta. Archbishops Cody (New Orleans), Lucey (San Antonio), and Hallinan (Atlanta), have given their blessings to the Conference. Archbishop Hallinan has followed up our invitation to Bishops to send their administrators, priests in charge of church related construction, directors of diocesan organizations -- with an invitation of his own to the Southern Bishops.

Not only have approximately half of the 28 Bishops of the South agreed to send administrators, but thus far 8 of them have indicated a willingness to attend themselves. When we first started talking about this Conference a little over two years ago, we didn't even feel we had enough recognition to ask the Bishops to send lay representatives.

Since this will be the first Conference and since it is extremely important that it be successful, much of our time in the next four months will be consumed in preparations for it.

AIMS OF THE LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE

1. To supply resources and encouragement to Bishops and to their administrators; either to desegrate all their facilities, or to speed up the pace if they have already started to desegregate. The example set by these dioceses is expected to have beneficial effects in the total community.

2. To supply the techniques to bring change to Southern Catholics and interracial councils already motivated.

3. To involve more deeply the missionary religious orders serving Negro Catholics in order that they might train Negroes for leadership roles and for full participation in the activities of their communities.

4. To hold workshops and panels on the problems of the Spanish speaking. These people comprise a substantial group within about a third of the area which we cover.

The Conference Program Planning Committee felt that our thinly staffed organization would make the most effective contribution in the total community by accelerating the strides to racial justice in all Catholic institutions, but especially in those with broadest community influence, such as hospitals, schools and general employment practices. And, the Committee has emphasized the need to work particularly in metropolitan areas with heavy Catholic population such as Houston, San Antonio, New Orleans, and Miami.

In addition to the institutional approaches mentioned above, we will strive to motivate and to provide information on techniques for action to Catholic businessmen, politicians, labor leaders, professional men and to the white power structure in order to implement principles of racial justice in their own spheres.

The Program planning Committee is composed of leaders of Civil Rights organizations in the South. Its chairman is Clarence Laws, Southwestern Director of NAACP and member of the Board of Directors of the National Catholic Conference.

SOUTHERN CATHOLIC INTERRACIAL COUNCILS - FORMAL AND INFORMAL

There are approximately five new areas -- Memphis, Tennessee; Birmingham, Alabama; Shreveport, Louisiana; Louisville, Kentucky; and Charleston, South Carolina, -- which are interested to some degree or other in forming Catholic Interracial Councils, and at least this many informal groups which are working on a particular project.

We believe in the long run that our efforts to get the Bishops to act vigorously in all areas of the Church and total community will eventually result in a greater enthusiasm on the part of the Catholic clergy and laity to participate in church and community interracial programs. Perhaps in Texas, which has a favorable climate, more resources, and a large number of Catholics, we may even aim at trying to staff a Council.

Most of my efforts have been spent trying to build a base upon which Councils could be established. In order to do this I have been trying to make racial justice as respectable as possible in as short a time as I could by reducing the number of dioceses in which no changes have been made. Now that this has been done in all except the dioceses of Baton Rouge, Louisiana; Lafayette, Louisiana; Alexandria, Louisiana; Jackson, Mississippi; and Mobile, Alabama; we hope to be able to devote more fruitful effort to develop Councils. Incidentally, these areas mentioned will be the most difficult in which to effect changes.

We are using as a guideline the method of operations which our Executive Director expressed in his August, 1962 report to the Board of Directors: "In the history of our movement there has been an assumption that we were committed to the creation of local organizations with relationships with the dioceses. I think that some of the work we have done in the last two years or so indicates that we can program in some areas without local organizations. A close look at our history, and at the recent work we have done also indicates to me that local organizations are not always called for; that even the form of local organizations can and in some places should vary from place to place; and that local organizations, especially in the South, might more readily grow out of other programs of ours than a deliberate effort to create a Council."

EMPLOYMENT

In my last report, one of our major aims was to encourage at least two Southern Ordinaries to adopt affirmative hiring policies in their Church related construction contracts. We have been successful in doing this with Archbishop Lucey of San Antonio and Bishop Reed of Oklahoma. They were actually the second and third Bishops in the entire nation to do this. At the moment these do not have the meaning that they would if a strenous effort on our part were made to implement them. However, we do know that in the Diocese of Oklahoma the attitude of an affirmative policy has caused the diocese to hire a Negro Catholic school teacher and a Negro secretary in the diocesan newspaper office. Questionnaires returned recently for the Southern Councils indicate a greater interest in this area than any other, except the regular publication of a newsletter to keep them informed.

CRISIS AREAS

Visits to areas in the midst of crisis haven't resulted in any accomplishments regarding the solving of the crisis, but there have been some desirable side effects, and we have had an opportunity to learn certain techniques which, in some future cases, will be helpful. There is one rule that is fairly applicable to these situations: where the diocese itself has begun to move in any way, there is a likelihood that the diocese will have appointed representatives to attempt to act as bridge-builders between the white and Negro communities and to try to effect changes in the total community.

Another important factor is that the Church in most of the South represents a very small percent of the population, and the prestige of the Church and the ability of its numbers to influence the community is somewhat in proportion to size. However, in some of the older sea coast cities, which are the seats of dioceses, such as, Savannah, Charleston, etc., prestige is greater than numbers alone would indicate. Keeping these factors in mind it might be well to review some of the more critical areas which we have visited either prior to or during crises.

Priests appointed by the dioceses or acting on their own in Charleston, South Carolina; Savannah, Georgia; Shreveport, Louisiana; and Mount Sterling, Kentucky have played fruitful roles in crises situations. I am in the process of gathering facts on what they have done to publish a pamphlet which I will then distribute to all Southern Bishops, Catholic Interracial Councils, etc.

Birmingham, Alabama

The helplessness felt by all of the Southern Intergroup agencies which met in September of 1963 regarding this particular area can be expressed by the minutes of their last meeting which read,

> "In a special evening session of discussion of the Birmingham situation, there were strong arguments to the effect that the usual intergroup relations don't apply; they have been employed in Birmingham without success for years."
> "Among actions deemed advisable by the Intergroup people for the federal "establishments" are: vigorous FBI activity -- "plants" in hate groups, for example -- to apprehend dynamiters and prevent further crimes; the ordering of federal troops into the area; tough, straight talk from the President to the area's key economic leaders, involving the use of economic thumbscrews. It was speculated that recent events are merely the prelude to the coming season, which South-wide will be one of new militancy and leading to violence. Segregationist reaction in Birmingham, Americus, Albany, Danville, Selma, is of a new breed; in countering it, neither moral nor economic approaches work."

Although our efforts in this area seemingly contributed little or nothing to the solution of the crisis, some beneficial results have accrued. I have met with clergymen working with white and Negro groups and encouraged them to form interracial councils to discuss these problems. According to latest reports from Birmingham, there were over 50 Negroes and whites of all faiths present at a regular weekly meeting, including six priests. Father Downey, SSJ, of Our Lady of Fatima parish, has invited the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee to meet several times in the parish. This has created a better understanding between this action group and the Church. I have also met with a member of the white Catholic power structure of Birmingham and have established a working relationship with him. Unfortunately, Archbishop Toolen did not respond to the request of the Catholic Negroes whom we encouraged to seek admission to the all-white Catholic schools either here, or in Mobile.

University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, Alabama

Violence seemed most likely to break out at this spot in the South immediately prior to the opening of the University. We called a meeting of the Steering Committee of the Southern Interagency Council and were responsible for representatives of each of the three faiths being present on opening day. The plan of action on which we decided was to have the representatives of each of the three faiths contact the chaplain or clergyman who was most closely connected with the University. As it turned out, the deciding factor in the situation was President Kennedy's decision to federalize the National Guard units so that Governor Wallace would not interfere with the Negro students.

In contrast to places like Birmingham with its hard core prejudice, Savannah, Georgia and other Southern towns have always been more tolerant and offer more possibilities for change.

Savannah, Georgia

Bishop McDonough impressed me as a man who was seeking guidance and felt a strong force of conscience to do something when I visited him in August of 1962. At my suggestion he evidenced a desire to move at the same time as Bishop Reh of Charleston, South Carolina, the adjoining diocese. I also met several times with a group of spirited Catholic Negroes in the area and encouraged them to seek admittance to all Catholic institutions.

Evidence of Bishop McDonough's desire to do something and the activity on the part of the Catholic Negroes can be seen by the fact that Bishop McDonough has opened his schools in all grades and his hospitals this Fall to all races. Not the least among his actions has been extremely constructive role as bridge-builder when Savannah experienced a series of demonstrations and outbreaks of violence this Summer. He appointed his secretary, Monsignor McDonald, and Monsignor Toomey to devote much of their time to try to persuade the white power structure to desegregate hotels, theatres, etc. and try to get Josiah Williams, leader of the Negro demonstrations, out of jail. Obviously he would not have been inclined to want to assume such a role if he weren't moving in his own institutions.

Albany, Georgia

I originally met with this group in the Spring of this year and supplied them with information as to what had been done in other areas and encouraged them to take a similar step in their own. When the diocese of Savannah, of which Albany is a part, announced its school desegregation policy this Summer, the Catholic schools in Albany admitted 15 Catholic Negroes despite the difficulties which the area had experienced.

This informal Catholic Interracial Council has many weaknesses in that all of its members have not developed the convictions which we would like to see. But despite this, some of these very people are continuing to work in this group even though they have been warned by their employers that they are in danger of losing their jobs should their interracial activities bring any difficulties to the businesses for which they work.

Charleston, South Carolina

Bishop Reh invited me to visit with him in August of 1962 after his elevation to a Bishopric. He was extremely interested in moving with Bishop McDonough at my suggestion in order to obtain as much support as possible when he desegregated the Catholic schools. This Fall he began desegregation of his Catholic schools and intends to complete it by next fall. His Chancery office has shown a great amount of interest in our Leadership Conference and has invited us to supply resource people for a Clergy Conference they are having this Spring, and to help with the formation of Catholic Interracial Councils throughout the diocese.

Again we see evidence of the Bishop's willingness to work constructively in crisis situations when he himself is moving in his own institutions. This Summer, Father Friend, appointed by the Bishop to handle crisis situations in the diocese, contacted me for information in regard to this.

Shreveport, Louisiana

Despite the fact that no changes are taking place in Catholic institutions in this diocese (Alexandria), Monsignor Bordelon of St. Joseph's parish, who is highly regarded by the Bishop and the community, has played a leading role in efforts to bring peace and achieve progress. Last February I visited him before a crisis erupted and urged him to try to organize the community. Since then an informal biracial committee has been formed and recently, when high school students demonstrated, Clarence Laws was able to call on Monsignor Bordelon and arrange three meetings with white and Negro leaders in Catholic institutions to discuss approaches to the problem. By the time you read this report, more serious trouble may have broken out in Shreveport and perhaps nothing short of the recommendations which were made for Birmingham and other areas will be the solution to the problem; however, we at least have the satisfaction of knowing that a leading Catholic clergyman is working with other religious leaders to promote peace and progress in the community.

Last month when I visited Shreveport again, I met with a group of white and Negro Catholics. Some of these people have been involved in Friendship House work. They promised to become more actively involved in interracial activities both within the total community and the Catholic community.

Mississippi

From the very beginning of our operation we have been working in Mississippi primarily with Auxiliary Bishop Brunini, who has been on the Executive Committee of the Southern Regional Council. He had encouraged us to try to find Catholics in Mississippi whom we could inform and encourage to work for interracial justice. He introduced us to several people with whom we have kept in touch and supplied information. One of these is the lady who is in charge of Catholic lay activity for the diocese. Because the climate has been so hostile in Mississippi, it has been very difficult for these people to find other Catholics with whom to work.

This Spring I met with a group of Catholic Negroes from the Mississippi Gulf Coast where the climate is somewhat more permissive than in the rest of the State. There were many Negroes in the group eager to do something. Our suggestion to attempt to register Negroes in Catholic schools and to seek admittance to other Catholic institutions was seized upon eagerly and 15 to 20 of them attempted this. Unfortunately, Bishop Gerow learned what we had done and the following letter indicates his feelings towards my working in his diocese. He also complained to NCWC, and it is possible that this has had some effect on our relations with NCWC.

BISHOP'S RESIDENCE
237 East Amite Street

Mr. Henry Cabirac
National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice
1046 Baronne Street
New Orleans 13, Louisiana

Dear Henry:

I have your letter of July 5.

I want to say first of all that I resent your coming into the Diocese and giving talks without consulting myself and without having learned from me what my policy is in the race question.

Secondly, I resent the fact that you spoke as you did. Immediately after your talk I have received several applications from colored people to enter our white schools. While eventually we are going to admit them I do feel that our white people should have a period of preparation beforehand, and this period of preparation we are going through now.

Since I feel that you have been imprudent in the past, I feel that I cannot trust you further, and therefore I ask you to stay out of Mississippi.

With every best wish, I am

Sincerely yours in Christ,

Most Reverend R. O. Gerow
Bishop of Natchez-Jackson

Although we have not been given permission to resume work in the diocese, Mr. Ahmann had a very fruitful visit in Jackson, late in July, with Bishop Gerow, and many of his top administrators and officials.

We look forward to working again in the diocese of Natchez-Jackson.

OTHER AREAS OF INTEREST

Atlanta, Georgia

Reports from the Anti-Defamation League representatives who attended the last Ku Klux Klan meeting in Atlanta on August 31st indicated that the tone of the meeting was more anti-Catholic than anything else. Probably Archbishop Hallinan's vigorous actions on his schools and hospitals and President Kennedy's identification with the Civil Rights Bill have resulted in this. Unfortunately, the white Protestant community of Atlanta hasn't responded to pleas from the Catholic and Jewish communities to stand up more on the race issue. It is my understanding that there isn't a white Protestant minister in Atlanta who is willing to recommend, even confidentially, to his most select parishioners such things as Home Visits. Recently, when a Negro Baptist minister attempted to enter a white Baptist church in Atlanta and was prevented from doing so, he picketed the church. The white minister and the congregation brought charges against him and had him sentenced to 18 months in jail for disturbing the peace.

Archbishop Hallinan's desegregation of Catholic hospitals hasn't had the catalytic effect on the whole community it would have had if there were a substantial Catholic population. Even so, a representative of the American Jewish Committee in Atlanta has stated that Archbishop Hallinan's action has proven to the entire community that this could be done successfully in private hospitals.

Huntsville, Alabama

This year 22 white children enrolled in a formerly all-Negro Catholic school with a total attendance of 120. Two of the four PTA officers are white. The reason given me by the white parents, none of whom are from the South, for sending their children to the Catholic school is that they wanted to give them a Catholic education and this was the only school open to them.

Pensacola, Florida (part of the Mobile-Birmingham Diocese.)

You will undoubtedly remember the unsuccessful efforts of a Catholic Negro to register his child in a white Catholic school in my last report. Despite this discouraging outlook, Jack Sisson, with the cooperation of Dr. Boyd, a prominent Negro dentist, led a group which was successful in meeting with the white Catholic power structure. Eventually, Sisson and Boyd got the group to write a letter in January of this year to Archbishop Toolen requesting an audience to discuss racial justice in the entire Catholic community. Since then the Catholic schools of Pensacola have opened to all races and several Negro students attend Catholic High there, and one student is in a formerly all-white parochial grade school.

Lafayette, Louisiana

Even though Bishop Schexnayder told me over two years ago that he would welcome more complaints from the Catholic Negro community to give him an excuse to do something, I have had an extraordinarily difficult time getting this sort of action. Because, in Lafayette, there is a great amount of tolerance for a Deep South community, the Negro community didn't feel sufficiently motivated to start trying to improve their situation until very recently. After making many attempts to encourage various groups in Lafayette to start attempting to gain admittance to Catholic facilities, I finally found a priest, Father Kichak of Opelousas, Louisiana, who met with me and six Negro Catholics to discuss what they can do. Shortly after this, I received an invitation from the Opelousas NAACP, which is forming, to speak at a general meeting.

The Grail movement, which has a house and six girls in Lafayette, has been most eager to do something. I have been cooperating with them and have been instrumental in helping them secure a small foundation grant to assist with their Voter Registration Project. Because there are more Catholic Negroes (80,000) living in the diocese than any other diocese of the country, this is extremely important. Not only do we hope to encourage a large number to register in order to create a better political climate in the state, but there are prospects that some of the interest and energy will spill over into all Civil Rights fields in the area.

North Carolina

The National Conference on Religion and Race stimulated Bishop Waters into inviting me to North Carolina for a week to go with him to the five largest cities throughout the diocese to address the clergy and laity on Civil Rights. We addressed audiences of 50 to 125 in Raleigh, Durham, Greensboro, Asheville, and Charlotte, and talked to a group of his young priests. We encouraged them to form and strengthen the existing Councils in Raleigh and Durham and to work for racial justice in the total community.

Nashville, Tennessee

A spirited group of white and Negro Catholics skillfully brought together by George Barrett, our Board member from this area, have been meeting for more than six months quietly behind the scenes to effect changes. Despite the fact that Nashville Catholic schools have been desegregated in principle since 1954, Negroes still have difficulty in gaining admittance to some. When Bishop Adrian was approached by a group about this subject, he rebuffed them. Taking the matter into their own hands, they wrote the Apostolic Delegate about the situation. Shortly after this Bishop Adrian apologized to those he had refused admittance and since then they have been admitted. This group is also responsible for the opening of the Catholic hospital and getting one of the Catholic high schools to permit Negroes to play on its basketball team.

Memphis, Tennessee

Here we find a group started originally by Catholic Negroes who have followed the same pattern as those in Nashville. When refused admittance to white Catholic schools by Bishop Adrian, they wrote the Apostolic Delegate, sending Bishop Adrian a copy. Shortly after this, all Catholic schools began desegregation from the first to the fourth grades. The same group then asked the pastor of a white church who was known to be sympathetic to interracial activities to start a Catholic interracial council. The pastor of this parish was able to involve some of his leaders in the project and this group has invited me to Memphis on several occasions.

New Orleans, Louisiana

This city continues to be one of contradictions. Whereas on one hand continued progress in the community is being made, efforts by the opposition have redoubled to interfere with further progress.

During the past year lunch counters have been desegregated, merit employment has begun in department stores and city administration, "Jim Crow" signs have been removed from all city buildings, and the desegregation of some hotels has begun. Tulane University has been desegregated; both public and Catholic school desegregation has been increased substantially and strife was eliminated at the opening of schools this year. Most of the above changes took place after Archbishop Rummel's dramatic move in opening the Catholic schools. This gave heart to others in the community to make changes.

On the other hand, the most versatile, imaginative segregationist in the whole South continues to pour talent, time and money into weekly radio programs, automatic telephone answering devices, the printing of his own newspaper entitled "The Catholic Warrior", the distribution of handbills and other attacks on the New Orleans Catholic Council -- including a threat to sue for having his segregationist organization, Parents and Friends of Catholic Children, banned from the air -- and, exhibiting of sympathy for those who bombed a school in Buras, Louisiana. Leander Perez is indeed a formidable opponent. In addition to this, although it was not directly his work, a priest was beaten up in Perez's parish (county) for instructing an integrated confirmation class. He exploited the publicity Archbishop Cody received by attending the National Conference on Religion and Race and has made it difficult for Archbishop Cody to effect changes.

Archbishop Cody continues to permit the Council to remain in existence but act only as a gatherer of information for him and as a source of information to interested Catholics, such as the one who called recently for techniques for desegregating his three Frostop Stores. Nevertheless, the Council has been active behind the scenes in doing such things as being instrumental in getting the Chancellor to give the invocation for the largest peaceful demonstration to date in New Orleans, acting as a bridge between the white power structure and the Negro leaders, encouraging the officers and members to participate in other interracial activities, and initiating efforts to get Catholic Negro leaders to urge Archbishop Cody to open all Catholic institutions immediately. We predict that the Catholic hospitals will be desegregated within six months.

In his latest book, "The Negro Leadership Class", Dr. Daniel Thompson says that he believes that much of the credit for the desegregation of Catholic schools was attributable to the New Orleans Council. He states, "This summary action on the part of the Roman Catholic hierarchy, desegregating all of its schools, stands as the most significant gain Negroes have made in their all-out bid for equal, unsegregated education. It is particularly noteworthy that this decision was reached solely as a result of diplomatic negotiations between the Negro and white laymen and the Catholic hierarchy." Negro Civil Rights leaders are urging the Mayor to extend public school desegregation based on the successful efforts of the Catholic schools.

Jack Nelson, our vice-chairman, continues to stand out by his courageous actions. The most notable of these included being the first white in the South successfully to initiate and obtain the desegregation of a private, non-sectarian university (Tulane), and obtaining a court order permitting the Indians of Houma, Louisiana to attend formerly all-white schools.

CURSILLOS

We have sent literature about Cursillos to all Southern Catholic Interracial Council chaplains and residents, and to all Southern bishops, and replies from them indicate that they have begun to explore the possibilities of conducting Cursillos.

My own experience with a Cursillo earlier this year leads me to recommend them highly. It packs the same kind of punch as a successful Home Visit program but adds above this a strong spiritual motivation.

THANKS

We want to express our thanks and appreciation to Father Twomey, S.J. and the Institute of Industrial Relations without whose help we couldn't have gotten started. They gave us office space and clerical assistance without the expectation of any return.

Special 1963-1964 Southern Field Service Program Goals Adopted by the Board of Directors of the
November 17, 1963

1. Continued travel and mail service to Southern Catholic dioceses, as well as to Catholic Interracial Councils and similar organizations. Efforts will be made to expand the Conference organizational base in the South. Service and consultation will continue to be provided to ad hoc groups of Catholics interested in racial integration.

2. The SFS has scheduled a South-wide Leadership Conference in race relations for Atlanta in April/May, 1964. In addition to servicing affiliate Council leadership, the Conference will provide to administrators of all Catholic institutions -- hospitals, retreat houses, schools, diocesan organizations, social service programs -- opportunity to share information on successful desegregation. Workshops and clinics will present the success stories of administrators who have carried out vigorous programs for interracial justice, and develop program ideas to be implemented in Catholic institutions and organizations throughout the South.

   The leadership conference will provide special workshops for Bishops, administrators of diocesan programs, labor leaders, businessmen, professional men, politicians. These workshops will be conducted by those in the various leadership groups who have already provided leadership in race relations, as well as leaders of civil rights groups.

   Special efforts will be made in SFS programming to follow up the leadership training conference so as to produce the maximum results for racial integration. Services will be implemented, according to the needs expressed at the conference.

3. Concentration on the desegregation and implementation of interracial programs in Catholic hospitals, schools, Church related employment, as well as the use of the purchasing power of the Catholic Church; particularly in heavily Catholic metropolitan areas such as Houston, New Orleans and Miami. In these communities, particularly, action in the Catholic community will have a catalytic effect on the total community.

4. Continued provision of services to extend parochial school desegregation throughout the South. Four dioceses still maintain policies of school segregation, though impending change has been announced in one, and there are indications of movement in another. Parochial school desegregation has frequently touched off deeper commitment by the Catholic population to interracial justice, and affected the civil community as well.

5. Preparation of a report on Catholic action in racial crisis areas. A simple report detailing a range of possible actions, depending on resources, as well as a brochure or pamphlet on examples of successful Catholic initiatives in creative mediation will be developed.

6. Efforts will be expanded to work with Negro Catholics in the South, through parochial networks and heavily Negro fraternal organizations, in an effort to encourage Negro Catholic leadership to assist in the successful integration of the dual (separate Negro and white) parish system of the Catholic Church in parts of the South. The SFS will attempt to help those missionary orders of priests doing extensive Negro parochial work define specific program goals in this regard.

7. We will continue to seek out a priest to travel the South to provide race relations consultation.

8. Preparation of a special organizational, educational, fund-raising brochure for the Southern Field Service.

9. Preparation of a report on the dual parish system in the South, and the caste social system within the Church, with attention to program suggestions for breaking these patterns.

10. Increased public relations efforts designed to communicate success stories of Catholic involvement in securing racial integration in the South.

Dear Henry:

Thanks for your long and good letter re T2W. As to your questions, certainly it is never good to get a group of "hysterical parents" together anywhere. And the New Orleans decisions related generally to a unique situation at a unique time after an impressive array of hysterical women had dominated the scene. In general, a "head in the sand" approach seems to me unwise. Little Rock proved the classic example of this and new Tuskegee follows as an example of where some of us really goofed.

I quite agree with your comments about the broad spread, getting as much to happen as possible. I hope this is where you can make a unique contribution, bringing these special interests to bear in communities under question. Which reminds me, I hope we can have the school conference immediately after the Washington meeting.

We only have one copy of the report of the Louisiana Un-American Activities Committee report. But you can get one by requesting it from them at Baton Rouge.

Look forward to seeing you on the 12th.

Sincerely,

Mr. Paul Anthony
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth St., N.W.

Dear Paul:

Congratulations on your "Transition without Tragedy". It is difficult to suggest anything which would improve on this as far as preapring a community to accept school desegregation or for that matter any type of desegregation.

There are a few comments which I would like to make which you have covered in your note that of course each area is different. In the desegregation of the remaining areas which are primarily hard-core, do you think it is desirable to get a group of hysterical parents together to escalate their fears? We found in the New Orleans Catholic school desegregation that our Public Relations committee, who were composed of members, public relations officers for corporations and hospitals and psychologists, recommended that there be no discussion of this prior to the opening of schools.

Unquestionably there are differences in the Catholic and public school systems, however what you might expect from a relatively enlightened parents group in Chattanooga would not necessarily apply to a group in Jackson, Miss. Perhaps I am mistaken in this and such meetings might be benefical.

Another thought that comes to my mind and I am sure that you are aware of it but were not able to put in such a book is that religious organizations should be encouraged to at least begin desegregation in their congregations, hospitals, schools, etc., rather than just ask for law and order. The broader this thing is spread, the better it will be, and it's pretty difficult to bring this point home on religous grounds if a particular faith only talks and doesn't act. I know this very well from some of the unfortunate experiences which our own Church has had in similar circumstances. I realize, of course, that the degree of authority that can be exercised by those who wish to do this varies considerably according to their faith.

Paul, is it too difficult for you to send me copies of the Louisiana Unamerican Activities report on SCEF?

See you February 12.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Paul:

You are probably aware of the National Conference on Religion and Race's meeting April 13-15 in St. Louis. Originally I had intended to attend this conference, but because I will be visiting some of the key areas selected by the Southern Inter-agencies, it will be impossible for me to do so at that time.

However, would it be possible for us to appoint a representative from one of the religiously oriented agencies to attend this meeting to co-ordinate our plans with whatever the agencies attending the National Conference on Religion and Race are planning? If this is feasible, we might want to discuss at our meeting what information we should disclose and, even more important, what we should ask agencies outside of the South to do or not to do. Not that they would agree to this, but it might be well to at least inform them.

Yours sincerely,

Henry

Mr. Paul Anthony

Dear Paul:

Representatives of the Southern Inter-agencies present at our last meeting have asked me to investigate the possibility of including either Lafayette or Baton Rouge among the key cities for public accomodations. I contacted both Msgr. Sigur of Lafayette and Wade Mackie of Baton Rouge and feel the prospects are good in both places. However, the Negro community of Lafayette has been extremely docile and hasn't made the advances which the Negro community of Baton Rouge has. After giving the matter thorough consideration and discussing it with both of them, we decided that Baton Rouge, not Lafayette, should be included as a key city and subject to the approval of his organization, Wade Mackie has agreed to serve as the Co-ordinator.

You are probably knocking youself out preparing the material which you promised us, so it won't do much good for me to request that you send it out immediately. However, I have wired both Bishop Waters of Raleigh and Bishop Reh of Charleston for an appointment next week and I would like to be able to give them something on this, if possible, at that time.

See you at our Co-ordinators meeting.

Yours sincerely,

Henry

Dear Father Mark:

Southern human relations agencies have selected a dozen key city where they think that the chances are best to implement a policy of public accomodations. Huntsville is one of these cities.

Mr. Monroe Schalctus of the Atlanta Anti-Defamation League was appointed Co-ordinator of all efforts for the Huntsville area and will probably contact you in the near future.

May I call on you alone or with some of the leaders of your parish, whichever you think is preferable to discuss what might be done in the Huntsville Catholic community to help this effort, the night of March 31?

Yours sincerely,

Henry Cabirac

Civil rights: looking ahead at enforcement

Key Administration officials and even leaders of the coming filibuster in the Senate generally assume that Congress will approve a broad, tough civil rights bill this year.

Opponents will fight hardest against the public accommodations and hiring regulations approved earlier this month by the House [BW Feb.15 '64,p28]. The House bill could be softened.

But the odds now favor strong legislation in both of these sensitive areas. Established business practices seem likely to be outlawed and not just in the South.

Officials who will be in charge of enforcement of any new law are already thinking about the problems they—and businessmen—will face after enactment.

One meeting with chain store executives, operators of chain hotels, motels, and others already has been held with Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy and his civil rights aides. Other informal conferences are scheduled to follow.

Business will be asked to take the lead

What officials fear most is widespread business defiance of new regulations, accompanied by stepped-up Negro militancy. The result could be new racial outbreaks, a flood of legal actions, an overload on enforcement agencies, serious losses to some businesses, and a hardening of attitudes generally.

One official puts the problem this way: "Transition can be smooth or it can be tumultuous and agonizing. We hope businessmen will help us make it smooth."

The Administration wants to avoid the development of a Prohibition-type psychology toward the law—the feeling that enforcement will be lax and violations easy.

Here are some of the ideas that will be suggested to businessmen in Southern and border states: Take down any "white only" signs that may still be up in their establishments; abolish segregated restrooms; use titles of respect such as "Mr." and "Mrs." in dealing with Negro customers; impress on local news media the importance of a smooth transition; establish direct contact with Negro students of college age who are most likely to become leaders of demonstrations.

Adjusting to new anti-bias hiring rules

The fair employment practices part of any new law will probably affect businesses in every part of the country, not the South alone.

It will be suggested that businessmen can aid the adjustment by taking such steps as these: Abolish separate job classifications for Negroes; break up all-Negro work units; be sure unions do not practice discrimination regarding seniority and promotion lists; appoint qualified Negroes as foremen; closely supervise executives responsible for personnel practices; organize or join community antidiscrimination committees.

A special effort will be asked of businessmen to place qualified Negroes in white-collar jobs.

Top management will be urged to take a blunt "no-nonsense" attitude when ordering subordinates to make changes in existing practices.

HENRY A. CABIRAC, JR.
6211 South Tonti Street
New Orleans, La. 70125

I am presently employed as the Executive Director of the Catholic Council on Human Relations of the Archdiocese of New Orleans and of the Southern Field Service of the National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice. Both of these are race relations organizations. The former is the offical organization of the New Orleans archdiocese and the latter is the national lay organization working in the field.

My job experience is unusual because it combines race relations with business where for 13 years I dealt with owners, architects, engineers, contractors, sub-contractors and material suppliers. I would like to continue in human relations work where I could make the maximum use of my past experience.

As Executive Director of the New Orleans Catholic Council, with whom I have been associated since February 1961, I have been responsible for initiating and implementing programs to promote racial justice in the total community and in Catholic Church facilities such as schools, hsopitals, employment, retreat houses, and parish and diocesan organizations. I work with religious leaders of all faiths, business and professional men, labor leaders, public officals and Civil Rights leaders. My duties with the Southern Field Service, by whom I was employed in July 1961, are similar to those with the Council and cover 14 Southern states.

I am responsible in part for the acceleration of the desegregation of Southern Catholic institutions. This includes the Catholic schools in the Archdiocese of New Orleans and persuading several Southern Bishops to be the first Southern churchmen to make use of the Church's purchasing power for merit employment.

Prior to working for my present employers, I was Vice-president of a mechanical contracting firm from 1948 to 1961. My duties were: (1) labor negotiations and personnel management; (2) sales; and (3) purchasing and awarding contracts.

Personnel management and labor negotiations--My job was to screen and hire engineers, clerical personnel, plumbers, steam fitters, refrigeration mechanics and warehousemen. Our total labor force at times reached 50.

I served on contractors committees negotiating new contracts with the union. I ironed out labor disputes in a 3 state area and a dispute which arose with the national headquarters of one union. It was necessary to go to Washington to settle this dispute.

Sales--I was responsible for promoting and selling contracts for the installation of plumbing, heating, air conditioning, refrigeration, ventilation, industrial piping, power houses, sewer disposal plants, etc, in a 3 state area. This required a knowledge of the market and maintaining favorable contacts with owners, architects, engineers, and general contractors. During the 9 year period annual sales increased from $100,000 to $900,000. The largest single contract I sold was $440,000.

Purchasing--It was my job to secure the most favorable prices and delivery on plumbing, heating, air conditioning, ventilating, sewerage disposal equipment and services and to award purchase orders and subcontracts for these.

Presently I am a member of the Steering Committee of the Southern Interagency Committee which is a clearing house for 50 regional and national human relations organizations working in the South. President Kennedy invited me to the meeting called in the summer for religious leaders to discuss approaches to achieving racial harmony in Southern communities.

Military Service

U.S. Navy, 1944-1946, Classification and Demobilization interviewer. My job as classification interviewer was to classify and assign men to jobs best suited to their interests and aptitudes. As demobilization interviewer, I was responsible for explaing the benefits of the G.I. Bill of Rights to men being discharged and counseling them on their applications.

Education

Grammar school--Public schools in New Orleans

High school --St. Aloysius of New Orleans

College --Tulane University, B.A. of Business Administration, 1947
Human Relations & Group Dynamics, National Training Laboratories, U. of Southern Utah, 1963.

Personal

I am married with 3 children, 39 years old and a Catholic. My wife is a graduate of Loyola University School of Medical Technology. I served a term as a member of the American Cancer Society Board of Directors.

Social

Member of Alhambra Carnival organization and Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Dear Paul:

Just a reminder to you to write to Bishop Gerow urging the integration of Catholic schools and giving some evaluation of the possible effect which that might have on the school situation and race relations in general in Mississippi. You might point out the experiences of other desegregations in the South, perhaps especially that of the parochial schools in Alabama.

The letter doesn't have to be long. It is meant to be one of a series of urgings to Bishop Gerow to make up his mind to go ahead with his desegregation.

Dear Paul:

I will be in Atlanta on the evening of June 28th to take part in a meeting with John Morris. It appears that we will have some time free on the morning of the 29th and on the afternoon of the 30th.

Confidentially, I was disappointed in the meeting of the La. CHR in Baton Rouge on Saturday. The meeting was held in spite of the fact that the nominating committee had not done its work. Personally, I felt that the meeting should have been called off. About 50 people attended and most of them were interested in what they could do in their local areas rather than in a 3 hour reading and adopting of the constitution. I had gone primarily to meet the Board and Officers and so was disappointed at the outcome of the meeting. The election will be on Sept 12th, I believe

Please let me know, if you can, whether you will be in town and when so that I might make some appointments to meet some of our people up there.

Dear Paul:

Benjamin Muse sent me a summary of his visit with Bishop Gerow. Although his own impression, as you told me, was that he did not feel convinced that Gerow would move to open the schools this Fall, I still feel that it is necessary to continue to supply Bishop Gerow with information and contacts which will urge him, with all prudence, to formulate a plan for the Fall. To this end, I have continued to try to get the right kinds of people to call on the Bishop or write.

I feel that it is helpful for him to hear from various sources what his expectations might be if he opens the schools at the same time the public schools are opened. For example, in Alabama Governor Wallace went on record saying that the Catholic schools are private and that the state had no right to interfere with their decisions and actions. In both New Orleans and Alabama, I think there had been some fear of government reprisals in taking away free lunch programs, textbooks and in other ways causing financial loss to the parochial schools. Anything that you can say to Gerow which would evaluate the possibility of this threat with his institutions would be helpful.

Then too the usual plea of Church action in helping the rest of the community is a valid one, particularly coming from a reliable source such as Southern Regional Council.

Anything that you can do to keep reliable information and encouragement going to Bishop Gerow will be of decided help to the whole state of Mississippi. As you know, the decision rests with the Bishop.

If you are going to Mississippi anytime within the next six weeks, by all means plan to set aside time to see Gerow. It is as simple as asking either his appointment secretary or Father Bernard Law to arrange an appointment time.

Sincerely yours,

Jack

P.S. As you probably know, either from a letter that I wrote (or from John Morris), I will be in Atlanta on the evening of the 28th to draw up an agenda for our meeting starting about noon on the 29th. I will have some time, as I believe I indicated, on the morning of the 29th or on the afternoon of the 30th if you will be available.

Dear Ben:

In looking at a copy of your report on Memphis, I was reminded that we have a Catholic Interracial Council there which got going last Fall and is doing a very good job.

Enclosed is a list of our Catholic Interracial Councils over the country, including the South, and a list of our key contact people which should be very useful to you as you travel about the South. The degree of commitment of these key contacts as well as the intimacy of our relationship varies considerably, but I am sure that any of them would be approachable by you.

Sincerely yours in Christ,

Mr. Paul Anthony
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

Dear Paul:

Last week I discussed with you my deep concern over the situation in St. Augustine, based primarily on a visit there July 22-23. This concern is based primarily on the open activity and co-operation of a number of "hate" organizations and the absence of any apparent leadership in the community to reduce the tension within which the "hate" groups operate.

The Daytona Beach paper of July 22 told that "St. Augustine has become the unoffical headquarters for the National States Rights Party...". The NSRP candidate for President is John Casper; for Vice-president, J.B.Stoner of the KKK in Atlanta; and the "prime mover on behalf of the NSRP in (the local counties) is Hoss Manucy, leader of the Ancient City Gun Club and other organizations involved in recent racial disorders in St. Augustine. He heads a tight knit group of members armed with two-way radios, an internal police force, and a secret service organization, which, until now, has defied detection."

"Stoner and his associates are apparent determined to make St. Augustine an example of how they would 'handle the Negro situation'."

Stoner as well as Connie Lynch of California, a firey segregationist speaker, have been meeting regularly in St. Augustine. In addition to the above, Leander Perez of Louisiana, we know from local sources, has been invited to speak in St. Augustine and would have already been there had he not injured his foot.

It seems to me that special efforts should be made to reduce the conflict there and to make the place as unattractive for these anti-Negro, anti-Catholic, anti-Jewish organizations as is possible.

One hopeful sign which I have read of in the last week, is the arrest of certain of the KKK leadership there on charges of holding unathorized public gatherings; but more than this, I am afraid, is necessary.

Sincerely yours,

Jack (fl)

Dear Paul:

How have you been? Since I haven't visited Atlanta recently I miss seeing most of my friends working in the intergroup field.

Paul I'm still looking for the right job in human relations. I turned down a job for the Youngstown, Ohio Commission and the Catholic Council in Omaha, Nebraska largely because I didn't want to brave the harsh winters.

Do you know of any openings in the South, the Southwest or West coast? Tell everyone hello for me.

Yours sincerely

Dear Henry:

Your letter of October 20 has gone unanswered until now because I was out of the office during most of October.

Certainly I will keep your needs in mind.

While I doubt your interest, you should know the Mississippi Council on Human Relations is looking for a director. Besides being a very rough spot, the position could offer little security (a guarantee of only one year) and not a great salary ($8,000 probably). But, should you be interested you might write the president, The Rev. Duncan Gray, Jr., P. O. Box 266, Oxford, Mississippi. As you know, Father Law of Jackson is also very involved in the direction of MCHR.

Keep me informed.

Sincerely,

RE: 1964 Staff Report on Public Education

Gentlemen:

Upon perusing the 1964 Staff Report I notice that Escambia County, Florida is not included although the schools there in Pensacola were ordered desegregated after four years of legal delay in 1962. And the Catholic parochial schools were integrated there in 1963. I have noticed this lack of infomation in Southern Regional Council reports as well as in other places and would like to "straighten the record."

"Let us quit working for our Negro brother. Let us start working with him. It is not enough that we ourselves have not discriminated against our neighbors; we must take positive action to break down the vast, accumulated machinery of discrimination which has, to our shame, been built into the institutions of our contemporary American society."

BISHOP JOSEPH A. DURICK
Auxiliary, Diocese of Nashville
March 21, 1965

Speeches and presentations like those given by Bishop Durick, Msgr. Josiah Chatham, and Father Harold Perry highlighted the convention sponsored by NCCIJ, held in Memphis in mid-March. Enthusiasm ran high at this first convention of its kind to be held in the South. All Southern states were represented. The 225 attendees included 30 nuns and 50 priests.

The proceedings of this convention including workshop presentations and a special institute for nuns will be printed in the next issue of SOCIAL DIGEST. Copies may be obtained for fifty cents (payment in stamps acceptable); bulk rates will be available. Send your order now to the above address so that enough copies may be printed.

Re: Program Planning Committee meeting on Thursday, June 3, 1965 held in Southern Regional Council office, Atlanta, Georgia for Southern Catholic Leadership Conference

Absent: Dunbar, Rev. Young(Miss Cotton represented him), Msgr. O'Rourke, Miss Roach.

Father Cronin reported that NCWC could not cosponsor this meeting.

Miss Margaret Roach has been freed from her duties with the National Council of Catholic Women to act as conference coordinator starting June 21.

Invitations to the conference will be sent to Ordinaries (by Archbishop Hallinan) to diocesan officals and policy makers (lay and religious) of various religious organizations and in the civil community. A special effort will be made to assure that Negro Catholic leaders come from as many dioceses as possible.

The main speakers and panelists will be contacted before the next program committee meeting on Monday, June 14 (details below).

The committee completed consideration of five major presentation areas, the selection of main speakers and alternates, and panelists. The next meeting will deal with the structuring and handling of work groups, clinics, and the time schedule of the convention.

It was suggested that Archbishop Hallinan would be the ideal keynote speaker. However he was also first choice to give the paper in the opening presentation (Sherry will persuade with His Excellency).

Presentation #1 - The Church in Society would consider at least the following: pastoral concerns; working with the Negro and not for him; race relations in its ecumencial aspects; relation of the church to society; reaction of other denominations to Catholic activity in the public sphere; the double parish system; some evaluation of the usual diocesan structure and policy and their adequacy in meeting the present problems of human relations; it should suggest some necessary special measures and emphases. Speakers in order of preference:

1. Archbishop Hallinan
2. Father Bernard Cooke, S.J.
   (Father Bernard Haaring)
3. Father Gremillion

Father Leonard, S.S.J.
Father Fichter, S.J.
Msgr. Higgins, NCWC
Father Joe Connolly, Baltimore
Msgr. Tracy Ellis
Msgr. Roy Rihn, San Antonio
Msgr. Marvin Bordelon, Shreveport

Panelists in order of preference:

1. Father Bernard Cooke
2. Jean Fairfax
3. Mary Varilla

Rev. John Morris, ESCRU
Father Leonard, S.S.J.
Les Dunbar, SRC
C. T. Vivian, SCLC
Father Ouellet, S.S.E.
Sister Jacqueline, St. Louis

Presentation #2 - Understanding of change. This will deal with change in economics, civil rights legislation, the Negro movement itself, and poverty programs as well as the basic conditions which brought about the unrest and need for change.

Suggested speakers in order of preference:

1. Ralph McGill, The Atlanta Constitution
   (or Eugene Patterson)
2. Whitney Young

Leslie Dunbar
Vivian Henderson, Fisk economist and new president of Atlanta University
Governor Leroy Collins
Virginia Dabbs, president SRC
Robert Penn Warren
Percy Walker
Martin Luther King
Dr. Herman Long
Leon Keyserling(controversial)

Panel members in order of preference:
1. Les Dunbar (Frances Pauley)
2. Msgr. O'Rourke (rural)
3. Hyman Bookbinder (economics)
4. Andy Young (movement)
Dr. Earl Williams
Dr. Whitney Young
Norman Francis
R. Sargent Shriver
Jack Conway
Father McKnight
Dave Dennis, CORE
Dr. Silver (Closed Society)
Mrs. Joe Yancey (Sherry)
Sister Mary Leo
Dr. Banjamin Mays

(In talking with Les Dunbar after the meeting, I gathered these observations: Patterson was probably more up to date than McGill; that Dabbs is an effective speaker; and that he would recommend Frank Smith (Six times Mississippi U.S. Representative now with TVA in Knoxville or Chatanooga) over anyone we had listed).

Presentation #3 - Presentation of various structured approaches dealing with human relations demands in various localities (it may be wise to have a second presentation on this topic). The basic aim here is the explication of needed diocesan policies; and the idea of teamwork or helpful organization to implement policy; also to examine what resources exist within church and community to be harnessed. The question of the double parish system might be raised but would be better dealt with fully under presentation #5.

Speakers in order of preference:

1. Bishop Coleman Carroll, Miami
2. Archbishop Hallinan

Panel members in order of preference:
1. Father Francis Doyle(Chairman of St. Louis Archdiocesan Commission on Human Rights)
2. Father John McCarthy, Houston, Chairman of Community Relations Committee
3. Ahmann or Sisson
4. Father John Cronin

Presentation #4 - Communication of the Negro movement for civil rights and human dignity especially in the South and covering the ideas of legalism, psychology of activism, motivation, why are the people and the leader the way they are, theories of non-violence vs. violence, examination of the unrest and frustration that characterizes the Negro community, the relationship of Negroes to the church, an explanation of the different civil rights groups and how their strategies vary. We would also like to cover what produces Negro leadership, who picks the leaders, and racism in general.

Major speakers would be:
Rev. James Bevel (why we can't wait)
Bayard Rustin (philosophy of non-violence)
Ahamann and Sisson will investigate the possibility of having C. T. Vivian speak on tactics.

In this particular presentation it was felt that a panel was not needed if you have two or three main speakers. However, other names suggested to cover various aspects of the topic were:
Dr. Kenneth Clark (unrest and frustration of the Negro)
Julian Bond
John Lewis
Jim Foreman
Dr. King
James Farmer
Roy Wilkins
Rev. Andrew Young
Howard Zinn

Presentation #5 (this had not been considered in previous discussions about program) deals with problems of segregation in the church, perhaps especially relating to religious orders (male and female) and would deal with vocations, the clarification of policy as regards race relations within orders and the actions that have been taken or might be taken to implement these policies. Undoubtly involved in this is the consideration of the relationship of orders to dioceses.
Presentation by:
Father O'Dea, S.S.J.
Father Perry, S.V.D.
Perhaps someone to make a presentation for female religious

Panelists might include someone from Houston (where they are abolishing non-territorial parishes), Father Bernard Law, Jackson, Mississippi and a white diocesan pastor who is facing the problems of a parish changing from white to Negro.

Ahmann and Sisson will arrange to have all Negro civil rights organizations represented at least in clinics.

While the clinics undoubtedly will not be able to go into adequate detail (for example, schools, hospitals) the idea will be brought into the work groups (or into the abbreviated clinics) of planning for another conference to deal specifically with the interest of these groups.

Sherry is holding a meeting of the local arrangements committee on June 7 and Sisson will supply them with the necessary outlines to guide their work. 140 rooms have been reserved for July 29/31 at the Atlanta Hilton Inn(at the airport).

The program committee will meet next on Monday, June 14, 10:30a.m. to 5:00p.m. at St. Augustine High School
1911 Law Street
New Orleans, Louisiana
Phone: 943-6593

If you want me to make reservations for you I would be glad to do so.

THE CATHOLIC COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

THE ARCHDIOCESE OF NEW ORLEANS

PRESENTS

A PLAN FOR ACHIEVING CHRISTIAN RACIAL JUSTICE AND CHARITY

A PLAN FOR ACHIEVING CHRISTIAN RACIAL JUSTICE AND CHARITY

I. Objectives:

a. To promote good relationships among peoples of all races in the Archdiocese of New Orleans;

b. To make known the teachings of the Catholic Church on matters of interracial justice and charity, particularly as summarized by all of the Cardinals, Archbishops and Bishops throughout the United States in their statement issued in 1958 and entitled "Discrimination and the Christian Conscience"; and the application of these principles to everyday living experiences;

c. To work in cooperation with public and responsible private agencies, in strengthening the fabric of America's Democratic way of life through the promotion of good human relations and;

d. To exhort all of the clergy, religious and laity to offer their daily prayers, good works and sacrifices for the peaceful and charitable solution of all problems of human relations.

For a more complete explanation, please read attached Statement of Purpose.

II. How the above is being accomplished:

This organization is run by the Officers (Executive Committee) Directors and the various committees with the assistance of the Executive Director in accordance with the attached Charter and By-Laws. Some of the outstanding citizens of both the white and Negro community are listed among the Officers and Directors. C. Ellis Henican, President, is a prominent man in the community and has been involved in many civic and religious activities. Francis Doyle and James Gilly are Vice-Presidents of the National Bank of Commerce and Whitney Bank respectively. James Gilly was selected by the Times Picayune in 1960, as a citizen who had contributed most to the welfare of the community. Doctor Leonard Burns, second Vice-President, Negro physician, is first Vice-President of the Urban League, a Knight of Peter Claver and is involved in many civic and religious activities. Dr. Paul M. Hebert, our First Vice-President, is the Dean of the L.S.U. Law School.

Functions of the Executive Director, Henry Cabirac, Jr. - C. Ellis Henican has advised someone in another area interested in forming a Catholic Council on Human Relations "a competent Executive Director is absolutely indispensable to our operations.

In my own opinion, our own Council would be doomed to failure were it not for the fact that we have an Executive Director who dedicates most of his time and almost all of his efforts to the success of our undertaking.

The project should be adequately financed and it is not likely that sufficient funds can be obtained from dues to meet the expenses. We pay our Executive Director $600.00 per month and he is worth every cent of it!

The job of the Executive Director for the Council is basically the same as any other social service organization—that is, as a community organizer, he is to act as a catalyst to supply ideas and to initiate and encourage the officers, directors and members to carry out the objectives of the organization. Some of the ways he does this is to attend all committee meetings in a liaison capacity, meet weekly with the president, and corresponds regularly with the National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice in Chicago.

The National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice has selected him to serve as a resource person for the Diocesan Seminar on School Integration with Mathew Ahmann, Executive Director of the National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice and Benjamin Muse, author of Virginia's Massive Resistance and on the clinic on Planning Better Programs, at the National Convention at the University of Detroit, Detroit, Michigan, August 24 - 27.

In order to accomplish the above objectives, the Council's main functions are to do research, mediate difficulties and to present pertinent information to both clergy and laity in various ways. In other words, our job can be compared favorably with the research and public relations department of a large business. Securing information and presenting it to management enables it to make decisions which, in time, influence the customers of the organization. Perhaps the best way to illustrate the effectiveness of this is to look at the enclosed chart. (See page 3)

III. What has been done?

The information contained in the chart was obtained by writing six other archdioceses and two border states in order to determine what had been accomplished and how it had been accomplished. You can readily see from looking at the chart that where there is a Catholic Interracial Council or a Catholic Council on Human Relations, such as in St. Louis, Washington, D. C., and San Antonio, there has been far more accomplished than in cities where one doesn't exist. The effect of the accomplishments on the entire community is indicated by the statement the public school officials of St. Louis who have publicly admitted that the successful integration of their schools, in 1955, was due in great measure to the good example of the Catholic Church. Undoubtedly, in New Orleans, where the Catholic population is 50%, whatever is accomplished in the Catholic community will have a tremendous effect on the entire community. This fact is clearly demonstrated when we consider the discriminatory laws passed by the State attempting to discourage the parochial schools from integrating.

Learning what has been done in other southern archdioceses has made us realize just how little has been accomplished here and strengthen our convictions and determination to do everything in our power to change this situation to correct the mistaken image of the Church.

The following Committees of the Council have proposed various projects which the Board of Directors approved at their last meeting, July 7.

a. Priest Advisory Committee - Chairman, Monsignor Gordon Raine - 1. A fund-raising drive will be started among the Pastors to raise $2,000 to reprint 10,000 copies of Father Guste's pamphlet "For Men of Good Will", which probably shows the keenest insight into our interracial problem in the Archdiocese of New Orleans and does an excellent job of persuasion to change attitudes in light of Christian principles. This $2,000 will be a revolving fund and will be used to have additional copies reprinted as soon as the existing ones are sold. 2. A Sub-Committee composed of Monsignor Bezou, Superintendent of parochial schools; Father Yamauchi, S. J., Loyola University; and Father Costello, instructor at Notre Dame Seminary has been appointed to draw up a course on racial justice for the teaching nuns and brothers.

b. Membership - (at present there are approximately 250 members) - Chairman, Greater New Orleans Committee, Winter Trapolin; Baton Rouge, Hermann Schluter, Jr.— This committee's work has been aided considerably by the meeting called by the Archbishop on June 20 at Notre Dame Seminary for all pastors at which the Archbishop, Monsignor Plauche, and C. Ellis Henican addressed the pastors and told them of the need of the Council and urged them to cooperate in the membership drive. Since then, the Membership Committee has swung into action and is in the process of delivering 10,000 copies of the 1958 Bishops' Statement "Discrimination and the Christian Conscience" and 10,000 membership applications, a copy of which is attached, to the pastors. They are urging the pastors to comply with the Archbishop's order to call a meeting of the leading parishners and all right-thinking Catholics in every parish to explain the Bishops' Statement to them, answer any questions they might have and urge them to sign the membership application.

c. Public Relations—Chairman, M. F. Everett; Vice-Chairman H. Charbonnet—This committee is composed of 16 people, 14 of whom are professionals in their respective field of news media—that is, radio, television, newspaper, colleges and universities, etc. Thus far the committee has urged the Archbishop to invite Cardinal Rawgumba of Africa to address a general membership meeting while he was in this country. His Excellency did this, but the Cardinal was unable to attend because of an overcrowded schedule. A sub-committee will issue a monthly newsletter, the first of which will be mailed to the members this week. A blank copy is attached showing the heading for the newsletter. The committee has also urged the showing of a film strip with sound, entitled "The Advance of Communism and Turning the Tide," devoted to spelling out the dangers of communism and also the causes, which include racial discrimination. They have also advocated that Catholic Action, the official diocesan organ, carry factual account of successful stories of integration in southern cities, which is considered even more effective than editorials. The Speakers Bureau, which is a division of this committee, has already received two invitations from parish Holy Name societies to speak and have done so. The entire committee has scheduled another meeting to be held in ten days to do the following: 1. Determine what literature the Council should stock and distribute. 2. To discuss the possibility of having informed educated Negroes appear on television as experts in their particular field; law, medicine, education, etc. to change the image of the Negro in the community. 3. Invite the Archbishop of Ghana to address a meeting of the general membership committee when he is here in September and 4. To discuss the feasibility of a column on racial justice in Catholic Action.

d. Schools - Chairman, Mrs. Clara del Marmol - This committee has made arrangements with the Cenacle Retreat House in New Orleans, which is well known for their fine stand on Christian racial justice, to conduct retreats designed to promote racial justice for the 500 lay teachers in the parochial schools and the teachers in public schools. They are also preparing a kit to be distributed in all Catholic schools this fall on racial justice.

e. Finance - Chairman, Francis Doyle - His Excellency, Archbishop Rummel has promised $2500 donation. Our membership campaign is expected to net a minimum of at least a 1,000 new members which will mean $3000 to $3500. In addition to this, the fund-raising drive in New Orleans is about to begin and the National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice is attempting to secure funds from several foundations for us.

Budget Requirements-

Salaries:

Executive Director	$7500.
Secretary	4200.
Total:		$12700.
Pay-roll taxes		1270.
Rent		2500.
Telephone		1000.
Travel		400.
Postage		500.
Office Supplies		700.
Miscellaneous		500.
Total:			$19670.

Budget Requirements - (Continuation)

	Brought forward	$19670.
Schools - Literature for Catholic Elementary & High School students - 90,000 x .20	$18000.
Public Relations - Literature for Adults in Parish Organizations - 10,000 x .20	2000.
Priest Advisory - Literature for Teachers, religious and laity - 2600 x .50	1300.
Total Budget requirements for one year -		21300.
		$40970.

V. Conclusion - This organization's chances of success would seem to be far greater than the average Council of Human Relations which was organized and supported by a group of public-spirited citizens because our Council is the official organization of the Archdiocese. It reflects the attitude of the Archdiocese and, therefore, it means this organization's desire for racial justice probably will soon be translated into concrete action.

ACCORDING TO ARTICLE II OF THE CHARTER OF THE CATHOLIC COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS OF THE ARCHDIOCESE OF NEW ORLEANS, THE OBJECTS AND PURPOSES ARE STATED TO BE:

(A) TO PROMOTE GOOD RELATIONSHIPS AMONG PEOPLES OF ALL RACES IN THE ARCHDIOCESE OF NEW ORLEANS;

(B) TO MAKE KNOWN THE TEACHINGS OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH ON MATTERS OF INTERRACIAL JUSTICE AND CHARITY, PARTICULARLY AS SUMMARIZED BY ALL OF THE CARDINALS, ARCHBISHOPS AND BISHOPS THROUGHOUT THE UNITED STATES IN THEIR STATEMENT ISSUED IN 1958 AND ENTITLED "DISCRIMINATION AND THE CHRISTIAN CONSCIENCE"; AND THE APPLICATION OF THESE PRINCIPLES TO EVERYDAY LIVING EXPERIENCES;

(C) TO WORK IN COOPERATION WITH PUBLIC AND RESPONSIBLE PRIVATE AGENCIES, IN STRENGTHENING THE FABRIC OF AMERICA'S DEMOCRATIC WAY OF LIFE THROUGH THE PROMOTION OF GOOD HUMAN RELATIONS; AND

(D) TO EXHORT ALL OF THE CLERGY, RELIGIOUS AND LAITY TO OFFER THEIR DAILY PRAYERS, GOOD WORKS AND SACRIFICES FOR THE PEACEFUL AND CHARITABLE SOLUTION OF ALL PROBLEMS OF HUMAN RELATIONS.

WE HAVE BEEN MOTIVATED TOWARDS THE FORMATION OF THIS COUNCIL OUT OF A DEEP SENSE OF THE DEMANDS OF THE GREAT CHRISTIAN LAW OF LOVE OF NEIGHBOR AND RESPECT FOR HIS RIGHTS, TAUGHT TO US BY CHRIST BOTH BY DEED AND WORD. THESE DEMANDS HAVE BEEN SPELLED OUT FOR US BY THE AUTHORITATIVE STATEMENT OF ALL THE CARDINALS, ARCHBISHOPS AND BISHOPS OF THE UNITED STATES ISSUED IN 1958, AND ENTITLED "DISCRIMINATION AND THE CHRISTIAN CONSCIENCE." NO DOCUMENT CAN BETTER EXPRESS BOTH THE REASONS FOR THE FORMATION OF THIS COUNCIL OF HUMAN RELATIONS, AND ITS GOALS. HERE IS THE OFFICIAL STATEMENT OF THIS NEWLY FORMED WORK IN CHRIST'S CHURCH. AND IT IS ONLY RIGHT AND PROPER THAT IT SHOULD BE SO, FOR AS CATHOLICS WE BELIEVE THAT BY THE DISPOSITION OF CHRIST HIMSELF, THE ROMAN PONTIFF FOR THE WHOLE CHURCH, AND THE BISHOPS FOR THE FAITHFUL ENTRUSTED TO THEIR CARE, ARE THE PROPERLY CONSTITUTED SHEPHERDS OF THE FLOCK OF CHRIST; TO THEM HAS BEEN DIVINELY GIVEN THE RIGHT AND DUTY TO TEACH, RULE, GOVERN AND SANCTIFY THOSE IN THEIR CHARGE. AS PIUS XII STATED, IN HIS ALLOCUTION OF MAY 31, 1954: "BESIDES THE LAWFUL SUCCESSORS OF THE APOSTLES, NAMELY, THE ROMAN PONTIFF FOR THE UNIVERSAL CHURCH AND BISHOPS FOR THE FAITHFUL ENTRUSTED TO THEIR CARE, THERE ARE NO OTHER TEACHERS DIVINELY CONSTITUTED IN THE CHURCH OF CHRIST." (THE AUTHORITY OF THE CHURCH IN TEMPORAL MATTERS, NCWC, WASHINGTON, P. 2). AS LOYAL AND FAITHFUL CATHOLICS WE MUST, THEN, ACCEPT THE AUTHORITATIVE TEACHING OF THE AMERICAN HIERARCHY AND RESPOND TO THEIR CALL TO ACTION.

THE BISHOPS HAVE TAUGHT US THAT "DISCRIMINATION BASED ON THE ACCIDENTAL FACT OF RACE OR COLOR, AND AS SUCH INJURIOUS TO HUMAN RIGHTS REGARDLESS OF PERSONAL QUALITIES OR ACHIEVEMENTS, CANNOT BE RECONCILED WITH THE TRUTH THAT

GOD HAS CREATED ALL MEN WITH EQUAL RIGHTS AND EQUAL DIGNITY." (PARAGRAPH 12). THEY HAVE FURTHER STATED THAT: "LEGAL SEGREGATION, OR ANY FORM OF COMPULSORY SEGREGATION, IN ITSELF AND BY ITS VERY NATURE IMPOSES A STIGMA OF INFERIORITY UPON THE SEGREGATED PEOPLE. EVEN IF THE NOW OBSOLETE COURT DOCTRINE OF 'SEPARATE BUT EQUAL' HAD BEEN CARRIED OUT TO THE FULLEST EXTENT, SO THAT ALL PUBLIC AND SEMI-PUBLIC FACILITIES WERE IN FACT EQUAL, THERE IS NONETHELESS THE JUDGMENT THAT AN ENTIRE RACE, BY THE SOLE FACT OF RACE AND REGARDLESS OF INDIVIDUAL QUALITIES, IS NOT FIT TO ASSOCIATE ON EQUAL TERMS WITH MEMBERS OF ANOTHER RACE. WE CANNOT RECONCILE SUCH A JUDGMENT WITH THE CHRISTIAN VIEW OF MAN'S NATURE AND RIGHTS." (PARAGRAPH 16). FINALLY THEY ADD THAT: "IT IS A MATTER OF HISTORICAL FACT THAT SEGREGATION IN OUR COUNTRY HAS LED TO OPPRESSIVE CONDITIONS AND THE DENIAL OF BASIC HUMAN RIGHTS FOR THE NEGRO. THIS IS EVIDENT IN THE FUNDAMENTAL FIELDS OF EDUCATION, JOB OPPORTUNITY, AND HOUSING." (PARAGRAPH 17).

FACED WITH SUCH AUTHORITATIVE TEACHINGS, THE CATHOLIC LAYMEN, FORMING THIS COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS, WILL TO ANSWER THE CALL TO ACTION OF THE AMERICAN BISHOPS. TOGETHER WITH THE BISHOPS, WE AS CATHOLICS AND SOUTHERN CITIZENS OF THE UNITED STATES, REALIZE THAT THE PROBLEMS WHICH FACE US IN THE DOMAIN OF HUMAN RELATIONS IN THE ARCHDIOCESE "ARE ROOTED IN DECADES, EVEN CENTURIES, OF CUSTOM AND CULTURAL PATTERNS" AND THAT "CHANGES IN (SUCH) DEEP-ROOTED ATTITUDES ARE NOT MADE OVERNIGHT." (PARAGRAPH 22). WE KNOW THAT OUR ACTION MUST BE BOTH PRUDENT AND COURAGEOUS, QUIET, PRAYERFUL AND DECISIVE. BUT ACT WE MUST. WE EQUALLY DEPLORE "A GRADUALISM THAT IS MERELY A CLOAK FOR INACTION" AND A "RASH IMPETUOSITY THAT WOULD SACRIFICE THE ACHIEVEMENTS OF DECADES IN ILL-TIMED AND ILL-CONSIDERED VENTURES." (PARAGRAPH 23). WE MUST "SEIZE THE MANTLE OF LEADERSHIP FROM THE AGITATOR AND THE RACIST," (PARAGRAPH 24), "ROOT OUT OF OUR HEARTS BITTERNESS AND HATRED. THE TASKS WE FACE ARE INDEED DIFFICULT. BUT HEARTS INSPIRED WITH CHRISTIAN LOVE WILL SURMOUNT THESE DIFFICULTIES." (PARAGRAPH 25). IT IS OUR PRAYER THAT THIS COUNCIL OF HUMAN RELATIONS WILL, WITH GOD'S GRACE, MEET FULL FACE THE CHALLENGE OF OUR TIMES AND UNDER THE DIRECTION OF THE MOST REVEREND ARCHBISHOP OF NEW ORLEANS YIELD FRUIT A HUNDRED-FOLD.

TO: Friends of the Community Council

In June 1961, the Community Council of the Atlanta Area, Inc., in conjunction with the National Association of Social Workers, sponsored a workshop on "Solving Our Problems Through Responsible Participation." It was an attempt on the part of both lay and professional personnel to work together more co-operatively to meet the health, welfare and recreation needs of the people in metropolitan Atlanta.

Over 200 people attended, and problems were defined and recommendations made as to how the community could cope with these problems. Since then, progress has been made toward implementing some of these recommendations. To list a few of the accomplishments:

- There is a Protective Service Unit in the Fulton County Department of Family & Children Services.
- Visiting Nurses Association is in the process of applying for a grant to establish a Homemaker Service.
- The Hospital and Health Study, through sub-committees, completed reports on Voluntary and Public Health Services, General Hospital Services, Education and Research in Health, Nursing Home Services and Rehabilitation Services.
- An Advisory Committee on Alcoholism has been formed to act as a medium of communication for everyone concerned with the problem.
- The Community Council has a professional full-time executive director.

However, there is still a great deal to be done, new problems have arisen, and there are still gaps in and duplication of services. We, in the Permanent Conference of the Community Council, feel that it is time for another workshop.

As an individual in the community who is aware of the problems that exist, and who has been involved in trying to solve them, you can be of help to us in planning our workshop. Send us your ideas as to some of the areas you feel should be included in such a workshop on the attached form. From the replies received, a planning committee will select the topics to be included.

Sincerely,

J. Winston Huff

I feel that the following are problems which are of concern to the community and would be appropriate to be included in a workshop.

1. School desegregation

2. Housing - Private and Public

3. Need for a Public Defender

4. Neighborhood Tutorial Programs similar to NASH

I would be interested in participating in a workshop. Yes____ No____

Dear Charlotte:

Here are the estimates of total civil rights arrests made in the South since February, 1960, as per your telephone call today:

Freedom Riders	500
Sit-in and other protest movement demonstrators	4681
ESTIMATED TOTAL ARRESTS	5181

If you want or need a break-down for years, I estimate:

Freedom Riders	500
February, 1960 - September, 1961	3600
October, 1961 - May, 1962	1081

These figures include demonstrations which have occurred up to the date of this letter. I want to emphasize again that they are only approximations based on our newspaper clipping files, but I am sure that any errors are on the side of modesty.

Did you get the copy of the Talladega injunction I sent you?

Best luck on your preparations for the hearing, and if there is anything more I can do for you, please don't hesitate to get in touch.

Sincerely yours,

Dorothy Miller

Dear Miss Devree:

In reponse to your telegram we have made the following estimate of civil rights arrests in the South since May, 1961, based on our file of newspaper clippings:

Freedom Riders	500
Sit-in and other protest movement demonstrators	1377
Total Arrests	1877

We want to emphasize that this is an approximation, but it does represent a minimum figure for arrests of this kind in the period you designate.

Yes, white racists were arrested for violence in places where mass demonstrations occurred. Since your need for a reply was urgent, we could do no more than skim the accounts of these events, but even this rapid survey revealed that the number of demonstrators arrested was overwhelmingly greater than was that of the white racists.

We hope this information will be helpful to you.

Sincerely yours,

Dorothy Miller

Dear Les Dunbar:

The reprint from the December 14th Atlantic Constitution was really quite valuable. I wonder if you could send me 25 copies so that we can distribute them to our staff members with the suggestion that they do similar studies in the communities in which they work.

I hope to see you soon.

Cordially,

Dear Mr. McCain:

In response to your request for the latest information on public school desegregation in the South, I am enclosing a selection of materials pulled together by our research staff. They include the most recent statistics from the Southern Education Reporting Service in Nashville, two magazine articles, and an SRC pamphlet on the first six years of school desegregation.

I might also add that we are planning to publish a study OF tokenism in the South early this spring, and we will certainly see that you receive a copy.

Please let me know if you want further specific information on this vast and somewhat vexing question.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Vernon:

In response to your letter of July 10, 1964, I am sorry that I follow the policy with my clients of not submitting receipts; it just gets too involved with all the travelling I do and so far they have taken my word for it.

I automatically followed this policy in this case, I am sorry to say, so I do not have any receipts. I suppose I can get duplicates from the hotel, etc., and/or itemize my expenses in more detail. Let me know.

Thanks for the prompt reimbursement, and I look forward to seeing you next week or so.

Sincerely,

Dear Vernon:

I am enclosing a copy of my letter to Rogers. Hope it doesn't hurt more than help.

I had an interesting time in Kansas City. I tried to make clear that the Southern Regional Council has a fraternal interest in CORE activities, and to get some of the flavor of the proceedings. In general, I felt old and worn out in the face of the enthusiasm there. Let me know if you wish a more detailed report of my acitvities.

As to expenses, I spent $65.34 for transportation (including limousine, airport parking, etc.), $14.88 for hotel, telephone and telegraph, and $8.50 for meals, tips and miscellaneous, or a total of $88.72.

Let me know if you have any further questions about these matters. We look forward to seeing you when you come for the bar examinations, and I hope you will be able to have a couple of days of fellowship in addition to the work that will be involved for you.

I. JAMES GRADY CASE:

James grady, a Florida resident, has been indicted by a Georgia grand jury for manslaughter. It is immaterial as to whether or not he is guilty or innocent, but what is material, is that James Grady, while home in Florida, Gadsden County, was abducted by the Sheriff of Grady County, Georgia, with the assistance of the Florida Sheriff of Gadsden County. Against his will and without his consent, James Grady was not "extradicted", wherein he would have the right to petition to the Florida Courts a Writ of Habeas Corpus, but was instead, taken to jail in Georgia where a warrant for his arrest was then issued by the Justice of the Peace in Georgia and was released only on bond after his indigent father was able to scrounge up the funds. James Grady was arrested in June, 1964. He was told to appear in September, 1964 for Arraignment. James Grady did appear in September, 1964, but at that time he was not proceeded against. The sheriff then told James he could go and stay until "next time".

In March, 1965, another "warrant" was issued against him and again he was "required" to return for the September Arraignment on September 15, 1965. James Grady did appear under force September 15, but again there was no court in session. The grand jury returned an indictment September 21, 1965 and then the bondsman, from Georgia, "arrested" James Grady and brought him back to Georgia, where there he remains to be "arraigned" in March, 1966. The Civil Rights or Civil Liberties issue here is that James Grady, in violation of the Federal kidnapping law, was abducted from the State of Florida by the Georgia Sheriff in collusion with the Florida Sheriff.

Unfortunately, the Federal Writ of Habeas Corpus, which is the obvious remedy, is not simple. Frisby vs. Collins 342 U.S. 519, a case which is similar, seems to establish that a Writ of Habeas Corpus would not lie even if the petitioner was unlawfully arrested, imprisoned and abducted, contrary to Extradiction, Due Process Clauses of U.S. Constitution. Also Section 2254 of a Federal Writ of Habeas Corpus requires one to "exhaust state remedies". Of course a Writ of Habeas Corpus will lie, if there were a systematic inclusion or exclusion of Negroes on the Grand Jury. Also regarding exhausting state remedies, we have found that exhausting state remedies is not required under exceptional circumstances. In our exceptional circumstances, James Grady is an indigent and cannot afford costs, fees, and legal expenses - such as affording an attorney. The Seals Case, of course, will help us here. However, the exhaustion of state remedies doctrine meets us again in the rule that a federal writ of habeas corpus will not lie in advance of a trial in a State Court. Exparte Royalle, 117 U.S. 241. The anticipated arguement is that even an indigent can assert Constitutional issues before arraignment, there being no costs and expenses necessary. (in a motion to Quash?) I believe even the Seals Case can except this arguement, but I am in process of doing more original research before I file this petition this week.

We also propose to file a suit for the unlawful abduction under the Civil Rights Laws. I had a conference with Judge Carswell, U.S. District Court Judge in the Northern District of Florida, regarding the Pauper's Affidavit and the Complaint, which I had planned to file then. He stated that he would assume jurisdiction regarding the question of damages, but, of course, he advises that we should proceed in the U.S. District Court in Georgia. We are accepting Judge Carswell's advice and shall file both actions, the Writ of Habeas Corpus and the suit for damages, in the U.S. District Court in Georgia. Of course we want to file a warrant against the Sheriffs in Georgia and Florida for violating the Federal Kidnapping Law, 18 U.S. C.A. Section 121.

I have been further advised by Tony Amsterdam, Haveas Corpus and Removal expert, to file concurrent actions in State Court and Federal Court regarding Habeas Corpus proceeding, as was done in Shuttlesworth and Dresner cases.

II. ALEX H. WALTON CASE:

W. T. Edwards Tuberculosis Hospital officials admitted having segregated facilities to CORE and promised to comply with the 1964 Civil Rights Law. One of the things which they promised to do was to desegregate the restaurant facilities and to show that the facilities were desegregated by posting signs.

Then Mr. Alex H. Walton, the head cook at the Food Service Department and supervisor of cooks, complained to Mr. Winge, the Food Service Department Director, protesting his dismissing Negroes who ate over the former all-white side, and gave notice that he was going to sit on that side. Of course, Mr. Walton got a letter stating that he was going to be terminated on the grounds of reduction of force required by the lessening patient population.

The State Tuberculosis Board is giving Mr. Walton an opportunity to appeal the decision at the meeting to be held in Tampa, on Sunday, December 5, 1965. We have sent notice that we are appearing for Mr. Walton, and we are retaining a Court Reporter to record the proceedings.

III. MARVEL D. ZIMMERMAN CASE:

This is one of several cases and complaints which are coming into our office, demonstrating how the State fails to protect Negro citizens whose children are attending the newly integrated schools. One from Madison and one from Monticello are in the hopper, but the Zimmerman case is the furthest along in investigation work. Mr. Zimmerman has a young son attending the previous all-white Leon High School, in Tallahassee. The young Zimmerman boy has always been followed by a white youth who wanted the Zimmerman boy to fight. One day, this particular youth saw a friend in a Mustang Ford. He cried, "Hit the Nigger with your car." His friend did.

Mr. Zimmerman then retained Attorney John Rudd, who Tobias Simon of the ACLU probably remembers, Mr. Rudd being formerly a city judge in CORE cases. The City Prosecutor, Mr. Ed Hill, was also contacted. To this date there has been no prosecution of the youth who hit the Zimmerman boy.

The physical injury to the Zimmerman boy was very slight, not amounting to $10,000.00 in damages. But, the injury to the Zimmerman boy's dignity is immeasurable, this flowing from the State practice of not protecting Negro Citizens who are asserting their civil rights. We therefore, propose to file a suit against the City, similar to the Young vs. Davis Case, 1964 St. Augustine Case, if justified by complete investigation.

IV. THE GAINESVILLE BOYS CLUB CASE:

This was an easy one. The Boys Club in this city is a United Fund operation, but it receives funds from Gainesville and the city held the mortgage to the building out of which the Boys Club is operating. Despite the fact that they pledged to comply with the Non-discrimination in Federal fund-raising programs, (which means soliciting Federal employees and soliciting private persons on Federal Property) the Boys Club refused to take membership applications from Negroes on the same basis as they were taking applications from White persons, and were issuing membership cards to Negro applicants to use a Negro Boys Club which was not even in existence. But in the process of investigating the complaints, affidavits, etc., the "rumor of our suit" forced them to hastily comply and Negroes now have the same opportunity to belong to the Boys Club as Whites do. Our investigation and work there was on behalf of the Negro Plaintiffs, The Gainesvill Women forEqual Rights, and the Gainesville ACLU.

V. JAMES FORTSON CASE:

James Fortson was arrested for public intoxication and is serving 60 days for it on the work gang. Not only is this a Civil Rights case because there is no scintilla of evidence of his guilt, James Fortson was not provided an opportunity to have a counsel, being arrested late at night and being convicted early the next morning in the Justice of the Peace Court, Mr. Fortson is also suffering cruel and unusual punishment in that he is incarcerated in a segregated jail.

From the office of Tobias Simon, I just received his James Furgeson vs. T. A. Buchanan Complaint and order which he was successful in desegregating the Dade County Jails, which we can apply in this particular matter.

VI. MARY A. GREEN CASE:

It was released by the Office of Education, Washington, D.C., that Florida is the only State which has complied in all its Counties with Title VI of the 1964 Civil Rights Law. I am sure this is objected to by the Legal Defense Fund for the NAACP who were to handle the cases of the Negro Teachers who were terminated in Holmes County, Florida, on the grounds that their school was closed. Here in Madison County, Mrs. Mary Green is a Counselor to the Ninth grade students at Greenville Training School. Although Madison County is "in compliance with Title VI of the Civil Rights Law" as far as the Office of Education is concerned, orientation day was held for all the County's Negro teachers and staff at Madison Training School last August. The only white person there was was Mr. Bishop, the County Superintendant, and a couple of white members of the School Board, who "condescended" to be with their "Negro friends". Also on the program, was a Dr. R.W. Green, no relation to Mrs. Mary Green, who is president of the "Public Relations Council" which is suppose to enclose Alabama, Florida and Georgia. Dr. Green is a Negro who is alleged to have several doctoral degrees (from his own mouth) but by reliable information, whose main business is to pastor a small church in Columbus, Georgia. Dr. Green was the main speaker on the program. At first his remarks were innocuous, and pertained to the technical aspects of teaching, but soon he entered into a the question of integration of the schools. Green condemned the whole process of desegregation of Madison County Schools for the first time, because, he said, "You are not capable of it yet." He warned the people that they had better stay where they are, saying that they were not ready for it because they were still dirty people. He said that "You need to clean yourselves, powder your faces and shine your shoes." You need to learn to do all these things before you expect to be equal. Dr. Green stated that they are better treated in Negro schools. He reflected how he went to an integrated school in Ohio and therefore was deprived of the warmth and attention which Negro students get from Negro teachers. Therefore, indicating that he was sending all his children to segregated schools.

CORE and SCLC for their last program for the summer were assisting the student group for the boycott of the schools, so these remarks only added more ginger to the cooking. It goes without saying that Dr. Green impressed the School Board officials and he was scheduled to speak at all the Negro schools about the cause of integration. Dr. Green was scheduled to speak early at Madison Training School, before the Negro youths, but with the crash of the school boycott, the School Board officials backed down in sending Dr. Green to Madison Training School.

Dr. Green then was also scheduled to speak at Greenville Training School, but only after the school boycott had ended and things had quieted down again. This was a program originating in the Superintendant of the School Boards Office.

Mrs. Mary Green was scheduled to be on the program. Then at the last moment, everyone knew that the 9th graders were going to create havoc during Dr. Green's speech. Mrs. Mary Green was then told that she was to administer a 9th grade achievement test during the same morning of the speech by Dr. Green. Mrs. Green, who was to be assisted by other teachers who were also on the program, decided to give the test after the speech on the same morning. Dr. Green was hooted out of the auditorium, the students not allowing him to speak. The Principal then accused her of inciting the students to create the disturbance and also accused her of being insubordinate by not giving the test at the "same time".

Mrs. Mary Green was brought before the Superintendant of the County School Board and was found guilty, and he said that for punishment that he was going to advise the County School Board Officials to take her from her continuing Contract and place her on an Annual Contract.

We know exactly what shall happen and so do all the Negro teachers in the county who are supporting Mrs. Green. They know that once you are put on an Annual Contract, she can be terminated in the sense of not being "rehired" without cause or without a hearing. We know that if we idly stand by and allow her to be placed on an Annual Contract, we will have no Federal remedies under the Federal Civil Rights Law. The wife of Dr. Aaron Henry, a Mississippi NAACP leader, was not able to assert any federal remedies when she was on an Annual Contract, when she was not "rehired".

VII. ARAGO LEROY WELCH and MELVIN COLSON CASES:

At the request of the Gainesville ACLU, I received complaints from one Negro youth who spent time in the city jail for running a red light on a bicycle, and a complaint from another Negro youth who spent time in the County jail for writing a check with insufficient funds. Both of these institutions were also segregated, as they want us to apply the James Ferguson vs. T.A. Buchanan case to desegregate these institutions. However the facts may differ substantially. In the Miami case, there was an unlawful arrest in that the city was enforcing a statute "permitting" descrimination in public accomodations. Also the Ferguson complaint shows "present incarceration" in jail, and that shall affect us in the Gainesville complaint because of mootness of the issue since the two youths are longer in jail. Some original research is required to aviod the "mootness" defense, but it would seem that in a class action, "mooting" would not be a defense. Then too, if mootness is a valid defense here, it would be a valid defense in the publib accomodation cases and the 1964 Civil Rights Law which would be a mere annulity.

VIII. ARCHIE BRENTON, JOE LEE STARK, SAM CURTIS WARREN CASES:

These are cases referred to our office from the Tallahassee ACLU regarding state prisoners who were not provided the assistance of an attorney at the time of their arrest, investigation, and trial & therefore, in violation of their civil liberties. Although these cases are, of course, within our guidelines of civil rights and civil liberties cases, we expect to be swamped with these types of Gideon and Escobedo cases. I am drawing up questionaires to be mimeographed to be sent to these persons so that we can efficiently assist them to assist themselves.

As a sidelight, it was the FCLU which, during the first 5 years of this decade, came to the assistance of the CORE program of direct action, and ACLU cases helped lead to the 1964 Civil Rights Law.

CORE gave birth to CORE - SEDF, which was established to enforce these new Civil Rights principles and new Civil Rights laws in the community. Because there are no ACLU cooperating attorneys in Florida, Except in Southern Florida, we are very happy to cooperate and to assist the ACLU in their program, in appreciation for what the ACLU has already done in cooperation with CORE and other civil rights groups.

FLORIDA CORE-SEDF REPORT
VOL. 1 #14 DECEMBER 4,1965

REVIEW OF COMMUNITY ACTION ACTIVITIES--FALL REPORT

A. Migratory Workers South Florida

In cooperation with the National Council on Agricultural Life and Labor, and the National Sharecropper Fund, CORE-SEDF has acted to investigate Domestic Workers who have been displaced by Foreign Agricultural Workers and to work to better working conditions for Domestic Workers. NSF has a contract with the U.S. Department of Labor, and Sidney Daniels, before he resigned to work as a CORE task force worker, assisted Jac Wasserman of NSF to find Domestic Workers who would go work in the fields in South Florida. We have since found how the producers and growers have broken their contracts with the domestic workers, summarily and arbitrarily, terminating and firing them with the only purpose in mind to show the "need for foreign workers." We had hoped to go down to Palm Beach County to talk to Mr. John Margolis, who has done a series of exposing articles for the Miami Herald, but have not done so because of limited staff. CORE, with few staff people, has not been able to extend into this area. However, SNCC has shown an interest, and has sent a worker last October into these areas with the purpose in mind to determine whether or not they could assist the workers down there to organize on principles similar to the Mississippi Freedom Labor Union Movement. We have given them assistance such as giving them the names of contacts, field ministers, newspaper reporters and labor officials in that area, along with providing them with information regarding labor laws and regulations.

B. Labor Organizing:

At our invitation, the American Federation of State, county, Municipal Employees Union sent an organizer up to North Florida to talk with representatives from the Florida State Improvement Association and the Chattahoochee Hospital Improvement Association, groups CORE-SEDF formed.

Because of their Modus Operandi as a lobbying group, it has in its constitution "not to strike" and also "appears" to support Gov. Haydon Burns, the incumbant. The people we are working with are not at all enthusiastic about the American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees Union. In September, we were visited by the National Executive Vice President of the Retail, Wholesale Department Store Union, Mr. Arthur Cohen and Harry Bush, the State President of that particular Union, and I tried to set up a meeting at which representatives of the other groups would be present. But, this particular meeting was a failure. The Retail Union, of course, is operated differently from the State County Municipal Employees Union, in that the latter uses the "agency" method. In other words, employees at the Chattahoochee State Hospital would in a sense "hire" that particular Union to represent them, that particular union already having its own professional experts to do representation. The Retail, Wholesale Department Store Union, says Mr. Cohen, is a "people's" Union and that the employees elect their own representatives to do their own representation.

CORE-SEDF is to educate, to inform, to advise, and to assist. But I see no place in the guidelines for us to represent a Union in organizing for them, which both unions seem to want us to do. Community action includes economic development and unions and civil rights groups need each other on the local level. It is hoped that both groups will learn this.

C. Anti-Poverty Assistance

We have incorporated CIG in Gadsden County, along with groups in Taylor, Liberty, and Calhoun Counties. None, as of yet, receive Federal Funds, except Taylor County, cooperating with the already established and to be established groups (which otherwise would have been all white Community Action Agencies if we had not formed these groups). The groups we have formed have sought our assistance because they would like to act independently of "power structure" groups. But since August, this has been one area where we had to limit our activities because of our case load, much to the chagrin of the CORE total program,

Gadsden County CIG might be able to become a model community action group in that county. Where CIG used to be composed of a few people in the city Quincy area, the steering committee which was assisting CORE's N. Fla. Voter Education Campaign Program, it is now a large group. To organize, we proceeded to incorporate CIG and then provide that it be constituted of Local Improvement Associations. Each local Improvement Association has a representative on the executive board of CIG.

Although there is supposed to be only one Association in one local community, this has not been defined, and now, for instance, in Havanna, a town in Gadsden County, there are three different associations from the one community, each having a representative on the CIG board. Since we have "formed" these groups, CORE and these groups have demanded that we assist them to prepare programs. But with our case load, we can't with our present staff (two people).

One of the things CIG wants to do is to build low-cost housing for poverty-stricken people. I have just received statutes and laws regulating this area from Congressman Claude Pepper, so I might be able to do something in this area next year.

D. Independent Schools Talent Search Program

I am a member of the local committee in Tallahassee, representing CORE-SEDF, seeking promising High School youths so that they might be able to enjoy the opportunities to seek scholarships and attend preparatory schools in the East, as as to be ready for the "good" university. I have contacted all of our people in the CORE counties and there are fine, promising, qualified kids, especially those who have served as Plaintiffs and who have been active in Civil Rights.

Dear Sam:

We read with interest your CACEP piece of January 26 in the magazine section of the Times. We are much impressed by the project and interested in its success. Can you furnish us with whatever materials are available on the formation and operation of CACEP for our files?

A similar program is in process in Norfolk, Virginia, sponsored by the Norfolk Committee for the Improvement of Education. We are in close touch with them and moved by their plans.

Susanna McBee wrote a piece on CACEP in the Post in early February. Assuming that you have not seen it, we are enclosing same. I was pleased to see that you first proposed the program last fall.

Sam, we would really appreciate any materials you have on CACEP. Please let us hear from you soon.

My regards to Elnora and your kids and my best to Peggy and Frank Peterman.

One of the great advantages of CACEP is that this extra teaching has been by Negro and white volunteer teachers and other competent people. This is the only way such a program can be carried out without high cost to the taxpayers.

CACEP in Pinellas County is operated by the following Steering Committee and Board of Trustees:

Board of Trustees	Steering Committee
Raleigh Greene	Emanuel Stewart
Floyd T. Christian	Rose Hemingway

What is

CACEP?

CACEP means "Continuing Academic and Cultural Enrichment Program".

This project is helping thousands of Negro students of St. Petersburg to "close the educational gap" that has prevented their gaining first-class citizenship.

The same elements that have made this program successful in St. Petersburg will work in any community:

1. The interest of Negro principals and teachers in improving their schools and communities,
2. A school board that supports such aims,
3. A newspaper that is willing to help this project.
4. A philanthropic foundation to help in coordinating this program.

ACADEMIC IMPROVEMENT

The chief reasons for CACEP in every Negro community are:

1. Those who are behind in school must run faster to catch up in the race for equal opportunity.
2. This means that they must spend more time under competent instruction after school and on Saturday.
3. Because they will be working with white employees, Negro children should spend more time with white people.

Some of the remedial and additional subjects:

art
mathematics biology chemistry creative writing dramatics English French science social studies literature music Negro History photography reading Spanish

CULTURAL ENRICHMENT OF SCHOOL, HOME AND COMMUNITY

In St. Petersburg, the Steering Committee has approved the extension of CACEP into the entire home and community environment by means of the following projects:

Community Survey and Planning
Negro Contributions to American Life
Cultural Assemblies
Better knowledge of agencies available to help children and adults
Home improvement for higher living standards and incentive to better education
Universal literacy and reading ability
Better use of schools as Community Centers for adult education, reading and other community activities
Better use of books for cultural and economic improvement
More children in Nursery-Kindergartens for better education of children
Creative activity to prevent juvenile delinquency
Talent Search -- (1) for better jobs; (2) for advanced education
Personal work with parents for better education of children

Dear Deonard:

I understand you are very close now to getting federal funds to help your program, so perhaps you now have time to follow-up a request of me. Enclosed is a letter seeking information on C.A.C.E.P. with a view toward getting something similar started in Charleston, South Carolina.

Do whatever you can for this man. I imagine you have, by now, prepared handout material to make requests such as this easy.

Dear Mr. Adams:

Mr. Hugh A. Brimm, Chief, Equal Employment Opportunity Office, suggested that I write to you.

I am Chairman of Labor and Industry for the Charleston Chapter of NAACP, and as such am constantly confronted with the task of trying to get local employment agencies, industries, both private and government to place qualified Negroes and to upgrade same. We find that we are facing the same type of problems that I understand you have had to cope with there. Simple manual tests that applicants often fail, not because of their difficulty, but because of a lack of experience and of familiarity with this type of thing and a consequent failing in dexterity and speed. Mr. Brimm has told me that you have been most successful in the establishment of a training center, so much so, that industry and management of such have begun to assist you in this project. He further stated that he believed that you may be willing to give to me all of the necessary information as to methods etc. towards proceeding to institute the same kind of program, here.

Though I hate to trouble you in this respect, it is needless to say how very much your help in this matter would be appreciated, for the guidance of one who has knowledge acquired through the accumulation of invaluable information and experience often determines whether a similar program will succeed or fail. I am, therefore, earnestly in hopes that you will assist us by passing on any and all information, or the means of acquiring same, that can aid us in "lining up a like set-up". Kindly let me hear from you as soon as your time will permit, for we are urgently in need of immediate action in this area, and have been for some time.

Very truly yours,

TO: THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH'S 60TH GENERAL CONVENTION, DETROIT, MICHIGAN
FROM: THE CLERGY ON THE PILGRIMAGE FROM NEW ORLEANS TO DETROIT, SEPTEMBER 12-16, 1961

In the Name of Our Lord Jesus Christ, Amen. As priests of the Church, we have prepared this statement that it might accompany the message we bear to the General Convention by our pilgrimage and through the placard we shall unveil at the convention hall. We speak only for ourselves, but, in a deeper sense, we represent the concern of many more Churchmen: the laity and clergy who gave of their substance to make the journey possible and of their prayers to sustain us, and the still more innumerable body of faithful persons who serve that the Church might be more truly itself in its struggle for inner integrity.

Believing that the Church is one, even as the nation is one, indivisible in essence, we rejoice that our number includes clergy from one ocean to the other, and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf. As members one of another, in Christ Jesus, we recognize our responsibility for the health of His Church wherever the Gospel is planted; and as citizens of one country, we reject sectionalism that would limit the active expression of love for oppressed brothers. At neither our starting point or our destination, nor in the larger areas they symbolize, have we any reason for complacency over the tenor of Church life or its effect in the community at large. Obedient to the commandment of Christ to go into all the world, we are acting in this instance upon our involvement in the needs of His children everywhere. We remain aware of and will return to the critical problems and latent opportunities in our own primary fields of work.

Our chief message to the Church is set forth on the placard which convention delegates will pass as they go to and from their deliberations. It presents alternatives for the life of the Church in symbolic form. One part depicts the crucified Christ with His Body pierced through by barbed wire and two words: Segregation and Separation. On either side of the aweful fence a figure kneels. Strangers to each other, one is black and the other is white. An implicit question has been asked before: "Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by?" The other part of the placard shows Our Lord in resurrected form, blessing two men who kneel before Him. As in the first scene, they are of different color, but here they recognize one another as brothers. With the Psalmist we may say: "Behold, how good and joyful a thing it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!"

This message is for Churchmen everywhere, and for all the imperative is the same: The Church must become, in every phase of its life, that which by nature it is - a holy fellowship where race is of no account. In a particular place, one aspect of the task may be dominant, while elsewhere more advanced levels of realizing the goal may be reached. None may rest until every trace of racial segregation and separation is expunged from the Body of Christ in all places. Responsibility for immediate and direct steps in the implementation of absolute principle bears a relationship to individual circumstances, but there should be no hindrance anywhere to full treatment of the principles and a foreshadowing of the steps to follow, with the first step begun. Each is accountable for decisions that fall short of the perfect Will of God. Usually we move far more slowly in the necessary steps than we ought, basing our choices on undue caution and faithless fear, rather than on either reasonable prudence or Christian courage.

At the beginning of our pilgrimage, we will look at segregation in the Body of Christ as found at some of the educational facilities we will visit. There are many other institutions where the policy is the same. We believe it to be a tragedy that they should have been closed ever, and a tragedy of immense proportions that Church schools and colleges have lagged behind others in the removal of racial restrictions. Before the courts ruled on legal questions at state-operated facilities, the Church had a theological and moral imperative to clean its house. Now the law has instructed us for seven years in what is just, right, and necessary, and still there are Church schools that are segregated. Our failure is magnified in those areas where public schools have opened, while Church schools remain closed. We share in this failure and are justifiably chided by the irreligious for the ineffectiveness of our lofty pronouncements. As members of the Body of Christ, concerned for the welfare of all its parts, we should have made our visits earlier. We pray that our coming may help the Church to view this matter with renewed urgency, so that previously closed doors may be opened with a penitent and beckoning hand extended to those so long denied entrance.

At the end of our journey, we shall consider the more subtle and difficult question of separation. In a suburb of Detroit we will confer with local clergy on the role of the churches in overcoming discriminatory housing practices. This is the most crucial need in areas which have discarded the more blatant forms of segregation. After the old barriers are gone, men may meet as strangers and equals before the law. They live in separated housing areas, and they go to separate churches. Our "separate-but-equal" parish system is not only a product of the housing pattern but a contributor to it. Too often parish life is an adjunct to some cultural, economic, or racial separation of God's children, when it should be a unifying force within the community. We have had "Negro churches" and "White churches", perpetuating the system by our attitudes and our approach to clerical appointments. Let those who were first set apart by the old barriers, and then separated by customs and covenants, become brothers now before parish altars. Let their diversity testify to their unity in Christ Jesus. This is the opportunity before Churchmen in many parts of the land, and ultimately everywhere. We pray that the General Convention will help the Church commit itself to what it must do regarding parish life and in the community to support open occupancy patterns in housing.

Whether with the dying forms of segregation or the elusive, but equally fragmenting, devices for the separation for Christ's Body and the community, Churchmen everywhere have work to do. We are making our journey that the Church might focus for awhile on the needs, and gain a renewed vision of the goals and fresh understanding of its task. In places where our coming may evoke hesitancy or regret among local clergy, we will seek opportunities to confer with them. We trust that such occasions will lead to greater understanding on the part of all. We sincerely hope to conclude our pilgrimage without interruption, but we cannot enjoy the luxury of being exempted from consequences born out of our conviction that the Church is one and that we, as priests of the Church, cannot be divided according to the ways of the world. If anyone feels we do harm to the cause of Christ, we pray that this may not be so; and we earnestly suggest review of the nature of our mission as His disciples. It is in His Name that we go forth, and to Him we offer our selves, our souls and bodies for what we pray may be used for the spread of His Kingdom. In such days of world crisis, with dark signs of world destruction, may His Church, at least, be found faithful. Amen.

FOR YOUR INFORMATION:

Enclosed is a copy of the proposed message to the Episcopal Church's 60th General Convention, meeting in Detroit, September 17-19, from the participants on the Prayer Pilgrimage to Convention sponsored by this Society. The message will be considered by the approximately thirty Episcopal clergy going on the pilgrimage, when they meet in New Orleans on Monday evening, September 11th.

By the time you receive this, we should be on our way. It has not been sent earlier because we hope to leave New Orleans unnoticed. It is our desire to give no cause for alarm within that city which is adjusting to its recently desegregated schools. Accordingly, we will board a bus at a point other than the terminal. During the course of our journey in the deep South, we will not reveal in advance what school or college we will stop at next.

I hope you will note carefully our interpretation in this message of what we are doing - that our primary concern is with conditions within the Church at the parish and institutional level. As far as our demonstrated interest in conditions in the general community, it should be noticed that we will consider with the local clergy of a Detroit suburb the problems there connected with segregated housing practices. Increasingly the racial problem (or opportunity!) is understood in its national proportions, and we hope our venture will lessen regional animosities as, together, we work at a matter that is common to all.

Should you have questions about the pilgrimage, I shall be glad to answer them after we get to Detroit. I can be reached at this Society's exhibit booth in Cobo Hall which will be tied in with the central switchboard.

Yours faithfully,

John B. Morris

The Very Rev. Alfred Hardman, Chairman
Board of Trustees, The Lovett School
St. Philip's Cathedral
2744 Peachtree Road, N. E.
Atlanta 5, Georgia

Dear Dean Hardman:

The Church is stricken and wounded by the decision of the Lovett School's Board of Trustees not to admit Negroes. The fourteen Episcopalians who serve thereon, including yourself, have opposed both the teaching of the Church and the advice of the Bishop of the Diocese. Children who are innocent of the prejudices of the Board members are distraught now that they must be withdrawn; older ones understanding somewhat the immoral condition from which they must be removed and yet not wanting to believe that men they thought were respected community and Church leaders could have made such a decision. Certainly, seldom have so few injured so many by their faithlessness, nor done such great harm to the Church itself. Our Lord must have wept for the Church in Atlanta when the decision to bar certain of his children was made by men who probably consider themselves to be steadfast members of His Church. How have we, the pastors and teachers in the Church, failed so miserably to communicate the Gospel of Jesus Christ which knows no distinctions of color?

Surely, with all of the efforts of the Bishop and others to obtain a different decision, the Lovett Trustees have made their decision conscious of how it stands in opposition to the Church and accepted morality. Is it because they have been told by someone in priestly office that there is no sin involved? I understand from several persons to whom you have talked recently that you fully agree with the decision and, indeed, have claimed that no moral question was involved. Then, how has the whole Church failed so that one of its priests could support segregation, as reportedly you have? The decision of the Trustees places all of us under an awful judgement for past failures and present disobedience.

I have consulted the President of this Society and it has been decided that steps will be taken in the fall at the opening of school to protest the Trustees' decision which leaves some doubt as to the faithfulness of both Episcopal clergy and laity. Encouragement and support will be given to direct action protest aimed at both the school itself, as well as to the members of the Board who are Episcopalians. Most likely this will include the placing of pickets at the school and at other points appropriate to the respective Trustees, as well as some form of mass pilgrimage to either the school or the Cathedral for the saying of the Penitential Office.

May God have mercy upon His whole Church, and now upon both those who have made this decision for Lovett and those who must protest it.

Yours faithfully,

John B. Morris

STATEMENT BY THE REV. JOSEPH A. PELHAM, PRESIDENT
The Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity
Atlanta, Ga.

June 7, 1963

The Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity commends the Rt. Rev. Randolph R. Claiborne, Bishop of Atlanta, for his recent statement urging the elimination of discriminatory admissions practices at the Lovett School. We strongly hope, as Bishop Claiborne implied, that the school will be desegregated no later than the start of the academic year, 1963-64. We support the Bishop in his decision to sever the Church's ties with Lovett School in the event that such change is not accomplished.

We further hope that any change in practices undertaken by the School's Trustees will include the reconsideration of their rejection of Martin Luther King, III, on the basis of race.

The school's rejection of the child of such widely known parents has seriously compromised the Church's witness before the entire world. However, the wrong done would be as great had the child been from a less eminent family.

When such happens anywhere, the whole Church must acknowledge responsibility. However, as we are all weakened when there is failure in one place, so we are all made strong when we are called to action in such unequivocal terms as those of the recent Whitsuntide Message from the Episcopal Church's Presiding Bishop. Calling for support of the Negro protest movement, Bishop Lichtenberger pointed also to the need for action within the Church and stated that the Church must sever itself from facilities which fail to conform to its teaching on race.

While we watch for the desegregation of the Lovett School, we know that it is but one of many like conditions within the South and elsewhere. It must be of concern to Churchmen that the number of Church-related primary and secondary schools in the South has increased since 1954 at a far greater rate than elsewhere. We can only conclude that the expansion of Church-related schooling has often been a means of providing refuge for those who wish to avoid desegregat. public schools. Also, many Church schools in the North have been segregated until recently, and some remain so through devious means of discouraging Negro applicants.

In overcoming the resitance of tradition, it may be necessary to establish a positive policy for integrated schooling through purposeful recruiting of members of minority groups, so that the educational experience of all may be enriched and made relevant to the contemporary world in which segregation and separation are fading.

In many situations throughout the country the necessary changes in Church school admissions policies will come only through the active concern of local Churchmen. The Presiding Bishop has called upon us "to take action" against the "intolerable scandal" of discrimination within the Church, its schools and other institutions. To assist Churchmen in taking action the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity will begin immediately a national survey of admissions practices in all schools having any relationship to the Episcopal Church. The project will be headed by a Churchman, Dr. Albert J. Reiss, Jr., Professor of Sociology at the University of Michigan. Episcopalians in areas in which Church schools are located will be asked to help in determining the practices of schools in their locale. The results will then be circulated within the Episcopal Church. The report will assist Churchmen from minority groups in selecting a school for their children, and will provide guidance to Churchmen in their financial support of such institutions. The information thus gathered will also indicate the need for action in situations in which Church school authorities and/or diocesan officials fail to act to eliminate discriminatory practices. The Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity will seek the assistance of local Churchmen in initiating a program of sustained protest in a manner appropriate to the circumstances.

The Presiding Bishop has declared, "The entire Christian community must pray and act." The time for both is now. For the Church to support the discredited ways of gradualism becomes more offensive every day.

MEMORANDUM

August 22, 1963

TO: Key ESCRU Personnel & Other Concerned Churchmen

FROM: The Rev. John B. Morris, Executive Director, ESCRU

RE: Episcopal Services at the Lovett School.

This is to supplement references to the continuation of Episcopal services at the Lovett School contained in our newsletter of August 6th. Since issuance of the newsletter the cooperation of the Diocese of Atlanta in the perpetuation of the weekly Segregated Eucharist at Lovett has been substantiated from two sources.

On July 23rd the Standing Committee of the Diocese of Atlanta prepared this Statement: "In answer to the resolution presented to the Standing Committee by a Committee appointed at the meeting of the Clergy of the Metropolitan area of Atlanta, which was held at St. Luke's Church on July 21, 1963, it is the opinion of the Standing Committee that the participation of the Clergy in official worship and exercises at Lovett School would not be detrimental to the interest of the Church. However, the Standing Committee feels that the question should be left to the conscience of the individual clergyman as to whether he should accept or decline an invitation to participate."

In a letter dated August 8th and sent to Lovett parents, Mr. J. A. Rabbe, Director of Administration for Lovett (and also a Trustee of the Cathedral of St.Philip), said: "Since the Bishop has stated that "The Lovett School is not to be considered an Episcopal School" and that he "has withdrawn approval for any priest of the Episcopal Church to act as headmaster", the rumor is rife that there will be no more daily chapel, no Wednesday morning communion services, no teaching of religion and an abandonment of all religious emphasis. Nothing could be farther from the truth and all of these will be continued just as in the past and have the approval of the Bishop."

The assertion by the Bishop of Atlanta that there may be no "implied or official support for the Lovett School by the Episcopal Church" is threadbare when the background maneuvers designed to placate prominent Churchmen are brought to the surface. In addition, then, to the question of a segregated Church-related school (which Lovett has always been and remains), the issue of complicity in permitting and encouraging the holding of Episcopal services in such a setting rests clearly with diocesan authorities. Protest directed to the Diocese of Atlanta seems in order, especially during the time of each weekly Segregated Eucharist at the school.

Apart from the main issues it should be noted here that I asked of the Bishop and Standing Committee on July 23rd (at the same meeting mentioned above) an opportunity to fairly present our understanding of what has transpired with regard to the Lovett situation, to be compared with their account of the same proceedings. There has been no response to this nor reconsideration of the terms they had offered for the continuation of my license to officiate in this diocese. Others in the Church concerned for this situation should be advised that, while our primary interest is not in defending our role in the Lovett issue, we are quite prepared to spend as much time before any group in the Church to which Atlanta diocesan authorities have addressed themselves.

STATEMENT OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE EPISCOPAL SOCIETY FOR CULTURAL AND RACIAL UNITY ON THE LOVETT SCHOOL SITUATION

On June 14, 1963, the Board of Trustees of the Lovett School, Atlanta, Georgia, "unanimously adopted resolutions denying applications of Negro students for admission." This fact was the major concern of a meeting of the Executive Committee and Chapter representatives of the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity, held in Atlanta, Georgia, September 15-17, 1963. The Society consists of persons who have committed themselves to establish total participation in the Church of all persons without regard to race, class or national origin, and to express this concern at parish levels and in a more creative witness throughout the community at large.

As a result of the decision of the Board of Trustees, the Bishop of Atlanta announced during the past summer that he had severed all official or implied ties with the Lovett School. The Society commends the Bishop of Atlanta for his efforts and actions in this matter. However, in light of the following facts, it is an inescapable conclusion that the Episcopal Church is still an integral part of the school's life. The charter of the school requires: 1) That seven members of the Lovett School's Board of Trustees be communicants of and approved by the Episcopal Cathedral of St. Philip; 2) That seven other members of the Board of Trustees be Episcopal residents of the State of Georgia; 3) That the Dean of the Episcopal Cathedral of St. Philip shall always be a member of the Board of Trustees; and 4) That the Lovett School is committed to furthering the "Episcopal faith as contained in the Book of Common Prayer."

At present, with the full knowledge of the Standing Committee of the Diocese, worship services of the Church continue at the Lovett School, including a weekly celebration of the Holy Communion. The Society is shocked that the Dean of the Episcopal Cathedral of St. Philip continues to serve as Chairman of the Board of Trustees. This fact and his present involvement at the Lovett School worship services clearly identifies the Episcopal Church with the school's segregationist policy.

Lovett's Director of Administration, J. A. Rabbe, obviously does not consider the school as presently outside the orbit of the Episcopal Church. This is evidenced by Mr. Rabbe's letter to parents on August 8, 1963. At that time he reassured them that daily chapel, Wednesday morning Communion services, the teaching of religion, and all other religious emphases "will be continued just as in the past and have the approval of the Bishop."

Following a thorough and prayerful consideration of the facts of the Lovett School situation, the Society feels constrained to protest in the following manner: 1) sustained inter-racial participation in the school's services of worship; 2) sustained picketing of the school by concerned Churchmen; 3) expressing our common guilt in the sin of segregation through the recitation of the Penitential Office at the Cathedral of St. Philip; and 4) regularly offering prayers throughout the whole Church in order to help heal the deep wounds, both personal and social, which the Lovett School has created.

(OVER)

The Lovett School situation is all the more grievous because it is symptomatic of the widespread compromise of the Church's teaching. The Society commends those people at Lovett School and in this community who recognize the injustice of segregation and who continue to suffer and labor in obedience to Jesus Christ.

FOR RELEASE IMMEDIATELY October 15, 1963

LOVETT SCHOOL PROTEST BEGINS

Picketing of the Lovett School in protest of its policy of segregation begins today. Episcopal laymen and laywomen from the Atlanta area will initiate the protest action that will be continued on an indefinite and periodic basis so long as it remains a Church-related school that segregates. The concern of the entire Episcopal Church for the Lovett situation will be demonstrated in succeeding weeks by the participation of clergy and laity from all parts of the country. A statement by the Executive Committee of the Episcopal Society, which has been previously released, is attached as background information on the protest now beginning.

This is not a protest action that seeks to encourage Lovett faculty and students to refrain from crossing the picket line. Rather, as the attached statement suggests, those who walk in protest before the school recognize that many within "suffer and labor in obedience to Jesus Christ" notwithstanding the policy of the Lovett Board of Trustees to bar Negro applicants. Neither do those who protest claim any immunity from the agony of the Church nor the common failure that involves everyone in the Church.

Tuesday's action, beginning at approximately 2:30 P.M., will be conducted by a small interracial group of Atlanta Episcopal laity. Other Atlanta Churchmen will assist with picketing later. In succeeding weeks various prominent Churchmen will join them. All will protest in dignified fashion through carrying signs that show a Crucifixion scene where Christ's Body is pierced by the words SEGREGATION and SEPARATION emblazoned on a barbed wire fence that bisects His Body and separates two kneeling figures of different color.

Faith & Prejudice in Georgia

What role should the church play in the bitter fight for Negro equality in schools? In Atlanta last week, the question was very much in the public eye as pickets bearing anti-segregation placards marched outside the fashionable, privately run Lovett School. It was a kind of civil rights protest that the South has grown used to—except that this time the pickets included Episcopal priests, and their protests were aimed at a school with Episcopal ties.

The pickets were objecting to Lovett's whites-only admission policy, which pits the practice of some wealthy supporters of the church squarely against the desegregationist preaching of their bishops. Atlanta's crusading Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., a Baptist, raised the issue last February, when he asked the school to admit his son. The school said no to him, and later to two Negro children from Episcopal families. The ground for rejection was purely racial, and the arguments have been echoing across Atlanta ever since.

Communion Every Wednesday. Lovett's trustees obviously felt that their church connection was not involved, since the school is, technically, an autonomous corporation without church affiliation. But in fact, 14 of Lovett's 21 trustees are required to be Episcopal communicants; their chairman is the dean of St. Philip's Cathedral; and, in keeping with the school's chartered purpose of furthering religion in accordance with "the Episcopal faith as contained in the Book of Common Prayer," Holy Communion is celebrated by the dean each Wednesday morning for the student body.

This was connection enough for Lovett's headmaster, the Rev. James McDowell. He promptly resigned, saying, "The church has spoken on the matter of segregation, and it is my duty, so long as I am a priest, to adhere to its teachings." At the same time, the Rt. Rev. Randolph Claiborne, Jr., Bishop of Atlanta, declared that the trustees' actions "have forfeited the right of implied or official support for the Lovett School by the Episcopal Church." But to many, the bishop's words seemed hollow, since he had hardly exhausted opportunities for bringing pressure on the school. He presumably could ask St. Philip's dean to resign as head of the trustees, or even forbid the holding of Episcopal services at Lovett.

He did none of these things, causing the Atlanta Constitution's Publisher Ralph McGill, himself an Episcopalian, to resign from the cathedral, snorting "Utter hypocrisy" to an interviewer from the Atlanta church's monthly newspaper The Diocese. McGill's words never got into print, for a right-hand man of the bishop rushed to The Diocese's print shop after the press run was over, gave orders that the entire issue be destroyed and a new one distributed without the interview.

Pillars of the Church. Behind the bishop's reluctance to take tougher action, no doubt, was the fact that among Lovett's staunchest supporters is a group of Atlanta's richest and most influential people who also happen to be pillars of the Episcopal Church. An example is wealthy Lawyer Philip Alston Jr., a senior warden of St. Luke's parish. Since 1959 he has personally been responsible for raising more than $350,000 for Lovett's building program—including one gift of $100,000 that was contingent upon the school's remaining closed to Negroes.

Whether or not Lovett ever caves in to the pickets and desegregates, the diocese has already been bitterly divided by the situation, and it may take years for the ill will to dissolve. To one priest in the diocese, the Lovett School has become "the Little Rock of the Episcopal Church." It is in fact a small-scale but authentic Christian tragedy.

As their years of service and support for the diocese indicate, the supporters of the Lovett School are in many respects dutiful and loyal members of the church who simply cannot accept this one summons to obedience on the question of desegregation. Yet the Episcopal bishops have made it unmistakably clear that in 1963 the real test of Christian service is whether a man lives up to this specific application of Jesus' command, "Love thy neighbor."

STILL SEGREGATED AND CHURCH-RELATED

The TIME account above is accurate and fair. Pictures and captions (from school yearbooks and news stories) on the other side of this sheet have been prepared by the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity. They show Atlanta Episcopalians and others who have come to Atlanta to demonstrate the concern of the entire Church. Other Atlanta groups have indicated they would join the protest. As of March 1, 1964, this was the situation at Lovett:

- Segregation prevailed with no sign of change in sight, notwithstanding the appointment of a new Headmaster. However, vague references increasingly emanate from Lovett spokesmen who assert they have not said the school would "never" integrate. Enrollment is down over one hundred already and it is known that other faculty and students will leave if things remain as they have been.
- The school's charter has been modified, substituting "Christian" for "Episcopal" and eliminating religious criteria for the selection of Trustees, but all Episcopal Trustees remain on the Board, including the Dean of the Cathedral.
- All that outwardly characterizes Lovett as 'Church-related' remains the same. Yearbook captions on the other side suggest some of Lovett's ties to the Church. Morning Prayer is said almost daily. Special services from time to time, in the tradition begun when Lovett was under the Cathedral, continue. There is a weekly celebration of the Holy Communion. The diocesan Standing Committee has said that it did not find the continuation of services at Lovett detrimental to the interests of the Church.

The following RESOLUTION was adopted on Friday evening, November 15, 1963, at a Joint Session of The Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity and The National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice, which met concurrently, at The International Inn.

RESOLUTION #15

WHEREAS, the National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice and The Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity are duly convened in Washington, D. C. to consider the requirements of faithfulness to the Gospel in the cause of justice and unity among men; and

WHEREAS, our attention has been focused upon the witness for interracial justice and unity in Chester, Pennsylvania and Williamston, North Carolina, to wit:

In Chester, our brothers have publicly demonstrated their concern for reasonable improvement of overcrowded, unsanitary, unsafe school conditions in depressed areas of that city. Four hundred and forty-one men, women and children have been arrested; their bail is presently set at $200 apiece and their fines may range as high as $300 apiece. Christian clergy and lay leaders in Chester have neither shared in nor supported this witness and this suffering.

The demonstrations and mass arrest have led the authorities of the city of Chester to agree to relieve overcrowding, eliminate unsafe and unsanitary conditions and to close and rebuild the most inadequate of its facilities, the Franklin Elementary School; and

In Williamston fifteen white Christians, clergy and four seminary students, affirming their belief that all men are members of the same human family, were arrested yesterday with fifty-four Negroes while marching into the downtown area in a demonstration for interracial justice and unity in that community. These were the first white persons to join the Negro demonstrators there since they began their actions over four months ago. During this time more than 230 demonstrators have been arrested. The marchers are being held under $500 bond;

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that

We, The National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice and the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity urge Roman Catholic and Episcopal clergy and laity in Chester and Williamston to stand with and support their brethren who have so clearly demonstrated their faithful convictions;

We offer our prayers, our alms and whatever other resources are available to us within our respective disciplines for the relief of those who have suffered or have been imprisoned for their witness;

We commend our Christian brothers who have been active in this just cause and send our greetings and our love to all those in whose witness we so rejoice.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * *

The offering received at two celebrations of The Holy Communion was designated for Chester and Williamston as a tangible sign of the concern of The Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity.

The Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

THE PURPOSE of this Society shall be to encourage men to respond positively to God's call for unity in the Church. The unity of God with man, and man with man, is made by God in Baptism and Holy Communion. We commit ourselves to establish total participation in the Church for all persons without regard to race, class, or national origin; to give mutual support to all who act in this ministry of reconciliation; and to express this concern at parish levels and in a more creative witness throughout the community at large.

IN FAITHFULNESS to Jesus Christ, Who values all men equally, and Who prayed that all might be One in Him, and in understanding of the essential unity of the Church, the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity affirms the unity in His Body of all persons without any distinction as to race, color, national origin or class. In accord with the councils of the Church, we affirm that any form of segregation or separation based on such distinctions in either the Church or the general community is contrary to the will of Christ and must be resisted by His Church and its members.

WE CONFESS OUR FAILURE to seek steadfastly this unity of persons and we penitently admit to prejudices which may separate us from brothers. Praying daily that the Church may be rid of all divisions based on race, color, national origin or class, and that a more just social order be established, the members of the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity will work toward this end within the Church and their communities as they are individually and corporately able. They constitute this Society as a sign of their commitment and as a means of resource to the Church, and they invite other Churchmen to join them in its objectives, which are to seek:

1. A recognition that our responsibility lies with all persons in a given geographical area and is concerned with drawing these persons into full fellowship through Baptism and Holy Communion within that one parish unit.

2. Mutual support amongst this society for all clergy and laity who, in seeking total participation in parish life for all, find themselves at odds with accepted social mores.

3. Increased acceptance and implementation of the principle that the Church is an inclusive fellowship which seeks out and welcomes all persons into the worship and parish life of any congregation without distinction as to race, color, national origin or class.

4. Elimination of criteria based on race, color, national origin or class for applicants to Church camps, conferences, schools, colleges, hospitals, or other institutions or agencies which the Church may operate or sponsor in any way.

5. Understanding of the prophetic role of the Church, both through corporate and individual effort, in seeking the elimination of racial and other prejudicial barriers in society, whether these be erected by governmental process or through custom.

6. That condition of harmony among peoples which is the benefit of a mutual recognition of the Lordship of Jesus Christ, so that brothers may dwell together in unity and see Him so lifted up that He will draw all men unto Him.

If you agree with this Statement, take your stand with three thousand others and use the attached form to join. If there is a Chapter of the Society where you live, you will be informed about local activities. Whether you are active in a chapter or not, your membership in ESCRU makes you part of a growing fellowship of Churchmen who are ready to move beyond words into the concrete implementation of these objectives. You must decide what you can do where you are.

With still others being formed, as of late 1963 there were ESCRU chapters in these dioceses: Michigan, Missouri, Chicago, Maryland, New York, Ohio, Long Island, Minnesota, Rhode Island, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Los Angeles, Indianapolis, Texas, and Central New York. Informal ESCRU groups meet in other dioceses and at some seminaries on occasion.

THE EPISCOPAL SOCIETY FOR CULTURAL AND RACIAL UNITY

Advent II NEWSLETTER December 8, 1963

"It is for us, the living, rather, to be dedicated, here, to the unfinished work that they have thus far so nobly carried on..... that the nation shall, under God, have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth." - Abraham Lincoln

"A rising tide of discontent...threatens the public safety...The events in Birmingham and elsewhere have so increased the cries for equality that no city or state or legislative body can prudently ignore them."; "(The) result of continued Federal legislative inaction will continue, if not increase, racial strife--causing the leadership of both sides to pass from the hands of reasonable and responsible men to the purveyors of hate and violence."; "We face...a moral crisis as a country and a people... It is time to act in the Congress, in your state and local legislative body, and above all, in all our daily lives."

- John F. Kennedy

"...and, above all, the dream of equal rights for all Americans whatever their race or color. These and other American dreams have been vitalized by his drive and by his dedication. And now the ideas and the ideals which he so nobly represented must and will be translated into effective action."; "...no memorial oration or eulogy could more eloquently honor President Kennedy's memory than the earliest possible passage of the civil rights bill for which he fought so long. We have talked long enough in this country about equal rights. We have talked for a hundred years or more. It is time now to write the next chapter, and to write it in the books of law."; "John Kennedy's death commands what his life conveyed--that America must move forward. The time has come for Americans of all races and creeds and political beliefs to understand and to respect one another. So, let us put an end to the teaching and the preaching of hate and evil and violence. Let us turn away from the fanatics, from the far left and the far right, from the apostles of bitterness and bigotry, from those defiant of law, and those who pour venom into our nation's bloodstream. I profoundly hope that the tragedy and the torment of these terrible days will bind us together in new fellowship, making us one people in our hour of sorrow."

- Lyndon B. Johnson

OUR HEARTS HAD ALL MET IN ONE MAN

"Weep, brothers, weep! You have cause. It is right, it is manly. The murder was cruel. It searched for and found the spot where it might meet and wound a nation's heart....Weep, brothers; confess to the success of the enterprise. The shot was well aimed. It brought us all down, down into the dust. Our hearts had all met in one man; and there they all received the fatal blow. It was cruel to hurt us so...." - The Rev. E. N. Kirk, 1865.

When we mourn the death of someone important to us we recall the times we met or the times we watched him, as well as our own whereabouts when it all happened. As John Kennedy flew South to sorrow I enplaned for upper New York State where I spoke that evening. The next day I was lunching with a group of clergy in Schenectady when the waiter brought news that the President had been shot in Texas. We prayed for him and for the country. Surely he'll recover if this is really so. We hurried out and in the lobby the finality of it all crashed in: He's dead!

My next engagement was Sunday evening. Seldom in my travels is there free time that I do not employ actively in visiting ESCRU folks or looking up others, but it had been a busy fall and I had decided to stop at the Holy Cross Monastery and rest a few days. It was a good place to go to cry. The radio in my U-Drive-It took me to Dallas, and Washington, and throughout the land and abroad where my horror and incredulity merged with everyone else's. The long-distance telephone eased my feeling that I should fly home. Repeated readings by Robert Frost over one network articulated something for many: "I have been one acquanited with the night. I have walked out in rain--and back in rain. I have outwalked the furthest city light." Whitman's "O Captain! my captain!" erradicated a hundred years as the reader said: "Here Captain! dear father! This arm beneath your head; It is some dream that on the deck, You've fallen cold and dead."

It was not a dream. The shots were well aimed and we were a stricken people. The grief has not passed nor will it quickly. Our hearts had all met in one man and he is dead. We would mourn for any President's death, but there is more here than the office he held or even the cruel circumstances. There was a beauty and vitality about the man and his mind which compelled admiration, even, I believe, from some who differed with him on policies. As was said in a sermon in Atlanta: "He was courageous, resolute, brilliant, aggressive..." He was this and more; idealist and pragmatist, he inspired confidence as someone who would venture much and get the job done, even if we might have felt he should have risked more. He understood and welcomed pressure in behalf of common goals. It was reassuring to know that he was at the helm. It is not easy to transfer this confidence to a new captain, although I think that he, too, will merit it. It is ironic that he in whom our hearts had met will, in death, be our strongest ally for the accomplishment of national purposes toward which he had directed us.

John Kennedy's journey had ended as I concluded the longest trip I've ever taken. I stopped first in Washington and stood outside Arlington Cemetery as the cortege came by and during the graveside services which were audible over the wall to the thousands of us who could do nothing more to help. We saw the temporal power of the world go by and prayed that the harmony would endure beyond, if not because of, mourning. Taps sounded and the Cardinal's final prayer and it was time to head back to the airport, but there were no taxis as in the morning. I thought of a brave woman who had walked that day and determined that I had both the time and the will to walk also. Perhaps others similiarly will walk new paths or go down them further because of the courage of the man we buried and the woman who walked. I thought of her again when I got home and was told how my five-year-old namesake had asked, as he watched television: "Am I a 'John-John'?" - JOHN B. MORRIS

HEADWATERS OF HATE

"How many Sunday school children have to be dynamited to death? How many Negro leaders have to be shot in the chest? How many presidents have to be assassinated?", asked Churchman LeRoy Collins in an address at Columbia, S. C. The former governor of Florida went on to say that the murder of President Kennedy was fostered by "Dixie battle cries which incite sick souls to violence." It is so. I have seen these past ten years of Southern resistance to desegregation insidiously at work to produce a climate where murder seems like a simple solution. To be sure, crackpots may come forth anytime, but the tempo of the times facilitates their capacity to act. Consider the school children in some Southern schools (did it happen elsewhere?) who applauded when the President's death was announced. This would not have happened ten years ago. We are paying the price now of "massive resistance". It has become an easy thing to talk about "the encroaching Federal octopus", our regional "way of life" as over and against an evil national government, with cries for impeachment on all sides and even more. Some of the same Southern politicians who called to "pay their respects" upon the President's death contributed to the cirsumstances which made it more possible. That the accused assassin displayed left-wing leanings, although he was probably more crackpot than anything, does not absolve the right-wing fanatics whose headwaters of hate are chiefly racial. It is not difficult to discern racial prejudice under the cries of "states rights", "Buy American", "Communist", etc. The real Communists are much too disciplined to do business with someone like Oswald. Their most effective work is done through those who oppose them the most, creating the climate where anarchy and utter disregard for the state shows itself in the fatal blow at Dallas. While racism has never been an exclusive Southern product, and neither is right-wing extremism for sure, there is too much about what has happened with particular roots in Southern history to leave us comfortable. The lynch law of the South operated in classic terms in the terrible shooting of Oswald. But who is not of the South? It is only that here the sickness is closer to the surface. Because it is, notwithstanding the meaning of what happened in Dallas, the South will probably move further ultimately. - JBM

TO MORE ELOQUENTLY HONOR

President Johnson, himself a Southerner, has set the pace for what we must do now. Can we do less than support him, both because it is right and because nothing "could more eloquently honor President Kennedy's memory than the earliest possible passage of the civil rights bill."

Write and wire President Johnson, your Senators and congressmen, and let them know you'll back them up. ESCRU chapters and members around the country sent wires in advance of President Johnson's address to Congress. This was mine: "Even as we mourn the most fitting tribute to the late President will be resolute action in civil rights. Many white citizens of the South such as myself, along with a host of other Americans, will be holding up your arms as you speak to these matters tomorrow."

Watch for the key times to send a letter or wire again....and do it! Don't wait for someone else to suggest it. The power of vox populi should not be underestimated.

Look to official Church support for civil rights legislation in the form of public stands by vestries and parish meetings, and at diocesan conventions. Our bishops have taken such a stand nationally. This must have grass-roots expression now.

Support and encourage the efforts of our national Department of Christian Social Relations in behalf of legislation. In the face of opposition from some quarters it would be well for diocesan conventions to go on record specifically backing up the National Church's program.

Finally, intensify your efforts amongst friends and fellow parishioners to give them the opportunity of deciding where they really stand on race. Legislation is needed, but the conversion of a whole people is involved. Your own witness is supremely important.

Consider the possibilities of what you might do in enlisting the concern of others through a membership recruitment effort for ESCRU....through personal contact and confrontation. The decision to join ESCRU has, for many, been the beginning of a more meaningful life in the Church.

THE ANNUAL MEETING - 1963

HOW WAS IT? With upwards of 300 persons the attendance at the Third Annual Meeting doubled that of previous years, and with an equal number of Roman Catholics attending the concurrent sessions of the National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice the International Inn in Washington was a behive of activity.

THE SPEAKERS. Wyatt Tee Walker, Burke Marshall, Louis Lomax, Bill Stringfellow, and Arthur Walmsley; with Tom Thrasher and Jim Breeden preaching at the eucharists. A set of tape recordings will be available to chapters later.

THE PARTICIPANTS. From all over, with far-away places like California, Texas, Minnesota, Georgia, etc., represented. The one flaw was that there was too little time for participants to talk with each other and learn how each approaches problems and opportunities in their situations back home. We'll spend more time on this at the Annual Meeting next year which convenes in St. Louis just before the General Convention.

WHAT WE SAID. Resolutions adopted at the Third Annual Meeting are enclosed with this newsletter. They include a joint one adopted by ESCRU and the National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice (NCCIJ) regarding protest actions in Chester, Penna., and Williamston, N. C.

PROPOSED PROGRAM. Two proposals described elsewhere in this newsletter were commended to the national ESCRU Board for final action: One would seek financial support for the National Church when funds were otherwise withdrawn because of the Church's stand on race, and the other proposes that segregated Church-related institutions be identified in some symbolic action at the next General Convention.

WE ELECTED: To the national ESCRU Board from floor nominations in Washington - The Rev. Theodore Gibson, The Very Rev. & Bishop-Elect Paul Moore, Jr., Mr. Lloyd A. Johnson, and Mrs. Francis X. Walter. See the enclosed Statement of Purpose for their whereabouts. They joined 12 incumbent Directors and the 8 elected via the provincial mail ballot who were: The Rev. Joseph A. Pelham, Mr. Malcolm E. Peabody, Dr. Kenneth Clark, Mr. Maury Maverick, Mr. John Murphy, III, The Rt. Rev. James A. Pike, The Rev. Hugh Saussy, Jr., and the Rt. Rev. Chandler W. Sterling.

TRUSTEES SET GOALS FOR LOVETT.

THE LOVETT SCHOOL SITUATION

Picketing continued for six weeks until the day before the President's death. It will be resumed this week and continue indefinitely and periodically so long as Lovett remains segregated. See the October 13, 1963, Newsletter for the full statement by the ESCRU Executive Committee which determined after a three day meeting in Atlanta that the protest should be made.

Pickets were before Lovett on 17 out of the 30 school days during the first six weeks of picketing. To date all have been Episcopalians. Because the segregated status of Lovett is also a community concern it is expected that others will join the protest sometime early in 1964. Thus far 15 lay persons have picketed one or more times, as compared to 12 clergy. 14 visitors have participated, as compared to 13 Atlantans. Other Atlantans were to have joined the action the 7th week which was cancelled.

Demonstrating the concern of the entire Church for this "Little Rock of the Episcopal Church" visiting "picketees" (as John Burnett Morris, Jr., terms them) have come from California, Michigan, Texas, Iowa, Pennsylvania, Illinois, and Massachusetts. A priest from Ohio will picket next week and it is expected that other areas will send representatives. In addition to picketers sent by ESCRU Chapters, there have been representatives of the Michigan Girls Friendly Society and the Episcopal Churchwomen of the Dioceseof Michigan. The roster includes such well-known Churchmen as the Rev. C. Kilmer Myers and the Rev. Malcolm Boyd.

There is still need for assistance. Groups able to send a representative should advise the ESCRU office and suggest alternative dates when they could have someone in Atlanta for at least two full days. In the face of elusive restraints, pressures, and fears, visiting Churchmen encourage and strengthen Atlanta Churchmen. It also indicates the widespread nature of the concern for Lovett, and, finally, it sends informed persons back to interpret the situation in their respective dioceses.

The November 15, 1963, issue of TIME magazine carried a lengthy and accurate account of the Lovett situation and, for the first time in print, identified at least one of the wealthy powers-behind-the-scenes who have had decisive roles in keeping Lovett segregated. They named the Senior Warden of one of the largest parishes in Atlanta. Other interpretative pieces on Lovett have appeared elsewhere, including a story in the NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE of November 17th.

Because so much confusion and misinformation concerning ESCRU's role in the Lovett situation is abroad, largely emanating from the diocesan office here, a copy of a fourteen page letter to the Bishop of Atlanta is enclosed for the information of ESCRU members. It should be remembered that ESCRU said nothing publicly until June and then and since has sought to acknowledge appreciatively such steps as diocesan officials finally took. The bitter background of it all is in this letter.

The jumble of captions or headlines amidst the pictures on the previous page tell the story as the general public sees it. The captions nearest the center picture of the school are from school yearbooks and indicate something of the religious nature of the school. The school seal is shown and under the center picture is a reproduction of a letterhead form used by Lovett since the expansion and move into new buildings. It says what some deny: "AN EPISCOPAL DAY SCHOOL". A headline tells of the addition only this fall of the cross affixed to the school building and visible in the upper left-hand corner of the center photograph. The Capetown Placard carried by the clergy and laity picketing tells its own story. The Acting Headmaster, Mr. J. A. Rabbe, shown pacing in the street on the first day of picketing in the lower center photo, reveals something of the dilemma and challenge facing the Trustees, most of whom are prominent in the Church in Atlanta. As those who "set goals for Lovett" they have thus far chosen segregation as a primary one.

"A MATTER IN DISPUTE?"

Seabury Press used to do address labels for all the clergy for ESCRU. They now use the mailing services of National Council and advised us to apply there when we wanted to send a mailing a few months ago. Although several years ago we'd been told National Council couldn't do labels for ESCRU, at several stages along the way in our request for help we were assured that there would be no difficulty. We had to submit a formal request stating the contents of the proposed mailing. We did. It would contain a covering letter and enclosures: an ESCRU Statement of Purpose and membership form, the flyer on the Annual Meeting, and a piece interpreting ESCRU's interest in Lovett chiefly on the basis of the Executive Committee's statement. Our request was refused. Several reasons were offered in reply which might or might not have bearing on the question of the organization making the request. The final reason, however, and the one which seems primary as I read their reply, was put this way: "Furthermore, the mailing that you proposed was to have included a position paper on a matter in dispute within the Church. This likewise represented a request for deviation from policy." The so-called "position paper" was to have been our official position on Lovett - namely, why we felt it necessary to protest segregation at a Church-related school. Nothing of the background dispute with diocesan officials was involved. Is it a deviation from policy to oppose segregation at Church-related institutions? Are we really supposed to take action and become involved? Or is it only satisfactory when our action and involvement is out in the world somewhere so that it doesn't upset the tranquility of the Church itself? A matter in dispute, indeed! If National Council thinks the Lovett issue is clouded will it call a hearing and let the whole question be explored? Or, must the Body of Christ be so deftly and politically contrived as to avoid discomfort to any and all bishops? It should be noted that the issue of address labels is only one instance where the timidity of National Council on intra-Church questions is revealed. Even CHURCH & RACE will not so much as report the fact that picketing is going on. How tragically the Church is continually calling us to commitment, witness and action, only to look askance when the call is taken seriously. - JBM

THE PENITENTIAL SHARE

One of two program proposals approved by the Annual Meeting and commended to the ESCRU Board for action is a plan termed "The Penitential Share". Recognizing that funds are being and will be withheld from the support of the National Church's program because of the Church's stand on race, it is proposed that ESCRU raise such funds as it can to compensate as much as possible for whatever a diocese may withhold, for instance. If a diocese, however, sacrificially makes up some parish's deficit withheld because of race and maintains its full support of the National Church, ESCRU would direct funds to that diocese. This effort would both serve to secure needed funds and would help to involve the whole Church in the effort. It might also encourage some to turn away from the use of economic pressure on the National Church, lest their share have to be borne by others.

A PERSPECTIVE

A quotation from the Executive Director's Report at the Annual Meeting, while discussing National Council: "Any shortcomings are our shortcomings - the Church's - and I propose that we rally to their support."

ACTION AT GENERAL CONVENTION

The Annual Meeting also commended to the Board a proposal whereby ESCRU would call for the picketing of Church-related facilities that are clearly known to be segregated (and only after a full effort has been made in negotiations to bring about change) during the week before General Convention in St. Louis next fall. One or more pickets would then bring their signs identifying the institution and join with others in an action designed to portray the failures of the Church, our penitence and intention to do something about it. It is proposed that we ask permission for the assembled pickets to walk in the procession at the opening service or, failing this, stand or walk silently outside the convention hall during the service. This proposal and the proposed "Penitential Share" will be presented in more complete form for the consideration of the ESCRU Board at a meeting early in 1964. Members or chapters wishing to record their feelings, pro or con, may write the national office. How we respond to this challenge will be critical for the future of ESCRU.

"WHAT CAN I DO TO HELP?"

Almost 4000 persons have joined ESCRU in its almost 4 years of life. Most of them were reached by another concerned person who witnessed to their commitment and to Christ and His will. Little by little confrontation is taking place. The issue of race in American life and in the Church will not leave the uncommitted alone You may be the catalyst for numerous friends you never thought cared taking a stand with you. The ESCRU Statement of Purpose and Membership Form can help you. Use the enclosed order form to obtain a supply & see how God can use you in quietly helping others to stand up and be counted.

THE INTEGRATION REVOLUTION

A 26-page booklet by this name contains representative columns by the Rev. Malcolm Boyd as published in THE PITTSBURGH COURIER. It may be ordered from ESCRU for $1.00. Postage additional if not prepaid.

S.O.S.

O O REMEMBER US, PLEASE, as the year draws to a close if you're in the bracket where this is possible. To survive, let alone move out, ESCRU must have an ever increasing number of members & friends who can give several hundred to a thousand dollars a year. Two gave the larger figure last year. If you're not in this category, don't feel guilty! Most ESCRU members who are able give more than their annual dues. By action of the Board, taken and announced last fall, minimal annual dues go to $4.00 in 1964, with $6.00 for a couple. And, while we're on the subject, please indicate always what a check is for. We're swamped and can't always remember that you just ordered some materials, etc. Lastly, by all means, please let us know if you are moving. Otherwise it costs in time and money when mailings are returned to us.

IF WE ONLY HAD THE MEANS....

We get letters at times marked "Attention: Research Dept." or "Publications Dept.", or even some right-active ESCRU members will address some inquiry "Dear Sirs" as if they didn't know that, except for membership renewals & literature orders, etc., all the mail comes to my desk. We could use the services of full-time staff in "Research" and "Publications", just to speak of a partial aspect of our work, but we haven't got them. Mrs. Crowley stays swamped with her bookkeeping duties, I with mine, and at the moment we're looking for an office secretary who should be two or three persons. Without even straining I could use a professional assistant. There are projects pending which may never get done. There is more we could and should be doing. We desperately need someone full-time in touch with the mushrooming chapters. In short, this is both a bid for your patient consideration if we seem not to turn out as you wish we could but, more importantly, it's a call for help if anyone within hearing distance has sufficient means or access to foundation assistance, or, even, planning ahead, would like to remember us in their will! Dollar for dollar I'll bet we produce more in the way of cause and effect for change and challenge as regards religion and race than most any other church-oriented group or agency. - J.B.M.

CAPETOWN PLACARD AVAILABLE

Large versions of the Capetown Placard, as used in the Lovett Protest (page 6) and measuring 22 X 28, may be ordered from the ESCRU office for display or demonstration purposes. The 6-ply poster is 75¢ each. A 50 pt. heavier board is $1.00. A carton that will take between 1 & 4 costs us 25¢. Because of its size it must go via Air Parcel Post. In short, two of the 6-ply shipped to New York City would run about $3.65 all told. Order & we'll bill you.

THE CHAPTERS

Most ESCRU Chapters are booming with program. It would, and probably should, take an entire Newsletter to fairly report on what we hear in Atlanta is happening. We will shortly issue a directory of key personnel so that the chapters may benefit from each other's newsletters, etc. The newest of our 16 officially chartered groups is in the Diocese of Central New York and is chaired by the Rev. George Nagle.

"And so, my fellow Americans: ask not what your country can do for you -- ask what you can do for your country.

"My fellow citizens of the world: ask not what America will do for you, but what together we can do for the freedom of man.

"Finally, whether you are citizens of America or citizens of the world, ask of us here the same high standards of strength and sacrifice which we ask of you. Lent III NEWSLETTER March 1, 1964

SOCIETY TO LAUNCH NEW SOUTHERN WORK

Under a grant from the Field Foundation, ESCRU will sponsor a "Southern Field Service" program aimed at strengthening ties amongst religious leaders in Southern communities for a more effective and common confrontation of the racial crisis. The Rev. Henri A. Stines, who is presently Rector of Grace Church, Detroit, will come to Atlanta in mid-April to initiate the project which is being undertaken in cooperation with the Commission on Religion and Race of the National Council of Churches. While marking the first addition to its professional staff since the founding of the Society, Fr. Stines will not be encumbered with organizational duties, but will focus through Episcopal Church channels on developing a more coordinated witness of church leaders in Southern communities both before and during specific crisis situations. He will be one of the first of a team of denominational workers the NCC expects to work through when needed. In subsequent ESCRU Newsletters Fr. Stines will have opportunity to report on his efforts and the situation as he finds it.

MISSION TO HATTIESBURG

"Nearly 50 clergymen - among them 11 Episcopal priests and two rabbis - journeyed to Hattiesburg, Miss., on January 21st, to support efforts of local Negroes to register as voters. Sponsoring the trips were the United Presbyterian Commission on Religion and Race (an official arm of the United Presbyterian Church), the Presbyterian Interracial Council, the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity, and the Rabbinical Assembly of America. ESCRU recruited the Episcopal participants, after the National Council of the Episcopal Church declined to do so. The Presbyterians

DR. KING TO ADDRESS SOCIETY DINNER AT GENERAL CONVENTION

The Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., will speak at the dinner sponsored by ESCRU at the General Convention in St. Louis on October 12th. The Convention opens the night before. The Society's Fourth Annual Meeting will be held in St. Louis for two days prior to Convention, opening on Friday night, October 9th. Churchmen who are not delegates to Convention, but want to attend the great opening service on Sunday evening, Oct. 11th, can come for the Annual Meeting on the 9th and stay through the dinner with Dr. King on the 12th and still have opportunity to see the opening highlights of a General Convention.

At the last General Convention the Archbishop of Capetown was the Society's guest and addressed its dinner. It was the largest of the various Convention dinners, with tickets sold out beforehand. Reservation forms will be sent to all members in the spring. If you are planning to come to the Annual Meeting and the opening days of Convention write now for housing information to:

ACTION PLANNED AT GENERAL CONVENTION

Pursuant to a recommendation of the 3rd Annual Meeting, the Society's Board of Directors determined at its meeting in Atlanta, February 2-4, to map plans for a peaceful demonstration in St. Louis which would attest to our corporate failures and need for remedy in realizing the inclusive nature of the Church at all levels. More on this later.

ESCRU MEMBERS AND OTHER CHURCHMEN SHOULD SUPPORT SPECIAL APPEAL

The Presiding Bishop has called on Episcopalians to give $150,000. and more to aid Episcopal clergy and laity involved in the civil rights struggle. An appeal letter has been sent to all clergy and was reproduced in the most recent issue of CHURCH AND RACE. Contributions may be sent to him made out to Lindley M. Franklin, Treasurer

HATTIESBURG MISSION, Continued from front page: "...were the initiators of the action, according to the executive director of ESCRU. The clergymen marched in support of the would-be voters on January 22nd and 23rd. None was arrested. Episcopalians taking part included the Rev. Messrs. Robert L. Pierson, head of the Christ the King Foundation, White Plains, N.Y.; Layton P. Zimmer, rector of Trinity Church, Swarthmore, Pa.; James Pritchard, vicar of Holy Trinity (Old Swedes) Church, Wilmington, Del.; David Earnest, assistant at St. Paul's Church, Cleveland, Ohio; H. Barry Evans, assistant at the Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation, Washington, D.C.;Warner White, rector of the Church of the Redeemer, Chicago; Grant Gallup, rector of St. Andrew's Church, Chicago; D. Rex Bateman, vicar of St. Luke's Church, Chicago; Robert W. Castle, Jr., rector of St. John's Church, Jersey City, N.J.; John W. Pyle, Episcopal chaplain at the University of Chicago; and Gibson Winter, associate professor at the Divinity School of the University of Chicago." - As reported in THE LIVING CHURCH, February 2, 1964. Denial of voter registration opportunities to Negro citizens of Hattiesburg has been a subject of litigation for some time without remedy. Now, since the presence of the visiting clergy, they are being processed, although it remains to be seen how many are actually registered. The picketing by the task force of clergy continued throughout the first week, marking the first time that peaceful picketing has been allowed by authorities in Mississippi. A task force of clergy has remained there since and will continue at least until Easter, with the Presbyterians still carrying the primary load. The Rev. Ralph Cousins, Rector of St. Andrew's Church, Barberton, Ohio, was on hand for the week of February 16th. The initial group of Episcopalians was sent, for the most part, by local ESCRU groups, but due to limitations of funds and staff time at the national office, and without the endorsement of official spokesmen as in the case of the Presbyterians, we have been unable to maintain as much support of the Mission to Hattiesburg as we should. Other chapters and individuals who are concerned should contact the national ESCRU office. (More interpretation of the Hattiesburg action later.)

LOVETT STILL SEGREGATED AND CHURCH-RELATED

The Society's Board of Directors picketed the Lovett School in Atlanta on February 4th and asked the Atlanta Chapter to take responsibility for a continuing protest of the segregation policies at the Church-related institution. The Board took cognizance of the fact that the primary concern is that segregation prevails, that the school is unashamedly Christian in orientation, and that numerous Episcopal ties prevail notwithstanding the substitution of the word "Christian" for "Episcopal" in the Charter. Chief amongst them is the recitation of Daily Morning Prayer and a weekly Eucharist celebrated by the Dean of Atlanta's cathedral who remains on the Board of Trustees. The diocesan Standing Committee's enabling action for the continuation of services also stands so far as is known. By all criteria Lovett will remain Episcopal Church-related even if a Presbyterian layman is hired as Headmaster, as is rumored, but the chief thing is that it remains segregated. To show its concern for this the Long Island Chapter of ESCRU sent the Rev. W. Robert Hampshire to picket the week of February 16th. One day he went to chapel and found Bryan Green who was in town for the Bishop's Mission.

NATIONAL COUNCIL STAFF TOLD NOT TO PICKET

Staff persons from the Episcopal Church's national headquarters were advised not to participate in Lovett picketing during their time in Atlanta for a conference on the urban ministry in early February. Meanwhile in Atlanta the general community is beginning to take note of how Lovett symbolizes the backwardness of Atlanta's power structure which is well represented by prominent Episcopalians serving on the Lovett Board. "Operation Breadbasket", an association of Negro clergy chiefly dedicated to eliminating employment discrimination, has voted to participate in Lovett picketing.

BOARD MINUTES AVAILABLE

Minutes of the Feb. 2-4 ESCRU Board meeting have been sent all Directors and Chapter chairmen. Other members may request single copies if desired.

DID YOU PUT IT TO GOOD USE?

We hope that no member is still in possession of the Statement of Purpose enclosed with the last Newsletter (Dec.8), but that it was passed on to some friend. They may be had in quantity for parish, diocesan, ECW, etc., mailings.

"THE WHITSUNDAY WITNESS" -

A Call To Witness

Whitsunday, 1964

On May 17, we observe the tenth anniversary of the historic Supreme Court decision on school desegregation. At the same time the Church marks the Day of Pentecost or Whitsunday, commemorating the outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon Christ's followers who were gathered "all with one accord in one place." As a nation we look back on ten years that were too long in coming, conscious of how much further we have to go in implementation of the spirit of the Court's decision. As Churchmen we look back through the ages to our original wholeness and oneness in Christ, penitently aware of the departures we have taken from the unfragmented Body of Christ which was filled with power on Pentecost and overcame all barriers of tongue and race. From the past we turn to the present and future and know that God is calling us both as citizens and Churchmen to take bold steps that will witness to our unity in Him while there is yet time.

In Whitsuntide of last year the Presiding Bishop said: "Discrimination within the Body of the Church itself is an intolerable scandal. Every congregation has a continuing need to examine its own life and to renew those efforts necessary to insure its inclusiveness fully." He called upon Churchmen to take action for this. Now, on Whitsunday of 1964, there is no more appropriate time for action that will witness to and call forth the unity of all men in Christ. Let the Church be renewed and stand as a beacon to guide a perplexed nation. Let the Faithful in Christ Jesus come together each Sunday with one accord in one place, so that it can no longer be said to be the most segregated hour of the week. Let us put aside our old patterns of 'separate-but-equal' congregations and so live together that it will be said: "Behold, how good and joyful a thing it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" Let this begin with the witness of each Churchman who hears and responds to this call.

The Board of Directors of the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity, having duly met in Atlanta, Georgia, on February 2-4, 1964, calls upon all Churchmen, and especially those who are members of the Society, to examine their situation to determine whether they may witness to the wholeness of the Church on Whitsunday of 1964, and thereafter, by transferring from their present parish to one where the members are predominantly of another color. We rejoice in those few congregations which already reveal the richness of God's handiwork and light the way for the rest of us.

We believe that the inclusiveness of the Church must be demonstrated by both Negro Churchmen transferring to predominantly white parishes, as well as by white Churchmen transferring to predominantly Negro parishes, but we would lay special emphasis on the latter. For too long have we expected the Negro alone to take the initiative. Because the Church is the People of God, and not the house in which they dwell, each congregation is equally important and intended to be inclusive of all persons. It has been necessary for the Negro American to lead the nation into freedom through his entry into places from which he was previously excluded. Now, let white Christians demonstrate their commitment by joining in minority status with Negro Churchmen. Neither may say he has no need of the other.

Let each witness as he is able and persuaded, all for the Glory of God. Let the Church in the cities rejoice in the witness and corporately march in solemn procession to accompany those who will transfer parishes. Let Whitsunday of 1964 more nearly find the people "all with one accord in one place." Let brothers dwell together in unity and see Him so lifted up that He will draw all men unto Him.

Questions & Answers on the Whitsunday Witness -

Q. What about parish boundaries? A. Their meaning in contemporary life is best seen as an imperative on parishes to take initiative to reach the people in the neighborhood. We are a mobile people and already disregard any concept of boundaries in selecting a parish. The parish cannot avoid its responsibility for the surrounding area, but it can also reach beyond for the sake of its inclusiveness and reflection of the total community in which it is placed.

Q. Isn't there a witness to be made by staying in one's present parish and doing what you can? A. Of course! No one can decide for another exactly what he should do and where he is most needed. You decide this yourself. You very well may be needed where you are, but consider also the meaning of your transferring to the people you would be leaving. (And, yet, do we ever really leave one another within our common life in the Church?)

Q. Will I really be welcomed at the other parish? A. Someone in every congregation will be glad you've come, but you mustn't go expecting a brass band. If it's a Negro congregation you're transferring to you'll probably find a cordial reception for the most part, but if some are honest they'd tell you they were uneasy at your entry into their cozy and congenial fellowship. Long traditions of separation aren't easily hurdled, however much our minds tell us it's right. You may even be the object of some special hostility from someone who doesn't trust anyone of the other color. Perhaps you'll be the first one he'll learn to love. If it's a white congregation to which you may transfer as a part of the Whitsunday Witness, you may sense all kinds of reactions - from downright hostility to warm and cordial welcomes. One of the latter kind should be sufficient, but even if there weren't one to welcome you it might still be something to which you're called. Be patient with those whites who betray signs of being overly gushy or others who seem to have a paternalistic air. They'll learn, with your help.

Q. Should I ask the approval of the clergy? A. You may want to tell them what you're planning to do and certainly be attentive to any advice they have, but it isn't necessary to ask anyone's approval to change parishes. No one has to vote whether to admit you. It's all in the canons. Your letter of transfer is to be sent your new parish at the time you change or shortly thereafter. Most of the clergy will rejoice in your witness and wish you Godspeed or welcome you as the case may be. Some may not want to see their own rolls diminished on the one hand, however, while others may be uneasy about what your arrival will do to established parish patterns.

Q. How about my just going to visit every now and then? A. Fine! But please don't call it a part of the Whitsunday Witness. You can do this any Sunday and it's probably helpful. What we're talking about now, though, is a full commitment of time, talents, money and devotion. Visitation programs are good, but some must go further for the sake of the wholeness of Christ's Church.

Q. This really isn't a very natural thing to do, is it? A. It isn't customary, to be sure, but is such a virtue? Perhaps the greater abnormality is our tragically separated condition whereby the categories of "white" and "Negro" parishes even exist. Such an act of witness as you are considering undertaking will become so natural in time that others wont have to worry about their self-consciousness. All-in-all it's better that you be somewhat self-conscious so that you will be protected from boasting of this in a manner designed to boost yourself instead of glorifying God.

Q. Who will help me decide? A. Talk with everyone you thing you should, and then ask Our Lord to help you in prayer and through the Holy Communion.

IF YOU INTEND TO JOIN IN THE WHITSUNDAY WITNESS:

Please let us know using the form to the right. It is not necessary, however, to advise us or anyone of your intention. Some may wish to do this as confirmation to themselves of their decision. No names of persons or parishes will be published. No follow-up contact will be made, although we would welcome hearing from you. This is a declaration of present intention and, of course, may be altered without further communication with the Episcopal Society.

THE AGONY OF THE CHURCH

The Rev. Jesse F. Anderson, Rector of St. Thomas' Church, Philadelphia, sent the Episcopal Society office copies of an exchange of correspondence he had with a former parishioner. We asked his permission to publish the letters which follow:

"Dear Father Anderson:

"I was a member of St. Thomas and I left Philadelphia after Christmas and am now living in Allendale, S. C. The Church here is all white and so far I have not been able to attend any of the Services. I was called in by some of the members and they told me that it would not be a good idea to come to their Church for Service and I walked out of the meeting. I wrote to the Bishop and he came and talked with me and said that he would let me know something later. It has been more than a week and I have not heard from him yet. So I am not going to Service anywhere. The minister seems to be afraid of the people. His name is Father Clark and the Bishop's name is Bishop Temple of Charleston.

"The minister and some of the members try to give me enough money to go to service on the campus of Voorhees Junior College 27 miles away but I refused to take it.

"So I would like to know what you think about it because I know you are very good on these things. Yours truly, Franklin Solomon"

"Dear Franklin:

"It hurts and tears my soul to receive a letter such as that I received from you. You mentioned that the members told you, it would not be a good idea for you to come to 'their' Church. I put 'their' in because in reality it is not 'their' Church but the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ.

"When St. Thomas' became organized it asked for admission to the Diocese of Pennsylvania every year from 1796 to 1865, but was refused because it was a Negro Church. However, they continued to ask year after year. It seems to me that a witness such as this is necessary in your case. I am sending a letter of transfer for you to Father Clarke and I would recommend that your Sunday worship be not 27 miles away at Voorhees College but that you go each Sunday to the Church of the Holy Communion (what irony!) and be turned away every Sunday as long as they wish to turn you away. Before you leave the vicinity of the Church kneel on the Church steps. (Under separate cover I am sending you a Prayer Book in case you do not have one). While kneeling say the Confession on page 589 asking God especially that He will take any hatred out of your heart. Then pray for the people within the Church that they will have their hardened hearts pierced by the love of the Lord Jesus Christ, that you then receive spiritual communion because the real presence of Jesus is on the Alter of that Church of the Holy Communion by reading the portion of page 80 beginning 'For in the night in which he was betrayed' through the Invocation at the middle of page 81 and that you read the words for receiving the Body and Blood of Our Lord at the bottom of page 82 and top of page 83. Such a witness as this would be the finest worship that you could have under the circumstances.

"If difficulty arises you can be assured that St. Thomas' Church will stand behind you financially and if it becomes absolutely necessary so that you feel you need me to be there personally with you, I will gladly come.

"God bless you and may His Body and Blood strengthen and refresh you in this trying hour. Very sincerely yours, Jesse F. Anderson."

Mr. Solomon may be addressed at 21 Ellis Street, Allendale, S. C., As of press time there was nothing new as to the position of the Church of the Holy Communion according to Fr. Anderson.

Allendale is a small Southern town. So is Cedartown, Georgia, where Saint James' Episcopal Church has recently welcomed a Negro family into the parish, making it the first somewhat integrated parish in the Diocese of Atlanta. The Rector is the Rev. H. L. Chichester, Jr., who may be addressed in care of the parish.

SCHOLARSHIP AID STILL AVAILABLE FOR SEWANEE

The first Negro student to be enrolled in the undergraduate school at the University of the South, Sewanee, Tennessee, is receiving financial assistance both from the University and from ESCRU. There is a balance in the ESCRU Sewanee Scholarship Fund available to additional Negro students admitted to the academy or college at Sewanee for the approaching academic year. Interested persons should apply first to Sewanee which welcomes applications. If the ESCRU funds are not allocated by this fall they may revert to the Prayer Pilgrimage Appeal Fund for other uses. Write Mr. John B. Ransom, Director of Admissions, University of the South, Sewanee, Tennessee, for information about admission requirements, courses, etc.

PRESIDENTIAL POSTER AVAILABLE

A poster, 14 inches by 18 inches, in red, white and blue colors, showing President Johnson and carrying the text of his plea for tolerance last November ("The time has come for Americans of all races and creeds....to respect one another....let us put an end to the teaching ...of hate and evil and violence....", Etc.) may be ordered from the Society's office for 15¢ each. It was prepared by the Institute of Human Relations and carries an imprint of the Episcopal Society.

MRS. KENNEDY ACKNOWLEDGES EXPRESSIONS

A number of Society members sent contributions to ESCRU in memory of President Kennedy. Notice of these was sent to Mrs. Kennedy. A card with the following message has been received from her: "Mrs. Kennedy is deeply appreciative of your sympathy and grateful for your thoughtfulness."

FIRST ESCRU PRESIDENT TO NEW POST

Mr. John V. P. Lassoe, Jr., who was the first President of the Episcopal Society, has left his appointment to the National Council to become the Director of the Diocese of New York's Department of Christian Social Relations. In this position the Church should have maximum benefit of his long experience and profound understanding of the meaning of CSR work. We wish him well and Godspeed.

BISHOP WEST AGAIN STANDS IN RECTORY DOOR

The Bishop of the Diocese of Florida has again refused permission to a white priest to accept a post in his diocese because of his taking a forthright position on the racial question. Several years ago he would not let a member of the Society's Board of Directors accept a call as curate, where both Vestry and Rector wanted him, unless he resigned his position in ESCRU. He went elsewhere in the South. Now Bishop West has discouraged a Negro parish from calling a white clergyman who would have probably accepted. We are advised by others in Florida that it was because of this particular priest's ready commitment to the Church's teaching on race. It is reported that Bishop West has said he doesn't feel he should let a white clergyman go to a Negro parish until he can place a Negro priest in a white parish. He has not replied to our letters asking for verification, nor did he before.

BISHOP OF VIRGINIA DELIVERS CHARGE

The Rt. Rev. Robert F. Gibson delivered an eloquent Pastoral Address to the 169th Council of the Diocese of Virginia in January, dealing extensively with racial and other controversial matters. A copy may be obtained from the ESCRU office.

MASSACHUSETTS CONVOCATION

In December the Diocese of Massachusetts had a special convocation on racial matters. It is but one thing in a series of positive steps taken by Churchmen in that diocese. Bishop Stokes' public statements have put the Church clearly on the side of total desegregation. The involvement of Episcopal clergy and others from the Boston area in Williamston, N. C., has both helped down there as well as back home, as in the aftermath of the Prayer Pilgrimage. The ESCRU Chapter is at work. These and other forces see the Church as attuned in the Diocese of Massachusetts to the needs of the day as anywhere. Assisting in all of this is ESCRU Director Father James Breeden who is a special consultant to the Bishop on racial matters.

NEW CHAPTERS CHARTERED

Charters were granted local ESCRU groups in Atlanta, Newark and Washington when the national Board met in Atlanta February 2-4. The Chairmen of the respective new chapters are: Dr. Lee Shelton, the Rev. Marshall Rice, and Mrs. James Herold. This brings to 19 the number of chapters.

NEW PLAY FROM BOYD

We have sold 400 production kits of the Rev. Malcolm Boyd's trilogy "Study in Color" and over 100 tape recordings. Now he has written a new one, "The Community", which may be obtained from the Division of College Work at the Episcopal Church's National Council. In this new work Fr. Boyd treats of "the idolatry of institutional church life." Brochures on both productions may be obtained from ESCRU.

NEGRO AND WHITE CHURCHES MERGE

In a merger of white and Negro congregations in Passaic, N. J., last fall there was also a merger of clerical staffs, creating what it seems is essential for the Church's ministry presently in an interracial society. Interracial team ministries will speak far louder than most anything else a parish can do.

THE GENERAL CONVENTION AND RACE

On the next page there is the full text of a resolution adopted by the General Assembly of the National Council of Churches last December. Delegates and others planning to attend the Episcopal Church's 61st General Convention in St. Louis this fall might study it carefully to determine whether there are guideposts here for what the Church should say from its most authoritative body.

Some will counsel no more resolutions and genuinely mean that they're tired of such and want action. Others will say this as a means of avoiding the confrontation. Resolutions, it seems, are always needed if there are issues or actions needing attention. They serve to instruct the Church and define its directions. There is very little action, as such, that General Convention can take except the action of focusing the whole Episcopal Church's attention on what it feels is important. It isn't that resolutions are unnecessary. They're terribly important, especially in the context of a General Convention. The problem is in regarding them properly afterwards.

Some will say that the Church has said all that needs to be said. True, someone somewhere in the Church may have said all there is to say. But, an examination of General Convention actions in the past will show that the Church's official and most binding commitments are fairly minimal.

These are some possible areas or subjects for attention: Full support to the substance of the Presiding Bishop's Whitsuntide Message of last year; Policy of the national Church and all of its agencies such as the Church Pension Fund regarding companies in which funds are invested and some plan whereby their influence can be felt in terms of employment practices, etc.; Counsel to the Church on the subject of intermarriage (It's not an irrelevent issue! Look at the furor when two University of Georgia students of different color got married. Hasn't the Church a responsibility to them, as well as to all other such couples, to define its position?); clear directions on clergy placement practices; guidelines for Church-related schools and other institutions, suggesting how the Church can withdraw when they fail to desegregate; policies regarding building contracts; full support financially and otherwise for the National Council of Churches' work in race; etc., etc. These are but some of the issues which the Convention might consider and in which the Church needs direction, not to speak of the still more basic question of integrating parishes.

ESCRU Chapters and key persons should take initiative to talk with the delegates from their diocese, encouraging them to introduce resolutions and support others. Don't assume that others will do it. We have no plans from national ESCRU other than to encourage attention to this by those in a position to do something. We will be happy to hear of plans any delegates or others develop, and receive copies of such resolutions as may be submitted, and may be able to assist in rallying support, but the initiative must come from the diocesan level. Once at St. Louis, Society members will work in behalf of worthwhile measures, but these must be formulated beforehand and can most effectively come out of diocesan delegations. - J.B.M.

CRITICISM AND THE CIVIL RIGHTS MOVEMENT

No one person and no organization should be beyond criticism as, together, we work for civil rights in the community at large. But it will probably always be so that some who see themselves as furtherest out on the lines will smart and sulk when others offer constructive criticism. The mature militant welcomes criticism as a means of refining his response and rationale for particular actions. Another & less responsible militant excoriates the critic and says, in effect, "if you're not with us all the way, you're against us!" Mutual respect for differing approaches and methods should prevail. We can act together when possible and separately when our approach differs. I disagree with the "lying-down-in-the-street" and the "going-limp" approach to some situations in direct action, although respecting that some have a well-considered theoretical defense of such. We can cooperate with these folks on other matters, all the while retaining an integrity of viewpoint and, hopefully, all profiting from the give and take of ideas as methods and strategies are discussed in a spirit of essential trust. - J.B.M.

A CALL TO THE CHURCHES FOR ACTION TO MEET THE CRISIS IN RACE RELATIONS

Resolution Adopted by the General Assembly
December 6, 1963

THIS General Assembly of the National Council of Churches is thankful for the increasing evidences that a new pattern of race relations is being established in our nation and that its constituent communions, their pastors, congregations, and members all over the land have been stirred as never before to act for justice, freedom and equality for Negroes and all other racial minorities.

We would be the first to admit that both the actions and their results have been insufficient either fully to reflect the imperatives of the Gospel or to meet the racial crisis as it develops in the nation. Recognizing that the National Council of Churches has not yet achieved in its own life and organization full implementation of its often reiterated pronouncements for racial justice and equality, this Assembly nevertheless dares once more to address an appeal to all churches and Christians. For we believe that the Church of Jesus Christ is commanded by its Lord to rid itself of all those forms of racial injustice which have been perpetuated through the years by us all in our churches, church organizations, agencies and institutions.

With full realization that the speed of accomplishment will vary from place to place, and with thanksgiving to God for all that has already been done, we call upon national church bodies and local congregations throughout the United States to initiate specific actions now, where such actions have not already been initiated, to achieve the following objectives:

1. All Christian churches should in fact be open to all regardless of race, and should publicly so declare. Similarly it should be affirmed that all qualified ministers should have access to pulpits or other church positions regardless of race or color.
2. Churches should develop patterns and programs whereby Negroes and whites in Christian churches may meet each other regularly in worship, fellowship and Christian service. Such patterns and programs should include (a) interchange of membership among congregations composed exclusively or predominantly of only one of the constituent racial groups in their communities, and (b) establishment of interracial groupings such as Vacation Church Schools, camps, conferences, choirs, committees and clubs.

   Churches limited in possibility of integration by housing patterns should organize small group meetings betwen their members and other churches predominantly of other races or colors in order to bring home to their members the extent and character of discrimination under which other Christians suffer.
3. Churches should adopt and implement a policy of recruiting, employing and promoting personnel without regard to race or color. Such policy should govern specifically the recruitment, employment, and promotion of pastors, secretarial staffs, directors of music and religious education, denominational executives, missionaries, and custodial staffs.

   Churches and their members as workers or employers should vigorously promote literacy and training programs, public and private, and the increase in use of such facilities in order to attack one of the largest single causes for unemployment in minority groups.
4. Curriculum materials and other publications should be examined to determine that they present an objective and helpful picture of racial difference, and emphasize the Christian's responsibility in the struggle for racial justice.

   Such materials and publications should contain pictures and descriptive materials which reflect the multiracial character of Christian communities and which emphasize the fact that racial pluralism enriches the experience of Christian community.
5. Churches should integrate the governing boards, staffs, and clientele of health, educational and welfare institutions owned or operated by, or affiliated with congregations, denominations and interdenominational agencies.
6. Churches should require fair employment practice clauses in construction contracts between churches and building contractors, and between general contractors and sub-contractors, irrespective of the fact that fulfillment of such non-discriminatory clauses may result in delays or increased costs.
7. Churches and their agencies should examine their investment portfolios to determine if funds are invested in enterprises which practice racial discrimination, and should remove such investments from enterprises which cannot be persuaded to cease and desist from practicing racial discrimination.
8. Churches should unite in supporting the prompt enactment of Federal, state and local civil rights legislation which will include adequate provisions guaranteeing to all without racial discrimination:
   a. Civil rights including the right to vote and to equal protection of the law;
   b. Equal access to education;
   c. Equal opportunity for employment, union membership, apprenticeship job training, and merit promotion;
   d. The right to rent or buy and to occupy housing everywhere; and
   e. Access to all public accommodations.
9. The churches should give moral and financial support to major civil rights organizations and to denominational and interdenominational commissions which have been established to work for racial justice. They should also support interreligious efforts, working with other Christian communions and other religious faiths in community action.
10. Churches and all Christians should remember always to act in love and without hate or bitterness, seeking always reconciliation in church, community and nation as our new pattern of justice is being established.

The General Assembly of the National Council of Churches believes that it is crucial for the church thus to witness to the love of God by giving its wholehearted support to all those seeking racial justice. We call upon the church to give this priority and to be willing to pay whatever price of unpopularity or sacrifice these acts may entail. This we must do to be true to the Christ who died for all men.

White Man's God Not for Negro?

Cuttings from African newspapers discussing the Birmingham riots and the racial attitudes in this country continue to arrive.

A Baptist missionary in Nigeria mailed in three cuttings from papers in that country. One was an editorial from "The Times" of Lagos, perhaps the most influential publication in that country.

McGill

At the bottom of this cutting the missionary had written, "As a Christian this one was. to me, the most tragic article of all. Why, why, don't our people at home know what they are doing to us . . .?"

THE MISSIONARY had marked paragrahps in the editorial which had provided the most sorrow and shame. They were as follows:

"One disturbing paradox emerges from the current race crisis in the United States. And that is, some Houses of God, which are supposed to be free to all comers, irrespective of the color of skin, are now being used in the foolish campaign aimed at showing the Negro that his own God is different from the white man's God. . . .

"Thirteen churches (in a report on our desk) rejected Negro groups seeking admittance, four received them and there were no reports from others . . . these churches were described as 'white churches.'

"WHITE CHURCHES and black churches in a country built on the concept of equality of the human race? The very idea is revolting! . . . the great teacher, Jesus Christ, whom these avowed segregationists who parade as pastors profess to follow, was never known to have drawn a demarcation line between one race and another. . . .

"We can forgive ill-educated whites who were brought up to regard their race as the superior race. But how does one explain the participation, actively or otherwise, of leaders in Christian religion in a behavior which is the direct antithesis of the doctrine of the Great Nazarene?"

CHAMBERS of Commerce in leading Southern cities, led by Atlanta and Charlotte, are urging merchants, hotels and restaurants to end segregation.

But an overwhelming majority of Christian houses of worship remain paralyzed by prejudice and comfort.

Episcopalians Urge Open-to-All Signs

By WILLIAM C. COTTER

The 57th annual council of the Episcopal Diocese of Atlanta has suggested its churches display signs declaring the houses of worship open to all races.

A resolution to that effect was passed by the council — after considerable debate and some amending — at the closing day of sessions held at St. Luke's Church here.

The council directed in the resolution that the Department of Christian Social Relations direct the signs "may be affixed" at churches in the diocese.

SUPPORTERS OF the idea said the signs would serve to prevent doubt in the minds of visitors and non - Episcopalians as to what the church's policy is.

Both the National Episcopal church and the Atlanta Diocese have a policy that all races are welcome to membership, but proponents of the resolution felt the signs would clear up any doubt about individual parish practices.

Rt. Rev. Randolph R. Claiborne Jr., bishop of the Atlanta Diocese, who presided at the council, made the point when discussion began that the church's policy on racial discrimination is clear. Any vote on signs would not affect the policy at all, he said.

CONSIDERABLE debate ensued during consideration of the resolution.

Objections ranged from opposition to "ordering the churches to erect the signs to semifacetious questoning about the size of the signs and their lettering.

One opponent said a church could follow the instructions of the resolution by putting up a postcard sized sign. They could write the sign in all-capital old English script and "nobody would be able to read it," he said.

Others said the church's position on the subject is clear and that the signs are superfluous.

But those who favored the resolution insisted the signs would "cost little" and would "make witness to the entire public" of the church's policies.

"We as Episcopalians know where the church stands," declared one supporter of the move, "but do travelers and visitors?"

FORMER State Sen. Peyton Hawes of Elberton, a lay delegate, spoke on the resolution, saying "I yield to individual efforts." That is what makes democracy work, he said.

"If there is any hypocrisy in the Episcopal church I have never found it," Mr. Hawes said.

(After Mr. Hawes had spoken, a motion was passed to limit talks on the subject to two minutes. Before he began, Mr. Hawes reminded the council it was improper to applaud in the House of God.

(The council had been applauding in reaction to remarks made on the floor.)

REV. WARREN SCOTT, chaplain at Atlanta University, replied to Mr. Hawes' remarks: "If there is no hypocrisy in the Episcopal church, I don't know what it is."

Mr. Scott, a Negro, said he has felt unwelcomed in some Episcopal churches.

Before it was passed, the sign resolution was changed from "to be affixed" to "may be affixed."

CHERAW (S.C.) CHRONICLE 1/23/64

Negro Neutralism

Members of the Negro middle class who hold themselves aloof from the struggle for equal rights and leave it to their intelligent, but semi-literate, brothers to carry on the fight deserve what they will get: crums from the white man's table and continued second class citizenship.

The man with a pretty good education, a thriving business, children in college, and a growing stake in society has a far greater obligation to himself, and to other members of his race, to play a significant role in the battle than his less fortunate, but oftimes more courageous, brother.

He is in a position to be particularly effective, for he has achieved success in the material world, has earned respect aamong influential members of the white community, and cannot be so readily dismissed either as an ignorant fool or a tool of outside troublemakers.

He is in a unique position to offer service to both white and colored people by controlling the direction of the civil rights revolution and making sure that it remains a peaceful, responsible, loyal movement of social protest.

If he holds himself above the fray, he sacrifices this oportunity for leadership, ignores his duties of good citizenship, and eventually will sacrifice the respect of his colored comrades without winning any great admiration from his white friends.

THE CHURCH AND RACE AT THE DIOCESAN LEVEL

A rash of diocesan conventions and councils, as they are variously called, finds the Church stronger in some areas because of them and weaker elsewhere, but surely more sensitive to the issues everywhere because of the confrontation brought by proposed resolutions and actions. We don't presume in the ESCRU Newsletter to offer a thorough reporting of such events, but would direct the reader to CHURCH AND RACE from National Council, THE EPISCOPALIAN, and the other periodicals of the Church. For the most complete coverage we suggest THE LIVING CHURCH. But herewith something of what has gone on around the country recently.

The news story reprinted from THE ATLANTA JOURNAL on the previous page shows something of the Council of the Diocese of Atlanta. Two out of six resolutions on race passed, including the one on signs described in the article. A proposal to send $500. and/or the Ash Wednesday Offering to the Presiding Bishop's special appeal for funds for the Church's work in the racial crisis failed, although 300 times that amount was allocated to the Cathedral to help pay off the mortgage.

In the Diocese of Texas positive steps were taken affecting parishes which fail to pay anything on their diocesan quota. St. Thomas' Church, Houston, has not paid anything on an annual quota of $16,912. The Rector, the Rev. Robert Ingram, is an active segregationist, publishing materials on his views and speaking at Citizens Councils meetings from time to time.

After vigorous debate a resolution was passed by the Diocese of California in support of California's present fair housing law. This was part of a six point series of resolutions which were prefaced by a general statement reminding Churchmen that merely eliminating physical segregation does not, of itself, attain God's will for us.

In Alabama a resolution stating that "all our churches should be open to all people for Christian worship" and pledging support for "justice and equal opportunity for all men" was defeated. One was passed calling for continued study of the National Council of Churches.

The Diocese of East Carolina passed a resolution reaffirming the racial stand of the Church and appointed a committee on race relations.

Louisiana heard at its convention that St. Mark's, Shreveport, would refuse to pay any of its quota to the diocese because of the Church's stand on race. The bishop and council refused to reduce its giving to the general budget of the Episcopal Church and voted to take steps to make up the deficit.

The Diocese of Upper South Carolina turned down a resolution which would have specified that no one could be barred because of color from diocesan institutions and which, further, would have denied such institutions financial support. Instead, the convention endorsed comments by the Bishop which called for peaceable solutions to the church's and nation's racial difficulties, arrived at within a framework of law and order.

The Diocese of North Carolina voted that there could be no racial requirements at a new home for the aged. A stronger resolution forbidding racial discrimination in any diocesan institution was replaced by one calling for reports from all to be submitted to next year's convention. All this came in the aftermath of a flurry connected with the fact that separate lists of public accomodations had been sent Negro and white delegates to the convention which met at Chapel Hill. It was an unfortunate incident, authorized by persons who simply hadn't thought of its implications. Local integrationists, both Churchmen and others, were upset and some sought to have the clergy who had reservations at segregated motels cancel them. At least one motel occupied by delegates was picketed by Chapel Hill Churchmen.

APPEAL STILL PENDING

Appeal to the 5th Circuit in the suit of four clergy against Jackson, Miss., police officials is still pending. They were arrested while on the Prayer Pilgrimage and have brought suit to help establish legal precedents against such arrests. The appeal is to be heard shortly.

DIOCESAN PRESS TAKE NOTE

Every two weeks the new publication of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Atlanta is published. Practically each time some stand on race worthy of being picked up by the dailies is included. In the latest issue Georgia congressmen are taken to task for not supporting civil rights.

A PASTORAL RESPONSIBILITY AND UNEQUIVOCAL PROCLAMATION GO TOGETHER ALWAYS

While some persons, having no apparent 'hidden agenda' concerning racial matters, have been critical of the National Council of Churches on other grounds, and there has been some organized opposition accordingly, the primary thrust against the NCC has come from segregationist Churchmen. At times they conceal their real concerns under other coloration, like the Southern politician talks about "states rights". Such opposition had as its headwaters organized opposition in the Church in Charleston, South Carolina, and in Shreveport, La. Resolutions critical of the NCC are still being introduced at Southern diocesan conventions, although the peak of discontent seems to have passed. So extensive did the unrest become that the last General Convention directed the Joint Commission on Ecumenical Relations to make a study of the NCC and report back.

Their report is now completed and, as was expected, is on the whole supportive of the NCC - as it should have been. Leaving all else aside, however, there was cause for concern in one aspect. This is suggested in a portion of a release on their report as follows: "The Joint Commission also suggested that NCC statements "should be so phrased as not to bring into question the Christian commitment of those who do not agree." A UPI account of the report said: "(The report) said the council has exposed itself to valid criticism of its pronouncements on controversial economic, social and political issues, by failing to make clear that "dedicated Christians may be standing on either side of a particular issue."..."

Knowing that the chief root of criticism of the NCC has been resistance to its pronouncements on racial matters, one wonders in reading the Joint Commission's Report if they are saying there is no single teaching or stand for the Church on race. But a look at the list of Commission members assures the reader that these are men who have themselves spoken out for integration. It seems, instead, that they confuse the pastoral responsibility of the Church to patiently work with segregationist Churchmen , acknowledging the Church's own failure in the past to adequately define the Christian position, on the one hand, with some insipid and no-nothing view that would always stop short of unequivocal pronouncement. We need not deny our concern for persons who may be perplexed or angry or hurt when the Church speaks on race, but, indeed, must come down from the pulpit of prophecy and go among them with capacity to accept the sinner, but not the sin. The Commission's Report sounds like it would have the offense of the Gospel accomodated to some least common denominator of what will please the constituency.

If some may be so offended that they will separate themselves from the Body, it should concern us but not dull the Church's proclamation. Those who leave will do so at their initiative and not because self-righteous Churchmen have turned away from personal encounter and loving conversation, if the Church is true to all of its responsibilities. We need not feel, however, that the fact of some leaving can be avoided. It seems inevitable and, tragic though it is, the Church will be stronger in the end, even if smaller in numbers. We are coming into days when some will separate themselves from the Church or, in traditional sectarian process, presume to start their own church. It has already happened. An Episcopal clergyman in North Carolina has delcared his intention of forming a new church. He has been prominently identified as a segregationist for some time. Recently he met with a group of about 40 Episcopal laymen in Nashville, Tenn., who are leaving the Church and have started what they call "All Saints Anglican Church". The root of their concern is race. They want a segregated church. A clergyman in Mobile, Ala., has talked of the possibility of division in the Church over race in such a manner as to assist in calling it forth. Increasingly there is this alternative looming for dissidents. We mustn't let their threats of impending departure temper the Church's message. There are committed Churchmen who persist in believing that segregation is best, but, certainly, it is clear that the Church stands in disagreement with them. - J.B.M.

HELP!

Apologies for any ink spots on parts of this Newsletter. Our mimeo machine (a used-one-when-purchased four years ago) broke down midway through stencil runs. We hope it'll carry on now, but the experience prompts mention of the fact that we certainly could use an offset printing unit for our nearly 5 thousand unit runs of things to the membership. Is there anyone able and interested in contributing the price of such, without subtracting from your regular support? They cost a pretty penny, starting at $1500.00, but would save us a great deal on other printing costs which have to be done commercially.

RIGHTS OR BEER CANS

On the same page in a recent issue of THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION there appeared these two headlines: "Jewish Vets Leader Hails Rights Vote" and "Pastors Ask Beer Facts". The latter had reference to the concern of some Protestant clergy for the number of beer cans processed daily in a local incinerator. The contrast in what these headlines bespeak recalls Harry Golden's comment several years ago on the churches and race in the South. He thought he might form a 'Jewish Society for the Preservation of Christian Ethics'.

"ON THE BATTLE LINES"

This is the title of a new book being published by Morehouse-Barlow in March. Edited by the Rev. Malcolm Boyd, it contains chapters by 27 Episcopal clergy on a range of subjects having to do with the Gospel and the World. It is coincidental that 19 of the contributors are members of the Episcopal Society and some of the non-members have taken part in Society meetings or actions.

"NEGRO NEUTRALITY"

The editorial on page 10 reprinted from THE CHERAW (S. C.) CHRONICLE, a plucky little newspaper in a deep-South state, noted for its relative liberalism, has something to say to Episcopalians. Negro Churchmen too often have overly protected their niche in a quasi-integrated Church by not confronting the Church creatively in the same way that Negro Americans are acting to lead the entire nation to a more perfect freedom. In the South the Negro clergy often have been used for window dressing to hide the flaws in the interior. Obviously there are many exceptions where clergy and laity have not hesitated to inform the Church of the unfinished business in the Household, but there has been too much "Negro Neutrality" in the Episcopal Church. J.B.M.

MORE ON ADDRESS LISTS AND THE TIMIDITY OF EPISCOPAL OFFICIALDOM

Our readers will recall that last fall the Episcopal Church's National Council decided that address labels on all Episcopal clergy could not be furnished to the Society (at our expense and as Seabury Press had done repeatedly in the past) because, in part, the mailing they were intended for was to have contained an interpretative piece on the Lovett School situation. More recently we asked the Church Pension Fund if they would provide us with labels at our expense. They replied that it was against their policy to provide such a service. It would be easier to accept another turn-down if we hadn't concurrently received information that the Church Pension Fund only a few weeks beforehand had provided the clergy addresses to another group in the Church for a special mailing. - J. MEMORIAL AND TRIBUTE GIFTS ACCEPTED

The Society's Board of Directors has formally approved a Tribute or Memorial Plan for gifts to ESCRU which has been functioning all along as members have sent contributions in memory of someone who has died or as a tribute to someone living. Appropriate acknowledgement is sent both to the donor as well as to the one being honored in case of a tribute gift or those specified for memorial gifts.

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR ARRESTED IN ATLANTA

The Rev. John B. Morris was arrested at the Heart of Atlanta Motel in Atlanta on January 11th, along with staff persons and officers of a number of organizations including SCLC, NAACP and SNCC. They were denied service and arrested for being an integrated group. Trials are in process. The Motel's owner has said he would never integrate. He lives across the street from the Lovett School & has a child there.

WANTED! One Associate Director & Everyone's Full Support! One of the most important decisions made by the Board in February was the determination that ESCRU must do more to keep abreast of the growing ferment at the local level where chapters continue to form. Established chapters must be more adequately served by the national office & the Society must become better prepared to respond to emerging concern where chapters probably will be formed. An "Associate Director" must be secured as quickly as possible. He would have a primary responsibility for assisting local chapters. It will mean a significantly expanded budget, when we have just begun to meet the previous demand in this post-foundation phase, but we must meet this need about which we have done little or nothing heretofore. There is a growing readiness for effective local work by ESCRU members in places previously dormant. Respecting the integrity and initiative of local commitment, and with no agenda to standardize the work of chapters or organize them where the time is not ripe, there is, nevertheless, much that the national organization should be doing in a consultative fashion to help. To make this possible everyone must help to the extent of his ability. We recognize that some members already give sacrificially and cannot increase their annual contribution. It is hoped that others will consider the need carefully when they receive their annual renewal notice. Directors will be asked by the Treasurer, Malcolm Peabody, Jr., to make a special effort at securing new and substantial gifts from Churchmen and others in a position to give liberally. In the long run, however, our records indicate that it is the aggregation of gifts from the grass roots which tally up to permit ESCRU to do its work. Now we must build on this still more.

The Associate Director may be either a layman or a clergyman. He should be someone rooted and grounded in the Christian Faith and presently active in the Episcopal Church at parochial and other levels. Because we've been around long enough now to be heard of by like-minded persons in the Church, he should presently be an active member of ESCRU. Involvement in one of the Society's chapters would certainly be an asset, and almost a requirement if there's a chapter where he now lives. Someone elsewhere may make up for this in other talents or experience. Naturally, he would have a long-standing concern for civil rights in general but, more particularly, a special concern for the Church's role and for what goes on in the Church itself vis-a-vis cultural and racial unity. He must be a good listener, adept in group process and mindful of others. He must not loath organizational work and detail, writing letters, outlining possible program and action procedures, keeping records on 101 unexciting aspects of chapter activity so that it's useful, preparing Newsletter inserts on what all of the groups are doing, encouraging those that aren't doing, etc., etc. He must be prepared to speak to groups on short notice. And, finally, he must be prepared to do a lot of traveling in between all the other duties and even possibly helping in other departments of the Society's work!

If you're interested, write the Executive Director. A committee of Board members will receive all applications and make a final decision, following preliminary interviews or correspondence. We're looking forward to the addition to the staff and fellowship in Atlanta of both Fr. Stines (see front page story) and the as-yet-to-be-selected Associate Director.

SHOULDN'T IT BE IN THE BUDGET TOO?

Of course we should all support the Presiding Bishop's special appeal mentioned on page one, but is the Church paying adequate attention to the urgency of the need in terms of budgetary plans? I wonder how we compare with other churches in terms of allocations for official work in the racial crisis. Certainly a comparison of funds made available to the CSR department with figures for other work is sad commentary on what we think is important at this time in history. - J.B.M.

Survey of Church's Institutions

In early March we will release a report on admissions policies at Church Camps & Conferences in the South. The survey of Church Schools never got off the ground in its previously conceived plan, but, by Board action, will be launched hopefully this spring. Chapters and key members in every diocese will be asked to research policies and practices at all Church and Church-related institutions in their area and report to the national office. We want a report ready for General Convention.

ON FINANCES

The Audit. Main, Lafrentz & Co. has made its annual check of the Society's finances and finds everything in order. Copies of their "Report on Examination" have been provided the Society's President and Treasurer and will be sent on request to any Director or Chapter Chairman requesting it.

Summary Data On 1963. According to the Auditor's report for last year Assets and Liabilities balanced each other at $36,616.19. The approved budget for 1963 was $38,742.00. We actually spent $33,930.20 from the general ESCRU account. (None of the figures here are inclusive of the Prayer Pilgrimage Appeal Fund's expenditures, nor does the new budget include the Southern Field Service. While all accounts are checked by the auditor, the others are separate funds for special purposes and neither add to nor subtract from the Society's budget.) In 1963 ESCRU received $32,033. in dues and general contributions. Also, the final part of the foundation's grant was drawn upon.

The Budget for 1964. The Board has approved a general budget for ESCRU for the current year of $53,266.00. $28,976.00 of this is for personnel and includes the Associate Director and ½ of an additional secretary (Southern Field Service will pay the other one-half!) for the portion of the year they would be employed. $24,290.00 of this general budget is for everything else including office rent, telephone, printing, Board meetings, travel for the professional staff, etc., etc. (We'll send a detailed budget on request and may do so anyway later!)

Estimated Income for 1964. On the basis of established trends we hope to receive $15,000.00 this year from new and renewal dues. If everyone continues to give as they have been, and a number increase their giving, we hope for $29,000.00 in additional contributions over and above dues. (Each year we add a few much needed large donors without whom we couldn't survive: Three give about $1,000. a year. Several give $500., and a number give $50. to $200. or so. They are essential, but, as the records here will show, the sum of the many small gifts is equally as important.) Then we expect about $700. from literature sales, etc. This leaves the "Board of Director's Special Appeal" of $8,566.00 (which must be new funds from new sources) to tally up to the budget figure of $53,266.00. Whew! Hold your breath and pray that we'll make it!

Parish and Organizational Contributions. Included in the income figures above for 1963 is $1,800.00 given by one parish, representing a portion of their income from a parish bazaar, and $1,300.00 made up of contributions from 40 other parishes and church organizations. This is a critical area of support to be developed further. We hope that each parish which put ESCRU in their budget last year will do so again, and that others will do the same. A pledge card for this purpose is enclosed. It will assist us in planning if parishes and organizations intending to include us in their giving will advise us by way of this card. Clergy, please ask your Vestry to remember us in this way as a corporate sign of concern and support. Lay folks - go to your Rector and vestrymen with this concern. And, if you want to have a bazaar for the sake of ESCRU, we think it's great!

OTHER ENCLOSURES

A reprint of a sermon by ESCRU Board member Kilmer Myers is enclosed. The occasion for its delivery was the Consecration of ESCRU Board member Paul Moore, Jr., as Suffragan Bishop of Washington. A tape recording of the sermon may be ordered from the ESCRU office for $2.50. Also enclosed is a new listing & order form on all materials available from the Society

"THE PENITENTIAL SHARE"

The Society's Board has approved the recommendation of the 3rd Annual Meeting that ESCRU look into ways of raising funds for the National Church to compensate for any specific amounts which may withdrawn by dioceses because of the Church's stand on race. A parish in Iowa has already determined to give more to the Church's program for this purpose.

WORN OUT WHITE LIBERALS! That's Wyatt Walker's name for them. Someone else has entitled the malaise "The Retreat of the White Liberal." By any name it's a part of the post-Birmingham picture. We're not necessarily talking about veterans of the battle lines who are just plain tuckered out. They've a right to be. It's been a long ten years! Such veterans of the Southern scene actually persist in their militancy more effectively than some new militants in the North, I believe, although there is a Southern variety which partakes just a bit of the old paternalism. These draw back now some as realization dawns that the initiative isn't altogether in their hands. The movement will go on anyway. Also, as the era of housing integration looms down South and other last-stage issues, there is some increased reticence. The saddest of the Northern beat liberals are those who imagined until recently that it was all down South, but most of them retired two years ago. Others confessed with their minds that the North had a problem, but never felt demonstrations and the like would leave their Southern setting. Also, some Northern whites in retreat have ducked out because they expected perfection in the 'movement', not realizing that it, too, could err. All in all, it's been a year of confrontation for many and there's no reason to believe that the summer ahead will present any easier choices. Christian militants had best gird themselves with a steadfastness that comes from Christ and accept the route before them which has low places and pitfalls, and some mud pockets too, as well as the high plateaus that come from taking action and become involved.

DE FACTO SEGREGATION & THE BOYCOTT. Some readers will say that the writer is as worn out as the rest of them after reading this. It may only be a limitation of understanding occasioned by the fact that school boycotts haven't come South yet. At any rate, I say it as I see it from where I stand, and it's only my opinion: I'm uneasy about the boycott approach and dubious of it's repetitious use. At the same time, I could very well decide if asked that full support should be given such protest in a specific instance. This is where our necessary involvement in muddy waters comes in. This is no quarrel with the fact that insidious de facto segregation in schools must be taken to task: by redistricting, by reasonable busing, and by other creative means of promoting interchange. As to the means of protest, however, what of picketing, mass marches, etc., which could be joined by parents and pupils alike? I have no problem with the involvement of the kids as such, for sometimes, as in Birmingham, it is better for the oppressed to act. Where one is under the heel it is not a corruption of innocence for the child to join the parent on the march. He matures too. The ingredients of a boycott of school, however, seem different, unless, perhaps, there is a careful plan for Freedom Schools as in Boston where the first boycott was so sensitively led by ESCRU Director Fr. James Breeden. My admiration for him, as well as for others who are altogether for it, causes these views to be held in open-ended fashion. We'll welcome other expressions and might give equal-time to the best in a subsequent Newsletter. In the meantime, any other novices at school boycotts might like to see John Lassoe's Memo on the New York situation which we'll supply on request. It defines terms and the context and lets you make up your mind.

TOO FUZZY TO BE WORN OUT! The Living Church expressed sympathy on February 16th for Christians, presumably in certain Southern communities, who "...are embarrassed ... by well-meaning meddlers who come into their communities as reformers sent straight from heaven." They said further: "We hope there can be a moratorium on all such meddling. Christians from outside a community have no right to ignore those Christians inside...." We hope this isn't indicative of what the editorial policy of the other-wise competent Living Church will be under its new management. We've seldom seen anything so fuzzy, straight from the worst of the Southern moderate's viewpoint. We would oppose self-righteousness too and trust visiting clergy in Southern communities do not ignore the resident clergy, respecting the integrity of their witness and hoping for the same. The especially disturbing thing about the editorial comment is that it ignores the fact that a goodly number of Christians welcome the visitors with open and grateful arms. We're talking about the Negro Christians in Hattiesburg at the moment, which the Living Church would do well to get to know. - J.B.M.

To all key ESCRU personnel and intergroup friends:

Enclosed are: 1) the ESCRU statement released October 3, 1965 following the crucifixion of justice in Hayneville, Alabama 2) a list of suggestions made by one of our prominent members, Charles Morgan, Jr., outlining meaningful ways to help resurrect the cause of freedom and justice for which Jon Daniels paid with his life.

Other resources providing needed background material and possible avenues of approach are: a.) Billingsley V. Clayton, Case No. 22,304, pending in the U.S. Ct. of Apps. for the 5th Circuit to be argued en banc Dec. 16th & 17th, 1965: b.) "Jim Crow Justice" - a series of articles reprinted from the Los Angeles Times; c.) Haywood Burns: "The Rule of Law in the South" Commentary, Vol. 40, No. 3, September, 1965; d.) Justice, U.S. Civil Rights Comm. Rep, 1961.

Appropriately, the Gospel for Trinity XVI (the Sunday following the "trial") is Luke 7:11ff. Had the "beloved physician" been writing in 1965, he might well have penned:

"And it came to pass ...that the followers of Christ went into a city called Keene; and many other civil rights workers went with them, and much people. Now when they came near to the gate of the city, behold, there was a dead man carried out, the only son of his mother, and she was a widow: and much people of the city was with her, and said unto her, Weep not. And they came and saw the bier...and they said, We cannot resurrect his body, but by out lives we can give new life to the cause of freedom and justice for which he died. Through their labors, true justice was born in the land juries were selected fairly and protection began for those who worked to implement the Constitution and the nation's laws. And this achievement they delivered to his mother and to all the mothers of the land... and they glorified God, saying...that truly God hath visited His people."

As servants of the Body of Christ, we are called "manfully to fight under His banner" against the powers and principalities of "sin, the world, and the devil." As Episcopalians, we have been reminded by our Presiding Bishop that the cause for which Jon Daniels was martyred..."is a cause dear to everyone who breathes the air of free men. Because of this, free men must never permit the devastating verdict of the Hayneville twelve to be the final word of justice in Alabama or anywhere else." As friends and members of ESCRU, we pray that you will join with us in utilizing these suggested approaches to securing justice in our land - the memorial we owe to Jon and the twenty-five other victims of the present system of injustice.

Yours in the bonds,

Kim Dreisbach

STATEMENT ON THE MISCARRIAGE OF JUSTICE

"How," asks the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity, "can religious leaders continue to exhort their people to end demonstrations in the streets and enter the courts of law when the courthouse strikes fear in the hearts of those whose rights it is designed to protect?"

ESCRU emphatically rejects the assumption attributed to Attorney General Nicolas D. Katzenbach that the perverted justice enacted in Hayneville, Alabama "is the price you have to pay for the jury system." It is "too high a price to pay" when it leaves unpunished the murders of 26 civil rights workers who have died since 1961; it is "too high a price to pay" for the atmosphere which it helps to establish -- a climate which gives a license to prospective slayers and scant protection to those in danger of being slain.

Even more fundamental, "it is too high a price" for the shoddy merchandise which is the present system for the selection of jurors. Maybe we should say "systems," for Burke Marshall (former Assistant Attorney General) called attention this June to a 1961 survey by the Justice Department which showed that 92 federal districts had "92 different systems of selecting juries."

Justice was crucifeid in Hayneville this week, but we continue to pray for its resurrection. By utilizing the tools already available to it, the Justice Department can effect the needed remedies to eliminate the present exclusion of Negroes from jury service. "We could have done more with the law" said Burke Marshall. "We might well have been requested by the administration to initiate a drive on jury exclusion, except we had a limited number of lawyers and tney were on school desegregation and voting discrimination cases."

Regretfully, it took a Birmingham with its bombs, fire hoses and fangs of police dogs to arouse the nation to pass a civil rights bill. After the tear gas and voting rights bill. We will continue to pray and devote our efforts to the end that the shot-riddled body of Jonathan Daniels will give birth to a new focus for the Justice Department. If it fails to note the urgency of this needed reform, it should cease to rage at the ungodly explosions which will erupt as a direct result of its glaring sin of omission.

Statement

The Rev. John B. Morris
Executive Director, ESCRU

Hayneville, Alabama
September 30, 1965

We have watched an almost-total conspiracy of the civil and religious leadership of Lowndes County to exonerate one of their own. As the Attorney General of Alabama has eloquently indicated, the entire proceedings here constitute a miscarriage of justice, irrespective of the nature of the verdict. Through its failure to call certain witnesses, and then in its failure to adequately interrogate those that did appear, the prosecution played its role in the conspiracy successfully. That the trial proceeded at all without Fr. Richard Morrisroe, both a victim and a key witness, is manifest proof of the shabby regard for due process and just procedures we have seen here. Serious charges were levelled against Fr. Morrisroe who is still living, by the grace of God, and who could have defended himself at a later time. Jonathan Daniels, who represented us in the Selma area, could not defend himself against the charges that he carried a weapon. The state made no effort to establish the fine character of this dedicated servant of Christ. Mr. Gamble was supplied a message of high tribute and praise for Jon Daniels, issued by the Dean and Faculty of Jon's seminary, but he saw fit not to introduce it in the face of this conspiracy to defame. Much talk was heard about visitors to the jail possibly smuggling weapons in, but no effort was made to secure testimony from any of these visitors - one, at least, being a priest of the Episcopal Church who was present for the trial.

That no Justice Department officials were on hand to observe the proceedings sorely taxes one's confidence in this agency's interest or ability to serve the cause of justice anywhere. While justice is winked at once more in Alabama, President Johnson announces plans for a Federally sponsored opera company. Such cultural advantages will have little future in a country where the law of the jungle appears increasingly to provide the only alternative for persons unable to expect justice from the courts. The White House must recognize that the mood of many people, generally patient and disposed to wait upon the gradual forces of change, cannot long endure the cumulative effect of a steady series of judicial miscarriages. We must have Federal initiative and involvement in the investigation and prosecution of murders connected with efforts to support and implement Federal laws in voting and other aspects of civil rights activity. That such Federal initiative is undertaken in pursuit of the illicit whiskey industry, but not for citizens seeking to obtain a more just and democratic society, is an irony of tremendous proportions.

Above all else, the most depressing part of this charade was the manner by which the Church was trotted out in the person of local clergy, both on the stand and in the audience, to bless and pronounce absolution over the whole ritual of exoneration. By implication these deputies of Christ cast stones at a true disciple whose whole reason for being in the Selma area was one of Christian commitment and motivation. That Jonathan Daniels should be so mocked by other Christians would have been no surprise to him, for he suffered much abuse at the hands of fellow Episcopalians during the time he was in Alabama; never once, though, becoming embittered or unforgiving because of it. The Episcopal Bishop of Alabama had met and talked with Jon, but not once has there been any public expression of regret over his death from top Church sources. St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Selma endured his presence, at times either excluding him when in the company of Negro friends, or causing them to sit in the rear. The parade of preachers at the Hayneville Courthouse was a consistent portrayal of the role official Church spokesmen played in relationship to this now-deceased follower of Christ.

Jonathan Daniels was in Selma primarily to work for reconciliation and communication between the terribly divided communities called White and Black. This commitment rightly took him at times into a full identification with the Civil Rights Movement. At other times he withdrew from this level of ministry and sought to help bridge the awful gulf that tears at Selma and the nation. His disposition was gentle and loving above all else. He could not have carried a knife anymore than Fr. Morrisroe could have brandished a gun. Deep in the hearts of the townfolk of Hayneville this truth will restlessly remain to further remind them of a forsaken integrity.

Jonathan Daniels has not died in vain. Tomorrow there will be a service across from the White House at St. John's Church, Lafayette Square, or in the park itself, after which a delegation of Episcopalians will hope to see President Johnson to plead for Federal intervention to halt this escalating carnage. Tomorrow, also, will mark the inauguration of the as-yet unannounced Selma Interreligious Project, joined in by Catholic, Protestant and Jewish groups who feel that the work Jonathan Daniels began should be continued. It will be staffed by the Rev. Francis Walter, an Episcopal priest who is native to Alabama. The religious folk of America who came to Selma in such impressive strength in the spring, and who remained through faithful servants such as Jonathan Daniels, will not leave this area until justice and love are more regarded and some sanity is restored to a sick and divided people.

Hayneville Verdict Reinforces Demands To Change Jurisdiction in Such Cases

All across the land have come reverberations of shock, even horror, over the outcome of the trial last week in Hayneville, Ala., which grew out of the killing of the Rev. Jonathan Daniels. As shown on this page today, cartoonists, editorial writers and columnists almost as one have registered indignation, disappointment and shame based on the known facts of the case and the trial.

Columnist Max Freedman today concludes his article on a note which can be described as the consensus of most comments.

"Jonathan Daniels will not be forgotten," Freedman writes. "The memory of his death, and of this contemptible trial, will stir and stimulate many people in all parts of the country to see to it that equal justice shall never again be so easily mocked and its principles outraged by courtrooms that have degraded themselves deliberately into temples of injustice."

These words are echoed in an editorial in the Birmingham News which declared in part:

"It would be foolish not to recognize that with other cases in this and other Southern states a pattern has emerged which is certain to stimulate new demand for federal power of trial in deaths of civil rights workers . . ."

It is not necessary to define the pattern since everyone knows it. A double standard of justice is not new to the Southern scene but recent evidences of it, never more dramatically demonstrated than in the Hayneville episode, have indeed brought on growing clamor for federal courts to take civil rights criminal cases out of state courts. As with the Civil Rights Act and other federal legislation disliked by the South, our own failures to exercise responsibility make such measures inevitable. The nation cannot survive unless standards of justice apply equally to all.

Already a strong move is under way for passage of such legislation by Congress in 1966. The National Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, an organization representing more than 100 church, union and civil rights groups, is pushing for a "Personal Security Act" in 1966. Following a meeting shortly after the Hayneville verdict, its counsel, Joseph L. Rauh, declared that passage of such an act "should be the major legislative goal of the leadership drive in 1966." He added that the legislation would, in effect, take civil-rights-connected cases out of the states' hands and into federal courtroom.

"If we cannot assume that the police and courts are going to look out for us," another spokesman is quoted, "you and I are going to go around with guns . . . It isn't a question any more of a person getting a vote, it's a question of whether he lives or not."

There will be outraged cries against more "federal encroachment," but the weight of evidence is on the side of those demanding such legislation.

Justice in Hayneville

Down in Hayneville, Alabama, an all-white jury has acquitted Thomas Coleman of the shotgun slaying of Jonathan Daniels, civil rights worker, because the victim, a white seminarian from New Hampshire, had kissed a Negro girl, wore maroon underpants and encouraged Negroes to register and vote. In the minds of the jurors and the local community, it seems, the sins of the slain man outweighed the offense of the slayer. So the highway engineer who took the enforcement of local mores into his own hands is free and "happy," and civil rights workers in Hayneville are on notice that they can be shot down with impunity whenever a citizen of "good reputation" becomes sufficiently annoyed by their conduct.

There was, to be sure, some evidence of self-defense in the trial. Defense witnesses talked vaguely about "an open pocket knife" in Mr. Daniels's hand when his right to enter a store was challenged by engineer Coleman. Similarly, the Rev. Richard Morrisroe was said to have had "a shiny object that looked like a pistol" when he was gunned down and gravely wounded in the same fracas. But Father Morrisroe said in a statement from his hospital bed that the two victims were unarmed, and witnesses at the trial corroborated that assertion. Neither of the mysterious "weapons" was found. Apparently the claim of "self-defense" was little more than a ceremonial invocation of a formula which is supposed to justify the killing of civil rights workers who cannot be intimidated.

More farcical than the trial in some respects were the events which preceded it. Attorney General Richard Flowers had taken the prosecution out of the hands of the local authorities in order to avoid a "travesty of justice." His contention was that Coleman should be tried for murder rather than manslaughter, that the trial should be postponed until Father Morrisroe could testify, and that the atmosphere in Lowndes County was not conducive to a fair trial from the viewpoint of the prosecution. But the Attorney General was booted out of the trial by Judge T. Werth Thagard for not playing the game according to the accepted formula.

It is all very well to say that Hayneville has made a spectacle of itself before the civilized world. The tragedy of the situation is that Hayneville doesn't care. Its sense of justice simply does not extend to civil rights workers and Negroes. And since this attitude is common to many other communities it leaves the country with a grave question of whether equal justice can be imposed from without. We do not know the answer. But it should be obvious to everyone that unless some means can be found of bringing these benighted communities into the twentieth century troublesome times lie ahead.

The Case of the Armed Seminarian

The press reports say a trial was held this week in Hayneville, Ala., but this was in error. No trial was held there within the accepted meaning of the word.

The Rev. John B. Morris, executive director of the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity, described it as an "almost total" community conspiracy "to exonerate one of their own."

The outcome of the "trial" was never in doubt, inside or outside Hayneville.

Richmond Flowers, Alabama's courageous attorney general, tried to delay the inevitable. He contended that 52-year-old Tom Coleman, prominent Hayneville citizen, should have been tried for murder instead of manslaughter.

But Flowers was unsuccessful. In a courtroom whose officials and jury were all white, and where the behavior of any Negroes had to be several notches above impeccable, the wheels of South Alabama justice turned inexorably and cranked out their verdict: Coleman was not guilty, even of manslaughter.

There was, of course, testimony—at first halting and hesitant, but later certain—that Jonahan M. Daniels, 27-year-old seminarian, who was killed, and Father Richard Morrisroe, 26-year-old priest, who was seriously wounded, were carrying weapons when they were gunned down.

But Jon Daniels, said the Rev. Mr. Morris, "could not have carried a knife any more than Father Morrisroe could have brandished a gun. Deep in the hearts of the townsfolk of Hayneville this truth will restlessly remain to further remind them of a forsaken integrity."

It is not likely that the nation will allow the sort of thing that took place in Hayneville to go indefinitely. Indeed, it is probable that this very case will produce demands in Congress for additional federal intervention in such matters. Alabama will, of course, complain about the federal giant being created, but Alabama goes on proving that the giant is needed, and that the giant can be neither slumbering nor slothful.

"Jonathan Daniels," says the Rev. Mr. Morris in words that are all too familiar, "has not died in vain."

But unless this case arouses people in both Alabama and the nation—and it clearly should—he has.—MARVIN WALL.

Verdict in Hayneville Outrages Jonathan Daniels' Home Town

KEENE, N.H.—This New England city is the home town of Jonathan M. Daniels, the 26-year-old student at the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge who was shot and killed last summer while working in Alabama for the Episcopal Society for Culture and Racial Unity. One has to be in this city and in New England to understand the incredible sense of outrage that has run like a flame through these communities at the recent news from the courtroom in Hayneville, Ala.

After his murder — there is no other word for it, no matter what was done by one judge and jury in Alabama — some of the letters of Jonathan Daniels were widely published here. They revealed a religious spirit of sensitive idealism, eager to hurt no one, but resolute in its faith that organized racial injustice was a shame and a curse that had to be ended.

Some people in Alabama evidently looked upon him as a meddlesome intruder. They never understood that he was sent into Alabama on an errand of duty by his conscience.

South, then we really are in serious trouble.

Prophesy Fulfilled

The first sense of angry revulsion and bewildered outrage came when Thomas M. Coleman, the deputy sheriff, was accused of manslaughter instead of murder in the death of Mr. Daniels. The foul scent of tainted justice fell across New England at the news. Suspicions hardened when reports from Alabama predicted that Coleman, whose family has deep roots in Hayneville, would never be found guilty.

was offered in court as solemn evidence while denying the prosecution its full and unrestricted opportunity to expose its falseness.

The court would not accept any delay that would permit Father Richard Morrisroe of Chicago, also wounded by Coleman and still in the hospital, to give his testimony of what had happened. Circuit Judge T. Werth Thagard, whose conduct of this case was a contemptible violation of the impartial standards of American justice, seemed to be in a quite inexcusable hurry to end the trial and get Coleman out of his courtroom.

Hayneville Verdict Reinforces Demands To Change Jurisdiction in Such Cases

All across the land have come reverberations of shock, even horror, over the outcome of the trial last week in Hayneville, Ala., which grew out of the killing of the Rev. Jonathan Daniels. As shown on this page today, cartoonists, editorial writers and columnists almost as one have registered indignation, disappointment and shame based on the known facts of the case and the trial.

Columnist Max Freedman today concludes his article on a note which can be described as the consensus of most comments.

"Jonathan Daniels will not be forgotten," Freedman writes. "The memory of his death, and of this contemptible trial, will stir and stimulate many people in all parts of the country to see to it that equal justice shall never again be so easily mocked and its principles outraged by courtrooms that have degraded themselves deliberately into temples of injustice."

These words are echoed in an editorial in the Birmingham News which declared in part:

"It would be foolish not to recognize that with other cases in this and other Southern states a pattern has emerged which is certain to stimulate new demand for federal power of trial in deaths of civil rights workers . . ."

It is not necessary to define the pattern since everyone knows it. Verdict in Hayneville Outrages Jonathan Daniels' Home Town

KEENE, N.H.—This New England city is the home town of Jonathan M. Daniels, the 26-year-old student at the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge who was shot and killed last summer while working in Alabama for the Episcopal Society for Culture and Racial Unity. One has to be in this city and in New England to understand the incredible sense of outrage that has run like a flame through these communities at the recent news from the courtroom in Hayneville, Ala.

They revealed a religious spirit of sensitive idealism, eager to hurt no one, but resolute in its faith that organized racial injustice was a shame and a curse that had to be ended.

Some people in Alabama evidently looked upon him as a meddlesome intruder. They never understood that he was sent into Alabama on an errand of duty by his conscience.

Duty to Conscience

"It is one thing," said Mr. Justice Holmes, "to utter a happy phrase from a protected cloister; another to think under fire — to think for action upon which great interests depend."

Jonathan Daniels, like so many others, recognized the risks but gladly went to Alabama in obedience to the compulsions of his religious faith and the dictates of his conscience. If that is not understood in Alabama and throughout the South, then we really are in serious trouble.

Prophesy Fulfilled

The first sense of angry revulsion and bewildered outrage came when Thomas M. Coleman, the deputy sheriff, was accused of manslaughter instead of murder in the death of Mr. Daniels. The foul scent of tainted justice fell across New England at the news. Suspicions hardened when reports from Alabama predicted that Coleman, whose family has deep roots in Hayneville, would never be found guilty.

These prophetic fears that justice would be mocked and outraged in that tiny courtroom, too small for the American dream but large enough for the nightmare of racial injustice, have now been tragically and savagely fulfilled. An all-white jury has found Coleman innocent.

Then there was a feeling of hurt anger at the charge that Mr. Daniels was armed with deadly weapons and Coleman was acting in self-defense. This charge, which maligned the dead was offered in court as solemn evidence while denying the prosecution its full and unrestricted opportunity to expose its falseness.

The court would not accept any delay that would permit Father Richard Morrisroe of Chicago, also wounded by Coleman and still in the hospital, to give his testimony of what had happened. Circuit Judge T. Werth Thagard, whose conduct of this case was a contemptible violation of the impartial standards of American justice, seemed to be in a quite inexcusable hurry to end the trial and get Coleman out of his courtroom.

Flowers Admired

The resentment has been still further deepened by the rough treatment suffered by Richmond Flowers, attorney general of Alabama, who was blocked and frustrated in his efforts to hold the scales of justice even so that everyone would know a fair trial was in progress. The Boston Globe, the leading paper in New England, has fully reported his honorable and heroic role in this sordid and squalid tragedy. He is something of a hero in these parts; he certainly is widely respected.

Moreover, there is a deep and fervent hope that Flowers is right when he says that most people in Alabama share his outrage at the nature of the trial and the shameful verdict. For there is no sign of any vindictive temper in New England that would hold all the people of Alabama responsible for the mockery of justice in one courtroom.

Finally, there is a sad but strong feeling here Atty. Gen. Katzenbach in Washington has grievously fallen below the duties of his office. He sent no observer from the Department of Justice to watch the trial. With a tragic and callous misconception of what was at stake, he spoke of the verdict as the price that sometimes has to be paid for the jury system.

Katzenbach Weak

It is always a serious matter for an attorney general to criticize and condemn a judge and jury acting within state law. Bût he is also the spokesman for a department pledged to equal and impartial justice for all our citizens. This trial has raised the ugly doubt that Negroes or the white friends of Negroes can receive this kind of justice in communities drenched with racial prejudice.

That was the issue; Katzenbach failed to understand it; his mumbled and cautious comment is a parody of the noble indignation that should have flamed in him. He emerges with far less honor than does Flowers who behaved with more courage in difficult and dangerous circumstances.

Jonathan Daniels will not be forgotten. The memory of his death, and of this contemptible trial, will stir and stimulate many people in all parts of the country to see to it that equal justice shall never again be so easily mocked and its principles outraged by courtrooms that have degraded themselves deliberately into temples of injustice.

Press and Bar At Hayneville

ATLANTA CONSTITUTION October 2, 1965

As U.S. Attorney General Katzenbach said he expected, a jury in Hayneville, Ala., has now acquitted a local white man of guilt in the death of a young minister he put to death publicly, in the street, with a shotgun.

Whether this acquittal represented the "democratic process going down the drain of irrationality, bigotry and improper enforcement of the law," as Alabama Attorney General Flowers declared, is a matter that addresses itself to the bar.

The law is the profession of the bar.

Yet on the day of the Hayneville acquittal, Thomas F. Lambert Jr. of the American Trial Lawyers' Assn. was not examining his profession.

In a speech to a meeting of editors at Buffalo, he was examining theirs.

The chief law enforcement officers of the nation and the state of Alabama were openly suggesting that the law had been dishonered at Hayneville, where the press had discharged its own duty to inform the public about the killing.

Yet the spokesman for the bar at Buffalo did not speak of concern by his profession over its own performance. On the contrary, he announced bar associations are moving "in the direction of an absolute prohibition on pre-trial publicity" by the press.

It is to be hoped that the public will get the irony of that. No brave surge is evident in the Southern bar to examine what Attorney General Flowers called improper enforcement of the law. Rather, we infer, the bar associations are simply moving to keep so much publicity about it from getting to the public. Until the bar bestirs itself about its Haynevilles, its stirring against the press sits poorly.

It truly is "nonsense," as Vermont Royster of the Wall Street Journal says, to feel "the form of the empty-minded jury must be preserved at all costs. To say that because you have prior knowledge of the facts you cannot be fair is something apart from reality . . . an insult to the integrity of the American people."

More meaningfully, in the light of Flowers' and Katzenbach's comments about the Hayneville verdict, Royster added:

"Deny the right to public scrutiny and, in the whole world, there is no other instrument by which justice can be measured."

The public can make its own judgment as to which served justice better at Hayneville and the long line of cases similar to it—unobstructed public scrutiny or blindered courtroom form.

The press, at least, will more kindly receive the bar's policing of its practices when the bar shows a braver first concern over its own.

Coleman Jury Decision Shocking, Says Churchman

KEENE, N.H. (UPI) — Jonathan Daniels' hometown was dismayed Thursday when an Alabama jury acquitted his alleged slayer. A prominent clergyman called on President Johnson to take steps to prevent another "travesty of American justice."

The verdict exonerating Thomas Coleman was returned while Daniels' mother, a teacher, was instructing a class at Bellows Falls, Vt., high school.

She could not be reached for comment but others who knew the 26-year-old white civil rights worker, an Episcopal seminarian, were critical of the verdict.

The Rev. John B. Coburn, dean of the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass., which Daniels attended, said he hoped Daniels' death "may not have been in vain."

Dean Coburn said the decision was an "utterly shocking travesty of American justice... brought to pass apparently by a local system of trial which makes it impossible for the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth to be expressed."

Dean Coburn asked:

"Why...were there only Negro eyewitness reports admitted to evidence?

"Why were not the young people who were released from prison with Jonathan and either in the group or near him when he was killed, permitted to testify?"

Dean Coburn expressed disbelief at prosecution testimony that Daniels carried a knife. "...for him to have done so would have been completely contrary to his character. He was a man of peace, not hate."

"Any judicial system which not only permits but apparently encourages such a flagrant denial of justice must be condemned by the citizens of a country where equality before the law and due process of law are essential foundation stones," Dean Coburn said

He added:

"In my judgment this calls for a prompt and effective reply from the forces in our country which have the widest responsibility to assure justice for all—the President and executive arm of the government together with the elected representatives of all the people."

Mrs. Kathleen Taylor, a lifelong neighbor of the Daniels, said the verdict was "a terrible thing.

"I loved that boy. I knew him since he was a baby. He was the gentlest, sweetest boy you ever saw," Mrs. Taylor said.

New Hampshire Gov. John W. King said he looked on the verdict "as a travesty of justice."

Close-Up

The Jury System Itself Is on Trial

One of the first trials I covered as a beginning reporter involved a county official charged with falsifying records in such a manner that he and a cohort collected all of the bond money posted in traffic cases, rather than the quarter they were entitled to.

The prosecution's case, I thought, was air-tight. There were state patrolmen, testifying that speeding was the only charge they had lodged against certain individuals. And there were county records showing the same individuals each charged with four different offenses (one of the four not even a crime under Georgia law). Since the local fee-system officials could keep $25 per case in bond money, the invented charges allowed them to keep all of a $100 speeding bond.

The defense attorney had little to say about the prima facie evidence of the record books. Instead, he plucked sentimental tunes on the jurors' heartstrings. He wept. He begged them not to place a black mark on the record of that fine old gentleman, the defendant, as he entered the twilight of life. (The acts of falsification apparently were not black marks; only a conviction would be.)

Well, the jury turned the defendant loose. I expressed shock to the prosecutor. He warmly pleaded for me to retain my faith in the jury system.

I have tried to, but that faith is continually being shaken by acts of juries. The Hayneville, Ala., trial of the man who gunned down an Episcopal seminarian is enough to make anyone re-examine the system. The charge of manslaughter in a case of murder, the conduct of the trial, the verdict—they were all a mockery, an obscenity shouted into the face of justice.

A jury of peers is supposed to provide safeguards against the oppressive power of kings and states. But if juries by whim and prejudice may exonerate the guilty of the most heinous crimes, who is to protect the peace, lawfulness and good order of the community?

Even as an isolated incident, the Hayneville case would cause revulsion. But it is not isolated. Pressure is inevitably building up for trial by tribunal rather than juries in civil rights criminal cases. Southern congressmen in the past have been able to preserve jury trials, but their position is seriously eroded by a series of Haynevilles.

I for one can no longer summon up the faith in juries that the prosecutor urged me to have a decade ago.—BRUCE GALPHIN.

Hayneville Breaks The Heart of Dixie

WASHINGTON — To read and re-read the dispatches from Hayneville in Alabama is to be gripped by an ironic and tragic dilemma wrapped in an aura of hopelessness very nearly as dark as is despair itself. Responsible men must know that the jury system lies at the very root of all our ancient rights and that the jury's verdict, however unpopular, must be accepted in this and every case unless we wish to set up public emotionalism as the last arbiter of American justice.

But responsible men cannot avoid knowing, either, that the verdict in Hayneville which freed Tom Coleman for the shotgun killing of the civil rights worker, Jonathan Daniels, offends something that is almost as profoundly irreplaceable as the jury system itself. This is the absolute, the desperate, necessity that justice must not only be done but that justice must be seen by reasonable men to have been done.

Making due allowance for the evident emotional involvement with the prosecution side of some of the reports of the trial in Hayneville — and this, too, must be given its due weight in any even - handed inquest upon this affair — it is all the same impossible to avoid a sense of shock and horror from that Southern courtroom.

In a word, whether justice was in truth done in Hayneville, no man outside the jury box can say for certain. No man, if we really believe in our system, has the right to say flatly that it was not. But that justice is widely not seen to have been done — purely any man has the right to say this. For this is the plain and terrible truth.

Fair men must acknowledge, too, that there is nothing unexampled in this nightmare business. For there have been many verdicts in the North, notably in the prohibition - gangster era, which reflected no slightest sheen of that justice which is not only done but also seen to have been done.

So critics have no right to hold up this episode as either unique in American annals or as representing a collective thing called Southern justice. It is infamously false to suggest that the South, the very home traditionally of American jurisprudence, as it is the very generating place historically of both the Constitution and the that very place which used to be above all symbol of pride and integrity and honor to every Southerner — has broken the heart of Dixie. For while Hayneville may in fact have seen justice done (though one is compelled against all his principles and family training to doubt even that), Hayneville has thrown out before all the world an irredeemably soiled suggestion of injustice done.

So will be armed again all the South-haters and South-baiters, all those who in their closed minds have already outlawed a whole region. What is left, then, for Southerners who love the South and do not apologize for it and never will? This is left. To go on to the end defending the true South, with less and less hope for a real hearing in the North.

Solon Blasts Katzenbach Acceptance Of Verdict

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Sen. Clifford P. Case, R-N.J., criticized Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach on Sunday for his comment on the acquittal of an Alabama deputy sheriff who killed a young seminarian and civil rights worker.

"I disagree absolutely with Mr. Katzenbach's statement that the Hayneville mockery is 'the price you have to pay for the jury system,'" Case said in remarks prepared for a breakfast meeting here.

"Surely," the senator continued, "We do not have to accept this kind of legal proceeding as being 'expected from time to time.' In this connection, the press reports that the federal government did not even have an observer at the Coleman trial."

Calling the case "one of the latest, flagrant abuses of the judicial process," Case praised Alabama Atty. Gen. Richmond Flowers who, he said, "has made it clear that he is not through with the case."

Case continued: "Defeated in his earlier attempts to indict the defendant on a murder charge; refused a postponement of the case until a key witness, also shot by the defendant, could come to court; ordered out of the court by the trial judge, Atty. Gen. Flowers has not given up on the case.

"In sharp and unfortunate contrast is the philosophic attitude expressed by the attorney general of the United States."

Case said, "This appalling situation is not one which the American people can view tolerantly. They do not expect their government to stand by helplessly.

"Rightly, they look to the federal government to afford effective protection to those who are exercising their constitutional rights in a lawful manner. Clearly the federal government has not done this in the past. Clearly, it is not doing it now."

Outcry Grows on Coleman Trial

(WASHINGTON POST) (Oct.2,1965)

Federal Action Sought—New Trial Is Weighed

By Robert E. Baker
Washington Post Staff Writer

The acquittal of Tom Coleman in Hayneville, Ala., has raised cries of condemnation and renewed demands for Federal action and legislation.

Coleman was acquitted Thursday by an all-white jury in the shotgun slaying of Jonathan M. Daniels, a white civil rights worker.

It was the 26th slaying directly related to integration activities in the South since 1960. Nine of the victims were white, 17 were Negro.

Twelve of the deaths have occurred in Alabama, nine in Mississippi, two in Georgia and one each in North Carolina, Florida and Louisiana.

No one has been found guilty of murder in any of the deaths. In three cases, defendants were found guilty of manslaughter, but the sentence was suspended in one of these.

The record bares an ugly basic issue in the civil rights movement: The all-white juries in some Deep South areas will not find a white man guilty of a crime against white civil rights workers or Negroes.

"This is the price you have to pay for the jury system," said Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach when he heard of Coleman's acquittal. "But I don't think it is too high a price to pay."

Charles Morgan Jr., head of the American Civil Liberties Union's Atlanta office, takes a different view. The jury system in such places as Hayneville's Lowndes County is no jury system at all, he contends.

Negroes comprise 81 per cent of Lowndes County's population but are not permitted to serve on juries, Morgan said.

The ACLU has filed a Federal court suit asking that all court cases in Lowndes County be postponed until Negroes are porportionately represented on juries.

As Coleman came to trial, the ACLU sought an immediate injunction, which was denied. It was appealed to Justice Hugo L. Black on the U.S. Supreme Court who denied the request yesterday without comment. The ACLU case itself will be heard later before a three-judge court.

The Coleman acquital drew demands for a Federal anti-lynching law from several sources, including civil rights leaders the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., James Farmer and John Lewis.

"We feel the Federal Government can do no less if it expects respect of law and order to prevail in the Negro community," said Lewis.

A similar demand came from Malcolm Peabody, president of the Episcopal Society of Cultural and Racial Unity, which sponsored the slain man's work in Lowndes County.

Peabody called the acquittal a "murder license" and warned that if the Federal Government does not act "the racists in the South will have found the ultimate solution to the racial problem."

The Rt. Rev. John Elbridge Hines, presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church, came from his Greenwich, Conn., home to Washington to express his concern. He talked to Deputy Attorney General Ramsey Clark.

The slaying of Daniels on August 20 apparently had the effect of slowing down Negro voter registration with Federal registrars sent to Lowndes under the Voting Rights Act.

In the ten days before the shooting, an average of 82 Negroes a day registered with the Federal men. In 32 days after the shooting, the average dropped to 21 a day.

In Montgomery, Alabama Attorney General Richmond Flowers indicated he was still searching for some way to bring Coleman to court again. Flowers had taken over the prosecution of Coleman and had asked the judge to postpone the trial until the Rev. Richard Morrisroe of Chicago, critically wounded in the Hayneville shooting, could testify.

The judge refused, and ousted Flowers from the case. One source said Flowers' office is now exploring the possibility of seeking a State Supreme Court order declaring Coleman's trial was not legal because of the judge's actions.

This would clear the way for a retrial without double jeopardy.

An NAACP source said his organization would press again for a Federal law providing civil damages for death and injury in rights cases. There were calls to make a civil rights murder a Federal crime and demands that the Justice Department use laws now on the books to prosecute violators.

From Gov. John W. King of New Hampshire to newspaper editorials North and South came cries that something must be done. The Chicago Sun-Times compared Deep South trials to Communist trials: both have predictable outcomes.

Coleman's chief attorney, Vaughan Hill Robison of Montgomery, said his client had been tried "in a temple of justice" and the verdict was "just and fair."

And in Midland, Tex., Attorney General Katzenbach altered the tone of his earlier comment on the Hayneville acquittal.

The Hayneville killing, said Katzenbach, is still under Federal investigation and will continue to be indefinitely.

After Hayneville

IN THE AFTERMATH of the irregular handling and swift acquittal in the killing of the Rev. Jonathan Daniels at Hayneville, Ala., that state's Episcopal leadership has issued strong words about the implications.

Such words, too often not forthcoming in the past, add a little toward establishing a climate of responsibility.

It will take much more, of course. But on such an occasion we are glad to see this much take place, and we say so while remaining aware that the same words need to be heard by many in Georgia as well.

"We are deeply disturbed to have heard all too many church members condoning the slaying or beating of civil rights workers, saying such things as 'They had it coming to them' or 'They had no business being there,'" said Episcopal Bishops C. C. J. Carpenter and George M. Murray of Alabama.

They said they hope all Christian people in Alabama will pray that "the whole process of indictment and trial in the case of Jonathan Daniels shall in no wise be interpreted as a license to kill or injure those with whom we disagree or whose behavior we disapprove. . . ."

The tragic fact is that, without regard to the jury's verdict in this case, many people will interpret the handling of it and the atmosphere as evidence they have just such a license.

Fortunately there are other voices in the South besides the one heard in Hayneville:

MORE TRUTH ABOUT ALABAMA

Tuesday, October

WASHINGTON — To read and re-read the dispatches from Hayneville in Alabama is to be gripped by an ironic and tragic dilemma wrapped in an aura of hopelessness very nearly as dark as is despair itself. Responsible men must know that the jury system lies at the very root of all our ancient rights and that the jury's verdict, however unpopular, must be accepted in this and every case unless we wish to set up public emotionalism as the last arbiter of American justice.

But responsible men cannot avoid knowing, either, that the verdict in Hayneville which freed Tom Coleman for the shotgun killing of the civil rights worker, Jonathan Daniels, offends something that is almost as profoundly irreplaceable as the jury system itself. This is the absolute, the desperate, necessity that justice must not only be done but that justice must be seen by reasonable men to have been done.

Making due allowance for the evident emotional involvement with the prosecution side of some of the reports of the trial in Hayneville — and this, too, must be given its due weight in any even - handed inquest upon this affair — it is all the same impossible to avoid a sense of shock and horror from that Southern courtroom.

In a word, whether justice was in truth done in Hayneville, no man outside the jury box can say for certain. No man, if we really believe in our system, has the right to say flatly that it was not. But that justice is widely not seen to have been done — purely any man has the right to say this. For this is the plain and terrible truth.

Fair men must acknowledge, too, that there is nothing unexampled in this nightmare business. For there have been many verdicts in the North, notably in the prohibition - gangster era, which reflected no slightest sheen of that justice which is not only done but also seen to have been done.

So critics have no right to hold up this episode as either unique in American annals or as representing a collective thing called Southern justice. It is infamously false to suggest that the South, the very home traditionally of American jurisprudence, as it is the very generating place historically of both the Constitution and the Bill of Rights, is generally and commonly the home also of injustice.

Yet, Hayneville brings pain and loss and deprivation to all true Southerners — those who still live there and those who, like this columnist, live there no longer but still love the South and always will and value its traditions trampled into Hayneville's dust.

A long time ago, when hoodlum mobs sullied the streets of the Confederacy's capital, Montgomery, one remarked that while the automobile plates of Alabama proudly speak of it as the "Heart of Dixie," the white trash of Montgomery had broken the heart of Dixie as few had done before.

Again now, and most sorrowfully, it must be said, Hayneville again — and in no less a place than a court of law, that very place which used to be above all symbol of pride and integrity and honor to every Southerner — has broken the heart of Dixie. For while Hayneville may in fact have seen justice done (though one is compelled against all his principles and family training to doubt even that), Hayneville has thrown out before all the world an irredeemably soiled suggestion of injustice done.

So will be armed again all the South-haters and South-baiters, all those who in their closed minds have already outlawed a whole region. What is left, then, for Southerners who love the South and do not apologize for it and never will? This is left. To go on to the end defending the true South, with less and less hope for a real hearing in the North.

zenbach on Sunday for his comment on the acquittal of an Alabama deputy sheriff who killed a young seminarian and civil rights worker.

"I disagree absolutely with Mr. Katzenbach's statement that the Hayneville mockery is 'the price you have to pay for the jury system,'" Case said in remarks prepared for a breakfast meeting here.

"Surely," the senator continued, "We do not have to accept this kind of legal proceeding as being 'expected from time to time.' In this connection, the press reports that the federal government did not even have an observer at the Coleman trial."

Calling the case "one of the latest, flagrant abuses of the judicial process," Case praised Alabama Atty. Gen. Richmond Flowers who, he said, "has made it clear that he is not through with the case."

Case continued: "Defeated in his earlier attempts to indict the defendant on a murder charge; refused a postponement of the case until a key witness, also Atty. Gen. Flowers has not given up on the case.

"In sharp and unfortunate contrast is the philosophic attitude expressed by the attorney general of the United States."

Case said, "This appalling situation is not one which the American people can view tolerantly. They do not expect their government to stand by helplessly.

"Rightly, they look to the federal government to afford effective protection to those who are exercising their constitutional rights in a lawful manner. Clearly the federal government has not done this in the past. Clearly, it is not doing it now."

man in Hayneville, Ala., has raised cries of condemnation and renewed demands for Federal action and legislation.

Coleman was acquitted Thursday by an all-white jury in the shotgun slaying of Jonathan M. Daniels, a white civil rights worker.

It was the 28th slaying directly related to integration activities in the South since occurred in Alabama, nine in Mississippi, two in Georgia and one each in North Carolina, Florida and Louisiana.

No one has been found guilty of murder in any of the deaths. In three cases, defendants were found guilty of manslaughter, but the sentence was suspended in one of these.

The record bares an ugly basic issue in the civil rights movement: The all-white juries in some Deep South areas will not find a white man guilty of a crime against white civil rights workers or Negroes.

"This is the price you have to pay for the jury system," said Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach when he heard of Coleman's acquittal. "But I don't think it is too high a price to pay."

Charles Morgan Jr., head of the American Civil Liberties Union's Atlanta office, takes a different view. The jury system in such places as Hayneville's Lowndes County is no jury system at all, he contends.

Negroes comprise 81 per cent of Lowndes County's population but are not permitted to serve on juries, Morgan said.

The ACLU has filed a Federal court suit asking that all court cases in Lowndes County be postponed until Negroes are porportionately represented on juries.

Church unit raps acquittal

B'ham News 10-3-65

WASHINGTON (AP) — A church group describes the acquittal of an Alabama slayer of a civil-rights worker as "an obscene caricature of justice."

In a statement issued Saturday night, the Commission on Religion and Race of the National Council of Churches said the action of an all-white jury at Hayneville, Ala., in acquitting Thomas L. Coleman "amounts to a wholesale issuance of hunting licenses to humans against other humans."

Coleman, the acknowledged shotgun killer of Jonathan Daniels, a white Episcopal seminarian, was acquitted on grounds of self-defense.

The statement, issued by the commission's executive director, the Rev. Dr. Robert W. Spike, said 25 civil-rights workers have been killed in the South in the past five years and there has yet to be a murder conviction in these killings.

It said the 1965 voting-rights act "will become completely meaningless as long as those who attempt to vote or assist others to do so act in constant jeopardy of their very lives."

It concluded: "The question is simple: Who will be next?

"The Commission on Religion and Race intends to keep this question before the American public until a way is found for our federal government to protect all the people."

IN THE AFTERMATH of the irregular handling and swift acquittal in the killing of the Rev. Jonathan Daniels at Hayneville, Ala., that state's Episcopal leadership has issued strong words about the implications.

The Louisville Courier-Journal said: "Nothing in the whole proceeding was more shameful than the appearance of local clergymen who gave absolution to the affair, fatally qualifying one of the great commandments."

And within Alabama, these words came from the Birmingham News:

MORE TRUTH ABOUT ALABAMA

Lowndes County Justice

The farce in Hayneville, Alabama, is played out to the end once again. Once more a Lowndes County jury has gone through the motions of weighing the evidence against a white man accused of killing a civil rights worker and, after a polite pause, has set him free.

"I knew it all the time," exclaimed Tom Coleman's wife after the verdict. Of course she did. Who didn't?

Who on earth would expect a Lowndes County jury to punish a white man who did no more than shoot a couple of "nigger-loving preachers" who came down from the North to make trouble?

It may be unfair to the good white people of Lowndes County to assume that they consider urging Negroes to register and vote a crime properly punishable by a death sentence summarily executed by a part-time deputy. Most would probably prescribe no more than a little kicking around.

But who's to blame Tom Coleman for being provoked to deadly violence when they make so bold as to try to walk into a store? Not gonna hang a man for that, are you?

"All of you know Tom Coleman," the defense attorney said to the jury.

That's enough of a license to kill a man.

"You knew his mother and you knew his father."

That's enough of a license to kill a man.

"You named your football field for him."

That's enough of a license to kill a man.

It is, in Lowndes County, Alabama, if the man to be killed has been telling Negroes they ought to register and vote.

It is, in Lowndes County, Alabama, if the killer's pal is willing to testify vaguely that he saw "a shiny object" in one victim's hand that "appeared to be a knife," and in the other victim's hand what he "took to be" a pistol.

Elsewhere in this civilized land it may seem most unlikely that two young men of religion, knowing well that they were deep in hostile territory where the slightest excuse would be used to put them in jail, or worse, would go charging around armed. But in Hayneville, Tom Coleman needed a self-defense alibi.

Elsewhere it might seem strange that their weapons could then disappear forever simply because a couple of Negroes — unhindered and unidentified — could pick them up and walk away from a crowd of white witnesses. But in Hayneville, Tom Coleman was pleading self-defense.

Elsewhere people may wonder how one of these murderous young clergymen could have gotten so much of Coleman's buckshot in his liver and kidney if he was not, as he claims, running away, but was charging Coleman and his shotgun, as Coleman's pal says. But in Hayneville they named their football field after Tom Coleman.

"What could you expect in this county?" asked the county solicitor, Carlton Perdue.

Perdue is no flaming Southern liberal, nor yet a faint Southern liberal. His comment just after the shootings last August was, "If they'd been tending to their own business, like I tend to mine, they'd be living and enjoying themselves today."

But he did make somewhat of a try, in his official capacity, to bring Hayneville to face up to such conscience as it may possess, to convince it that gunning men down in the street — in this case glossed over as manslaughter — is not something a civilized community can keep on its stomach in health.

He failed even in this faint effort, and time will tell how the good white people of Lowndes County will tolerate even this mild apostasy.

Alabama State Senator Vaughn Hill Robison, in defense of Tom Coleman, summed up Hayneville and Lowndes County in his address to the jury:

"Justice does not sleep in Lowndes County today. By your verdict of not guilty, you will say, 'Justice is alive in Lowndes County.'"

Justice!

The word must stick in his throat.

We'uns Got Us a Huntin' License!

Bill Urged to Shift Rights Case Trials

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5 (AP)—The nation's civil rights leadership has set a new congressional goal for 1966: Passage of a personal security act to take civil rights criminal cases out of state courts.

"We had the Public Accommodations Act in 1964, the voting rights bill in 1965 and we look forward to the personal security act in 1966," Joseph L. Rauh, counsel for the National Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, said in an interview today.

The conference, an amalgamation of more than 100 church, union and civil rights groups, met privately last week.

The meeting came shortly after a Hayneville, Ala., jury acquitted Thomas L. Coleman, a special deputy sheriff of Lowndes County, of manslaughter in connection with the slaying of Jonathan M. Daniels, 27, civil rights worker for the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity. The church group said Daniels was the 26th civil rights worker in the South to die violently since 1961.

The leadership conference asked itself, Rauh said, "is this thing going to continue? Have we seen the last of the judicial farce we saw in Hayneville?"

The conferees agreed, he said that "every assault with a racial purpose or effect should be made a federal crime."

And congressional passage of such an act, he added, "should be the major legislative goal of the leadership drive in 1966."

Rauh said the legislation he has in mind would, in effect, take civil rights-connected criminal cases out of the state's hands and into a federal courtroom.

"In a federal court we just don't get judicial farces like we saw in Haneyville," he said. "Not all federal courts are perfect, but they certainly don't act like this."

The leadership conference unsuccessfully attempted to write similar provisions into the 1965 Voting Rights Act, Rauh said, and plans no legislative drive until next year.

"There's no bill ready yet," he said. "We know that this Congress is ready to go home and it won't be very well received. I think a bill will be ready when Congress comes back in January."

A spokesman for the National Council of Churches' Commission on Religion and Race, which earlier had denounced the Hayneville decision as "an obscene caricature of justice," endorsed the proposed personal security act.

MEMO TO ESCRU MEMBERS

What you can do about Hayneville, Alabama

You are familiar with the events surrounding the trial of Thomas L. Coleman for the slaying of ESCRU staff member Jonathan M. Daniels. As surely as Mr. Coleman pulled the trigger that scattered death in Jonathan's body, the gun was loaded with shot from the Southern system of justice.

Segregated justice:

1. ... results in exclusion of Negroes from juries. For example, in Lowndes County, Alabama, which is 81% Negro, Thomas L. Coleman's trial jury (after lawyers' challenges) should have been composed of twelve Negroes. It is not difficult to see that the Southern killers of civil rights workers (26 killings since 1961) will find fear in the prospect of trial in an integrated legal system.
2. ... provides a biased workshop in which white liberal and moderate lawyers cannot represent persons in civil rights and liberties matters without risking their lives and fortunes while protecting their sacred honor.
3. ... places great burdens upon Negro lawyers, Negro criminal defendants, and others - burdens which are not encountered by white lawyers and white persons before the courts..
4. ... militates against the granting of adequate damages to Negroes for personal injuries occasioned them by white persons.
5. ... has a "chilling effect on free expression" since liberal and moderate people fear to speak, knowing that they may be killed with impunity by men with licenses to kill.
6. ... discourages newspaper editors and others, fearful of libel and other types of suits, from expressing themselves in favor of national law over the Southern order.
7. ... militates against more effective representation by Negro lawyers, and also limits their means of livelihood to the Negro community.
8. ... discourages voter registration, for what Negro man or woman may enter the white man's courthouse without fears and remembrances of 100 years of repression there.
9. ... leaves law abiding Negroes without substantial protection from Negroes and others in predominantly Negro neighborhoods. (White Southern juries punish Negroes less severely for crimes against members of their race than they do for crimes by Negroes against whites and whites for crimes against whites.)
10. ... spreads the seeds of distrust and lawlessness from the South to New York and Los Angeles.
11. ... makes the phrase "take your struggle out of the streets and into the courts" sound both hollow and mocking. To Southern-born Negroes - wherever they may be - the court may be the enemy, not a forum.

Segregated justice is not confined to state court juries; federal court juries are little better. The exclusion of Negroes from employment in the administration of justice is as widespread as it is harshly discriminatory. From the jail to the all white police department, the Negro has little hope for equal treatment. Indeed, the Southern Regional Council has reported on the racial make-up of employment in Southern Federal Courts and the following table from that report shows that the entire structure of federal justice in the South is as white as new-fallen snow in Keene, New Hampshire.

RACIAL DISTRIBUTION OF OFFICERS AND PERSONNEL IN SOUTHERN FEDERAL COURTS

	TOTAL	WHITE	NEGRO
Circuit Court Judges	12*	12	0
District Court Judges	65	65	0
Referees in Bankruptcy	55	55	0
U. S. Commissioners	253	253	0
U. S. Clerks	28	28	0
Deputy U. S. Clerks	321	321	0
U. S. Attorneys	29	29	0
Assistant U. S. Attorneys	158	153	5
Jury Commissioners	109	109	0
U. S. Marshals	29	29	0
Deputy U. S. Marshals	165	156	9
Secretarial and Clerical	364	**	**

* This is the number of judges of southern residence now serving in the Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, and Eighth Circuits. The numbers respectively are three, seven, one, and one.

 Exact number of Negroes not ascertainable. The number, from observation, is quite small.

From: Racial Discrimination in the Southern Federal Courts, a Special Report of the Southern Regional Council, p. 3.

As we urge Negroes to seek their rights in courts instead of streets we must recognize that the courts are among the last major instrumentalities of governmental repression. In the analyses of the Watts and Harlem riots - and cries of police brutality across the nation - it should be understood that the Negro from Lowndes or Wilcox County, Alabama who moves to the Promised Land and hears from the white cop there the word "nigger", feels the resentment against the Deep South sheriff who, the Negro learned long ago, had the duty of"keeping the niggers in line." Thus, steps must be taken immediately to make certain that the very system of the administration of justice in the South undergoes radical change.

Prior to Mr. Coleman's trial, ESCRU, represented by lawyers for the American Civil Liberties Union, sought to delay all trials in Lowndes County, Alabama until juries there were selected in accordance with color-blind constitutional provisions. Although unsuccessful in its first attempt, this case and the vote of "The Hayneville Twelve" have brought clearly into focus the importance of the integration of the segregated Southern system of justice.

Thus ESCRU is deeply committed to making the life and death of Jonathan Daniels meaningful. It has committed itself to long-range work in desegregating Southern justice. ESCRU is not alone in this commitment; it is joined by the Commission on Religion and Race of the National Council of Churches, the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, and the Southern Regional Council. The American Civil Liberties Union has initiated a long-range program termed "Operation Southern Justice" to provide legal assistance for this struggle.

WHAT YOU CAN DO

First, contact your congressman. The Department of Justice is empowered under Title 18, Section 243, United States Code, to prosecute federal and state officials who exclude Negroes from jury service. Only one prosecution has been brought under this law - that in the 1870's. Under the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Department of Justice is authorized to intervene in cases brought by private citizens to integrate the administration of justice. The Department of Justice and the President are directly responsible for the appointment of federal judges and the employment of many of the federal employees who work in the administration of justice in the federal courts. Your congressman should be urged to seek enactment of laws providing for fair employment practices in state and municipal employment as well as in the federal judicial system (these fields are presently exempt from Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964). Your congressman should also be urged to seek enactment of a uniform juror selection law for all courts which would provide for the selection of jurors in the same impartial manner as is presently utilized in obtaining population samples for public opinion polls. The jury should be selected from a true cross-section of the population, not from lists or by "keymen" methods which tend to make juries throughout the United States "white, middle-class, middle-minded, and middle-aged".

Second, all forms of communications should be utilized to bring to the country's attention the fact that all-white jury systems and all-white Southern courthouses serve as a licensing bureau for killers of civil rights workers, and blocker of equal rights for all men. Tactics ranging from picketing and demonstrations to consultations with your local newspaper editors should be considered. We, of course, urge that all means employed to bring this problem of all-white justice to the nation's attention, be peaceful, totally non-violent, and protected by the First and Fourteenth Amendments of the Constitution of the United States.

Third, you should express yourself to the President and Attorney General of the United States demanding the enforcement of existing federal laws to integrate federal and state courts. The President appoints federal judges in the South - for life. Proper appointments may make the Constitution a living document. Typical appointments remove from it the breath of life.

Your staff is planning to participate in a major, coordinated effort in Washington, D. C. to bring the seriousness of this problem to the nation's attention. Other activities are presently under consideration.

With your help and the help of Christians across the nation we may be able to secure the enforcement of existing laws, and the enactment and enforcement of new laws, to the end that the whiteness of the courthouses of the South will disappear from view, that Southern Justice, as we have known it, will melt as the snow next spring in Keene, New Hampshire.

Then and only then will the death of Jonathan M. Daniels be meaningful. For, from his death and the trial of his killer may come a new way of life in the courts of the South and the nation.

Sincerely,

Charles Morgan, Jr.

A Burning Bush

JONATHAN MYRICK DANIELS

April 1965

The author with one of his friends, who although the victim of hatred, ignorance and intolerance, manages to smile in youthful innocence.

REALITY is kaleidoscopic in the black belt. Now you see it; now you don't. The view is never the same. Climate is an affair of the soul as well as the body: today the sun sears the earth, and a man goes limp in its scorching. Tomorrow and yesterday sullen rains chill bones and flood unpaved streets. Fire and ice . . . the advantages of both may be obtained with ease in the black belt. Light, dark, white, black: a way-of-life blurs, and the focus shifts. Black, white, black . . . A rhythm ripples in the sun, pounds in steaming, stinking shacks, dances in the blood. Reality is kaleidoscopic in the black belt. Sometimes one's vision changes with it. A crooked man climbed a crooked tree on a crooked hill. Somewhere, in the mists of the past, a tenor sang of valleys lifted up and hills made low. Death at the heart of life, and life in the midst of death. The tree of life is indeed a Cross.

White

Darkly, incredibly the interstate highway that had knifed through Virginia and the Carolinas narrowed and stopped. It was three o'clock in the morning and bitterly cold. We found it difficult to believe that we were actually back in the south. But in the twinkling of an eye our brave, clean highway became a backwoods Georgia road, deep in cracker country, and we knew we were home. We were low on gas and miles from a point on the map, miles from sanctuary in Atlanta. We found a gas station and stopped. While one of us got the tank filled, the other went to the outdoor phone. Our Massachusetts plates seemed to glow in the night. As I shivered in the phone booth, I saw, through a window, white men turn and stare. Then my eye caught the sign over the door. . . WHITE ONLY. We had planned to get a Coke to keep us awake until Atlanta, but I guessed I no longer cared. I heard the operator speak and then Father Scott in Atlanta. His voice was sleepy – and tired – and it took him a minute to recall our meeting at the airport a week or two before. Then he shifted into gear, and I received precise instructions. We would find a small street at the end of the night and a certain door. We would knock and say that Fr. Scott had said that we were to be admitted to the Canterbury House next door. There would be black faces and a warm floor, the Eucharist in the morning and coffee to send us on our way. What we found there we sometimes think we shall see again only in Heaven. The Love before which we knelt in the morning would not again be visible at an altar, except to souls that had taken their first steps on the long trek out of the flesh. One cannot otherwise kneel in the real presence of a brother's hate, but that is to get ahead of our story . . We drove on into the night. Incongruously, we came upon an all-night truckstop, midway to nowhere. There appeared to be no sign over the door, and I went in to get coffee-to-go. Too late, I discovered that hatred hadn't advertised – perhaps the sign had blown off in a storm. When I ordered the coffee, all other voices stopped. I turned from cold stares and fixed my gaze on a sign over the counter.

Nausea

"ALL CASH RECEIVED FROM SALES TO NIGGERS WILL BE SENT DIRECTLY TO THE UNITED KLANS OF AMERICA." I read it again and again, nausea rising swiftly and savagely, as the suspicious counter boy spilled coffee over the cups. It was lousy coffee. But worse than chicory was the taste of black men's blood. It was cheap: only twenty-five cents. At least Judas went for thirty.

It was high noon as we walked into the Selma Post Office to sign for a registered letter, and the lines at the windows were long. In the line next to me a redneck turned and stared: at my seminarian's collar, at my ESCRU button, at my face. He turned to a friend. "Know what he is?" The friend shouted, "No." Resuming, the speaker whinnied, "Why, he's a white niggah." I was not happy thus to become the object of every gaze. And yet deep within me rose an affirmation and a tenderness and a joy that wanted to shout, "Yes!" If pride were appropriate in the ambiguities of my presence in Selma, I would be unspeakably proud of my title. For it is the highest honor, the most precious distinction I have ever received. It is one that I do not deserve – and cannot ever earn. As I type now, my hands are hopelessly white. "But my heart is black. . ." I was proud, for the redneck's contempt was the obverse of an identity and an acceptance that were very real, if still ambiguous, in another part of town. I am indeed "a white nigger."

Bunnie sat astride my knee. She is four, the youngest of eleven. She smiled, yet there was a hesitancy in her eyes. Her daddy smiled down at her and asked, "Do you love Jon?" Quietly but firmly, Bunny said, "No." We had lived with Bunnie's family only a few days and I was sure I knew what she meant. A part of me seemed to die inside, and I fought back tears. But there was nothing I could say, nothing I could do. Wisely, her daddy, who was already a dear friend, did not pursue the matter . . . When, a few days later, Bunnie pulled me down to her, cupped my face with her tiny hands and kissed me, I knew something very important (and incredibly beautiful) had happened. As Stringfellow says in My People Is the Enemy, "that is called a sacrament."

We had parked the car at the church. The rector had not been there, so we had strolled a block or two to the office of an attorney whom we had met at St. Paul's and encountered several times since.

Grapevine

This time our visit was more cordial. We had given him and his wife a copy of My People Is the Enemy for Easter, and I think they were deeply touched. This time he was less suspicious, less defensive, less insistent that we "get the hell out of town." We had talked this time of the Gospel, of what a white moderate could do when he discovered that the White Citizens' Council wasn't all-powerful, of certain changes in the school system that the grapevine said might be forthcoming. We left his office in a spirit of something very much like friendship. Something having to do with human hearts, something like the faith of the Church had been explored and shared with a white man in the black belt. We gave thanks to the One Whom we had besought as we stepped across the threshhold of his office, and quietly savored the glory of God as we strolled back to the car. We stopped for a light, and a man got out of his car and approached us. He was dressed in a business suit and looked respectable – this was not a redneck, so we could relax. He stopped in front of us, inspecting us from head to toe. His eyes paused for a moment at our ESCRU buttons and the collar. Then he spoke, very quietly. "Are you the scum that's been going to the Episcopal Church?" With a single voice we answered, "the scum, sir?" "Scum," he returned, "S-C-U-M. Christian That's what you are – you and the nigger trash you bring with you." We replied as gently as we could, "We can spell, sir. We're sorry you feel that way." He turned contemptuously on his heel, and we crossed our street sadly. Yet it was funny – riotously, hilariously, hideously funny! We laughed all the way back home – at the man, at his cruelty, at his stupidity, at our cleverness, at the success with which we had suavely maintained "the Christian posture." And then, though we have not talked about it, we both felt a little dirty. Maybe the Incarnate God was truly present in that man's need and asking us for something better than a smirk. (I started to say "More truly human than a smirk . . ." But I don't know about that. We are beginning to believe deeply in original sin: theirs and ours.)

The Judge, an Episcopalian and a racist, waited for us to finish a nervous introduction. We had encountered him only too often in his capacity as head usher, and we knew our man. Now that we sat in his elegantly appointed office in the Dallas County Courthouse, we were terrified. We knew what this man could do, and what we had not seen ourselves we had heard from our friends. We concluded with something more-or-less coherent about the situation in St. Paul's. He began. "You, Jonathan and Judy, will always be welcome in St. Paul's." We smiled appreciatively. "But,' he continued, "the nigger trash you bring with you will never be accepted in St. Paul's." We thought for an instant about the beautiful kids we take with us every Sunday. Especially about Helen, the eldest daughter in the first family who had opened their home and hearts to us, a lovely, gentle, gracious girl who plans to enter nurse's training when she is graduated from high school this June. She must be one of the sweetest, prettiest girls in creation. Then anger rose in us – feeling akin, I suppose, to the feelings of a white man for the sanctity of southern womanhood. Helen, trash? We should have left his office then, for we were no longer free men. Symbolically he had raped our sister and friend. From that moment, we loathed the man – perhaps a bit more acutely than he loathed her. "The strategy of love" had already been lost. What, Lord Christ, does one do? Sometimes we do not know. Much later we told the judge that we thought the Gospel, as it had been delivered to the Holy Catholic Church rather specifically discouraged his notion that "our Episcopal Church is a white church." He answered that the Gospel also forbade our living with negroes . . . "since God made white men and black men separate and if He'd wanted them comingled He'd have made them all alike." We asked him to cite New Testament evidence. He replied that he wasn't talking about the Gospel anyway, but about reality. He was quite clear that he knew God's thinking on this point, however. We then talked a bit about white supremacy and some of the means which had been used to achieve it. He denied that human slavery had had anything to do with it – and also that the beating of our kids on "Bloody Sunday" was any exception to his assertion that negroes get more kindly treatment in the black belt than they do anywhere else in the country – and concluded that the real problem was federal intervention in the cotton industry, in voter registration, in the churches. We suggested that the judge himself was implicated in the injustice perpetrated against the negro by the white men in Dallas County (actually he is notorious on his own hook, even by the standards of white moderates in the county). With some belligerence, he replied that he was not, that he had spent all his life in Selma. We missed the point of the last and said: "Sir, you're a legal mind, trained to be consistent. Don't you see the inconsistency of what you've just said?" A smile spread across the judge's face as he replied, "That's not inconsistent. That's the way we think here, those of us who have spent all our lives here and really know the situation." He had made the same point in several other contexts that only a southern white man who had never left the black belt could see things as they really are. He concluded, "I'm not guilty of anything. Only guilty men have trouble sleeping at night. I don't have any trouble sleeping." We could not suppress the retort that we thought maybe he should. In spite of ourselves, we went through the farce of shaking hands. As we strolled to the courthouse, on our way to see the judge, we had recalled – only partly in jest – that "this kind does not come out, except by prayer and fasting."

Scotts

When we got an Alabama plate for the car, we made the mistake of giving the Scotts' number in the federal project as our local address. In less than twenty-four hours, Mrs. Scott was notified by the project authorities that her house was being watched and would soon be inspected. If "those troublemakers at the Episcopal Church" or any of their luggage were found, the Scotts would be thrown out in the street . . . We moved out a little after midnight when the streets were dark and nearly deserted. Fortunately, friends of the Scotts, who owned their house in a negro neighborhood on the edge of town, offered to take us in. Then we noticed that we were being followed uptown, especially when we drove away from the church. Mrs. Scott told us one evening that the police had been looking for "the people who've been going to the Episcopal Church." We discussed the situation with Bunnie's father, who felt that we were too remote in East Selma and insisted that we move in with his family. Now the telephone rings at six in the morning. When somebody finally stumbles out of bed to answer, there is only the sound of breathing at the other end.

When we moved in with our present family, we knew where Bunnie's mother stood. A few nights before, she had told us politely but emphatically that she didn't like white people – any white people. She knew from countless experiences that they couldn't be trusted. Until very recently, she would not have allowed white people to stay in her home. Though saddened, we were grateful for her honesty and told her so. We also told her that though we would understand if she didn't believe us, we had begun to love her and her family deeply. By the night we moved in, her reserve had almost disappeared. She was wonderfully hospitable to us, notwithstanding the suspicion she must still have felt. We spent an evening with Lonzie and Alice at the Elk's Club. Late in the evening a black nationalist approached her. "What are you doing here with them?" he asked: "They're white people." Much to our surprise and perhaps a little to her own, she answered: "Jon and Judy are my friends. They're staying in my home. I'll pick my own friends, and nobody'll tell me otherwise." The name for that, Brother Stringfellow, is miracle.

The girls looked particularly beautiful as we went into church on Palm Sunday. Their gloves and dresses were freshly cleaned and pretty. Their hairdo's were lovely. There was a freshness, a quiet radiance about them which made us catch our breath. We were startled from our vision by a member of the congregation entering the church as we were. His greeting was unmistakable: "You goddamned scum. . ."

The disappointments of Holy Week and the bitterness of Easter Communion at St. Paul's forced our eyes back to the inscription over the altar. "He is not here. For He is risen." In a dreadful parody of their meaning, the words seemed to tell a grim truth that was not exhausted by their liturgical import.

This is the stuff of which our life is made. There are moments of great joy and moments of sorrow. Almost imperceptibly, some men grow in grace. Some men don't. Christian hope, grounded in the reality of Easter, must never degenerate into optimism. For that is the road to despair. Yet it ought never to conclude that because its proper end is Heaven, the Church may dally at its work until the End is in sight. The thought of the Church is fraught with tension because the Life of the Church is caught in tension. For the individual Christian and the far-flung congregation alike, that is part of the reality of the Cross.

There are good men here, just as there are bad men. There are competent leaders and a bungler here and there. We have activists who risk their lives to confront a people with the challenge of freedom and a nation with its conscience. We have neutralists who cautiously seek to calm troubled waters. We have men about the work of reconciliation who are willing to reflect upon the cost and pay it. Perhaps at one time or another the two of us are all of these. Sometimes we take to the streets, sometimes we yawn through interminable meetings. Sometimes we talked with white men in their homes and offices, sometimes we sit out a murderous night with an alcoholic and his family because we love them and cannot stand apart. Sometimes we confront the posse, and sometimes we hold a child. Sometimes we stand with men who have learned to hate, and sometimes we must stand a little apart from them. Our life in Selma is filled with ambiguity, and in that we share with men everywhere. We are beginning to see as we never saw before that we are truly in the world and yet ultimately not of it. For through the bramble bush of doubt and fear and supposed success we are groping our way to the realization that above all alse, we are called to be saints. That is the mission of the Church everywhere. And in this Selma, Alabama is like all the world: it needs the life and witness of militant saints.

1939 - 1965

Jon Daniels and other students of the Episcopal Theological School were among the thousands who demonstrated a nation's concern by going to Selma after the violence at Pettus Bridge on March 7, 1965. With a classmate, Judith Upham, and with the approval of the seminary and his bishop, Jon returned to Selma for the duration of the spring, during which time he wrote this article. After final exams back at Cambridge, and staff work at the diocesan youth camp in New Hampshire, Jon once more returned to Selma for the summer as our representative in a continuing ministry of presence. On Saturday, August 14th, he and a group of SNCC workers were jailed at Fort Deposit, Alabama, in an arrest which a Federal Court has subsequently ruled to have been illegal. They were moved to the Lowndes County Jail in Hayneville where Fr. Henri Stines of ESCRU visited Jon on Wednesday, prepared to post bond had he been willing to leave before the others could be freed. On Friday, August 20th, the entire group was unexpectedly released, without advance notice which would have seen them picked up and transported back to Selma. Jon, Fr. Richard Morrisroe, and two SNCC workers approached a nearby store where they had been accustomed to making purchases. Thomas Coleman, prominent Hayneville resident and a sometime Deputy Sheriff, was waiting there with a shotgun. Before they could enter he fired twice. Seeing what was about to happen, Jon pushed the friend in front of him to the ground and fell mortally wounded himself. Fr. Morrisroe was critically injured by the second blast. At the trial of Mr. Coleman, termed a miscarriage of justice by Alabama's Attorney General, the defense claimed the shooting was done in self-defense. Coleman was found not guilty. Whether a part of Jon's legacy will be the more vigorous enforcement of existing Federal laws or the enactment of new ones depends on you, the reader. Certainly in this article he leaves a legacy of Christian commitment that will long endure.

MEMORANDUM

December 2, 1965

TO: ESCRU Board Members & Chapter Chairmen

FROM: The Rev. John B. Morris, Executive Director

RE: Vietnam and the Civil Rights Movement

Events of the past several weeks prompt the following observations on the subject of war and peace in our time:

1. ESCRU has taken no position on the Vietnam War issue, nor should we in my estimation. However, we who are members of ESCRU, together with all Churchmen, should earnestly search for the best application of Christian moral principles in this situation, recognizing that ethical decisions in this world are seldom uncomplicated and, at best, are generally ambiguous.

2. Individual members of ESCRU will differ in their conclusions on the Vietnam issue, and may very well affiliate with organizations of opposing viewpoints. Such involvement is commendable in a day where passivity is too often the hallmark of citizenship.

3. There has been an unfortunate tendency in some quarters to equate the Civil Rights Movement and the Peace Movement, obscuring thereby the valid differences which Civil Rights adherents may have over the Vietnam issue. I think it is regrettable that recent Peace Movement rallies and ceremonial draft card burnings have concluded with the singing of "We Shall Overcome", a song which has come to be accepted as the chief anthem of the Civil Rights Movement.

4. President Johnson, Vice President Humphrey, Ambassador Goldberg, and others of national prominence, have rightly supported this country's time-honored tradition of freedom of expression in recognizing the rights of citizens to peacefully organize in efforts to affect the national consensus. Ultra-conservative reaction to Peace Movement demonstrations, with the implication at times that such should not be tolerated, seems far more un-American than anything done thus far by way of criticizing American involvement in Vietnam.

5. For my part, I reluctantly accept the necessity of military intervention at times as being the lesser of two evils in this sinful world where the powers and principalities of darkness run rampant if other men stand by espousing neutrality. This does not mean that American might has always been employed for the sake of righteousness, and probably never unambiguously. I believe, however, that it was right for us to go on the field of battle against the racism of Nazi Germany, just as it may be necessary for us to support military intervention in Southern Rhodesia and, ultimately, in South Africa.

6. Speaking as a citizen and as a Churchman, and not in behalf of ESCRU, I support this country's presence in Vietnam at the present time on the basis of what I now know. I pray, however, that our nation's leaders will ever remain open to the possibilities of negotiation and settlement. That one great world power refuses to acknowledge the plausibility of co-existence should provide no excuse for heeding the more militaristic spokesmen who hover at the fringes of our national life.

TO ALL BISHOPS AND SOME OTHER CONCERNED PEOPLE:

The adoption of a state civil rights act is not generally the primary concern of national ESCRU, but when such was accomplished in January of this year, following the earlier passage of two Federal civil rights bills, and when the person who chiefly spearheaded the adoption of a state bill is the Dean of an Episcopal cathedral - then this is news for us and something in which I believe that key Episcopalians and others will be interested.

I am enclosing a booklet which explains and describes the recently-adopted Kentucky Civil Rights Act. On the inside of the back cover you will find that the Chairman of the Kentucky Commission on Human Rights is the Very Rev. Robert W. Estill of Louisville, Kentucky, I know from talking with friends in Kentucky that Dean Estill is largely responsible for this very creative and imaginative move by the state legislature in Kentucky.

In a day when many are saying that there is no need for further legislation, it is an impressive thing that the State of Kentucky can go beyond the federal legislation in the promotion of justice in employment patterns and in the use of Public Accomodations.

Episcopalians can rightly be proud of the role which Dean Estill played in the adoption of this legislation. I hope that his example will be an encouragement and incentive to others and that the enclosed booklet will be of some assistance to you in terms of evaluating the gains or needs with respect to your own state's initiative.

Yours faithfully,

MEMORANDUM

April 28, 1966

TO: Various Friends & Colleagues

FROM: The Rev. John B. Morris

RE: Direct Action & Apartheid in southern Africa

Purpose & Standing of this Memo - This is exploratory and suggestive in nature, with a hope that some recipients may want to respond in kind; or, indeed, that it may reach persons far more competent in this area who are prepared (or are preparing) to follow through somehow and who will favor us with information on their plans.

The Board of Directors of ESCRU turned its attention to the issue of Apartheid in southern Africa at its January, 1966, meeting; and I take my cue from that insofar as the legitimacy of the topic for ESCRU's Executive Director. However, it should be noted that the analysis and suggestions set forth herein are my own only. Our Board did authorize the sending of some representative to southern Africa, as a token of our interest in the situation, if special funds could be found. We are still desirous of following through in such terms, but this memorandum is not about that.

The Thesis - Simply, that there is an emerging rightness and ripeness for the consideration of forms of direct action protest and witness aimed at racism in the southern part of Africa by American organizations concerned for these issues in this country.

In Substantiation - Following are random observations and thoughts which prompt my own growing concern:

1. The present crisis in Southern Rhodesia extends one of the first "handles" whereby the whole apartheid complex can be taken ahold. Having been joined there, it seems unlikely that the issue of world concern over apartheid will return to the impasse which generally obtained vis-a-vis South Africa up until now.

2. Racist forces in this country are mobilizing at a faster rate, it would appear, in their defense of UDI in Southern Rhodesia, than are liberal forces accelerating such interest and activity as they have maintained all along. Full-page ads have been appearing of late in newspapers defending the Ian Smith regime against criticism.

3. There is an integral connection between what is happening, and what may happen, with reference to apartheid, and the mood and future of race relations in this country. Imagine, for instance, that Britain is not able to significantly alter the racist trends in Southern Rhodesia (whether or not any compromise plan is effected) and greater Chinese Communist activity develops in that country. In the event of some eventual revolutionary move under such circumstances, the United States would create serious problems at home (adding to the polarization already engendered by Watts and subsequent comparable situations) if she remained neutral, and even more serious repercussions would ensue if we threw our support to what would be touted as a beleagured white minority.

4. It seems right and inevitable to me that forces of good concerned for racial justice in this country should follow-through with an investment of time, money and effort in the southern Africa situation. That the Republic of South Africa is a separate and independent nation (not obligated to respect our Supreme Court!) offers only a tactical difference for our consideration when compared to emerging interest in this country with the sometime sovereign State of Mississippi that culminated in the Freedom Rides of 1961. Higher laws and commitments bind us to a momemtum that ultimately carries the same message to South Africa irrespective of the fact that there may be little security or relief available from a Federal Judiciary.

5. The ripeness for greater American involvement in Southern Rhodesia and South Africa is to be traced both to the situation as emerging there, as well as to our own domestic situation. Concerning the latter, we know full well that the state of race relations in this country is precarious, in spite of legislation and government initiative in various programs. Some will say there is too much to do here; but we have never operated in the Civil Rights Movement on the assumption that one problem must be settled before another is raised. All issues, ultimately, are dealt with concurrently. I think an argument could be made for an internal necessity, in terms of our domestic well-being, for American initiative against apartheid.

6. Within the council of nations we had best, both officially and unofficially, begin to show commensurate concern for the spread of "international racism" as we have well-demonstrated for the spread of "international communism". Any integrity in our commitments against Communism in Southeast Asia will be, in part, validated by equal concern for the more destructive tyranny of racism.

7. We cannot start too soon to educate and sensitize the American public to the evils of apartheid, nor should the task be underestimated. I believe that English-speaking ties and the like, causing many Americans to feel a "kith and kin" regard for the industrious white South African, give us an enormous task in terms of simply eliciting sympathy and support for the oppressed in South Africa. We take it too much in stride that several thousands in South Africa are in prison or under house arrest for their criticism of governmental policies. Our feeling of detachment has too many similiarities to our neutrality in the early days of Hitler's purge of Jews. All of this suggests that a first goal in any action is to develop more American concern.

A Proposal - So much for various things that undergird my thesis, and I am the first to acknowledge that I am a novice and learner with regard to the southern Africa situation. Groups such as the American Committee on Africa are the informed agencies which have long-since committed themselves to greater American initiative, and especially with reference to U. S. policies and American business interests. For what it is worth, though, I add here the proposal that a coalition of secular and religious agencies consider the sponsoring of the equivalent of a "Freedom Ride" to South Africa. A carefully planned, and responsibly executed, "Sail-In", bearing documents of our official American commitments to an open and integrated society, would seem a viable and highly symbolic way of conveying our message of concern to South Africa and, more importantly, of alerting citizens back home to this remaining frontier of racism. Would we sail from here, or begin further up the African coast or, indeed, have a delegation go by some other means? I don't know. These are the questions that a representative group could determine. The issue at hand, as I see it, is to devise a sufficient way of showing that we care: for the sake of support for internal resistance in South Africa, and to mobilize American sentiment more and more against the system of apartheid. A crack-pot idea? Yes, at first glance at least. But of such ideas have new movements and combinations of power started. Whatever the form, it is time for action by those of us who have the freedom to act.

CHURCH ORGANIZATION TO PROTEST SOUTH AFRICA RACIST POLICIES AT GENERAL MOTORS SHAREHOLDERS MEETING IN DETROIT. ADOPT EQUAL EMPLOYMENT POLICIES THERE OR PULL OUT

When the shareholders of General Motors Corporation meet in Detroit's Cobo Hall on Friday, May 20th, they will be asked by a representative of an Episcopal Church organization to consider the adoption of equal employment policies at GM's South African plants or the possible withdrawal of investments in that country.

The Atlanta-based Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity, which owns five shares of GM stock, is sending its former national President, the Rev. Joseph A. Pelham, to represent it at the shareholders' meeting. Mr. Pelham is Rector of Trinity Episcopal Church in Farmington, Michigan.

In Atlanta, ESCRU's Executive Director, the Rev. John B. Morris, said that this would be the first time such a concern has been raised in a stockholders meeting of American corporations that are heavily invested in South Africa. "It is inevitable and right that Civil Rights forces here begin to question American firms about their racial policies abroad", said Mr. Morris, "and I predict that this will only be the beginning of pressure on U. S. industry to cease and desist from its partnership with racism in South Africa."

From Detroit, the Rev. Mr. Pelham has indicated that other ESCRU members who individually own stock in GM are planning to attend the meeting to lend him support if it is necessary.

In its Annual Report, General Motors lists "General Motors South African Limited" as its subsidiary, with a plant at Port Elizabeth manufacturing Chevrolet, Vauxhall and Opel passenger cars, as well as Frigidaire and other products.

(Mr. Pelham's full statement is attached)

OVER

A QUESTION CONCERNING THE CORPORATE POLICIES & PRACTICES OF GENERAL MOTORS CORP.

To Be Submitted at the Meeting of GM Shareholders

Detroit, Michigan, May 20th

I am authorized by the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity, which has headquarters in Atlanta, Ga., and which is the owner of five shares of General Motors stock, to inquire into the Company's intentions and plans in the Republic of South Africa, where we have extensive interests, insofar as the racial policies and practices at assembly and other plants are concerned. We are strongly persuaded that General Motors, as well as other American firms doing business in South Africa, must utilize the same equal employment policies in that country as we are required to observe in this country. We feel that the company is obligated morally, if not legally, to use this and every other opportunity available in its dealings in South Africa to foster that spirit of racial justice and democracy which, ultimately, is the only basis for a sound and secure economy; and which reflects a higher law under which we all stand subject. We feel that the company, if it is not able to observe the same employment standards in South Africa which we follow here, must begin to consider the withdrawal of operations from that country; divesting itself of all interests which are in any way implicated in the apartheid and racist traditions of the government of South Africa. With this background of concern, then, Mr. Chairman, my question is: What kind of racial policies now constitute the Company's basis of operations in South Africa, and what changes do you forsee for these in the future?

- The Rev. Joseph A. Pelham*

(* - Mr. Pelham has been provided the proxy form sent to ESCRU, together with a further proxy authorizing him to speak and vote in behalf of ESCRU.)

The Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

THE PURPOSE of this Society shall be to encourage men to respond positively to God's call for unity in the Church. The unity of God with man, and man with man, is made by God in Baptism and Holy Communion. We commit ourselves to establish total participation in the Church for all persons without regard to race, class, or national origin; to give mutual support to all who act in this ministry of reconciliation; and to express this concern at parish levels and in a more creative witness throughout the community at large.

THE EPISCOPAL SOCIETY FOR CULTURAL AND RACIAL UNITY
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

IN FAITHFULNESS to Jesus Christ, Who values all men equally, and Who prayed that all might be One in Him, and in understanding of the essential unity of the Church, the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity affirms the unity in His Body of all persons without any distinction as to race, color, national origin or class. In accord with the councils of the Church, we affirm that any form of segregation or separation based on such distinctions in either the Church or the general community is contrary to the will of Christ and must be resisted by His Church and its members.

WE CONFESS OUR FAILURE to seek steadfastly this unity of persons and we penitently admit to prejudices which may separate us from brothers. Praying daily that the Church may be rid of all divisions based on race, color, national origin or class, and that a more just social order be established, the members of the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity will work toward this end within the Church and their communities as they are individually and corporately able. They constitute this Society as a sign of their commitment and as a means of resource to the Church, and they invite other Churchmen to join them in its objectives, which are to seek:

1. A recognition that our responsibility lies with all persons in a given geographical area and is concerned with drawing these persons into full fellowship through Baptism and Holy Communion within that one parish unit.

2. Mutual support amongst this society for all clergy and laity who, in seeking total participation in parish life for all, find themselves at odds with accepted social mores.

3. Increased acceptance and implementation of the principle that the Church is an inclusive fellowship which seeks out and welcomes all persons into the worship and parish life of any congregation without distinction as to race, color, national origin or class.

4. Elimination of criteria based on race, color, national origin or class for applicants to Church camps, conferences, schools, colleges, hospitals, or other institutions or agencies which the Church may operate or sponsor in any way.

5. Understanding of the prophetic role of the Church, both through corporate and individual effort, in seeking the elimination of racial and other prejudicial barriers in society, whether these be erected by governmental process or through custom.

6. That condition of harmony among peoples which is the benefit of a mutual recognition of the Lordship of Jesus Christ, so that brothers may dwell together in unity and see Him so lifted up that He will draw all men unto Him.

If you agree with this Statement, take your stand with over five thousand others and use the attached form to join. If there is a Chapter of the Society where you live, you will be informed about local activities. Whether you are active in a Chapter or not, your membership in ESCRU makes you part of a growing fellowship of Churchmen who are ready to move beyond words into the concrete implementation of these objectives. You must decide what you can do where you are.

Whitsunday NEWSLETTER May 29, 1966

6TH ANNUAL MEETING SET FOR NEW YORK CITY IN FALL. JAMES FARMER TO SPEAK. WILL FOCUS ON NORTHERN CITY

Dr. Pettigrew

Mr. Farmer

Fr. Harmon

ESCRU's Role & Future To Be Evaluated

The former head of CORE, James Farmer, will address the 6th Annual Meeting of ESCRU which convenes in New York, November 10-13, with sessions to be held at the Cathedral, St. Philip's, and St. Martin's. Also speaking will be Father John Harmon of Packard Manse in Boston, and Dr. Thomas F. Pettigrew of Harvard's Department of Social Relations. The Rev. Gladstone Ntlabati of South Africa will tell about apartheid, and the Rev. Frs. Arthur Walmsley and Quinland Gordon will participate in the session evaluating the Church's witness in the racial revolution. Other speakers and resource personnel will be reported later when hotel information is sent. There will be a free evening for seeing the city, but with summer just passed there will be much to consider together. Make your plans now to attend. More information in September.

NOMINATING COMMITTEE APPOINTED

Eight positions on ESCRU's national Board of Directors are to be filled by a process of mail balloting by members in the 8 stateside Provinces of the Church. President Peabody has appointed Mr. Everett Bell of Houston to chair the committee which will prepare the ballot. Send suggestions to him for the Director from your province. (Cont. page 8)

ACLU/ESCRU ALABAMA SUIT WON

Several days after Jon Daniels was shot last August, the American Civil Liberties Union filed a case in Federal Court against the Jury Commissioners of Lowndes County where, subsequently, an all white jury acquitted Jon's murderer. ESCRU and its staff joined the suit shortly thereafter. In February the Court ruled that the jury rolls must be made to reflect the county's population, which is preponderantly Negro, and, further, that Alabama's exclusion of women from juries is unconstitutional.

NORTH CAROLINA PRIEST TO JOIN ESCRU STAFF

The Rev. David B. Nickerson, Vicar of St. Titus' in Durham will move to Atlanta in July to become Director of ESCRU's Southern Field Service program, the position previously held by the Rev. Henri Stines. Fr. Nickerson is originally from Florida and did his seminary work at Crozer and the General Seminary. Before going to Durham he served on the staff of St. Andrew's Church, Wilmington, Del., and prior to that he was in the ministry of the Methodist Church. His position with ESCRU, which is funded by a grant from the Field Foundation, will involve him in the Civil Rights Movement in the South and in various ecumenical efforts at reconciliation.

CHAPTERS MOBILIZE FOR SEATTLE

To support the proposals for reforms in the General Convention structure & procedure, detailed in a letter to all members March 18th, ESCRU Chapters have begun to work on the election of effective Deputies to represent their diocese at the Church's triennial convention in Seattle scheduled for the fall of 1967. Washington ESCRU worked quietly behind the scenes before and after their diocesan convention to successfully elect deputies sympathetic to the proposals. Newark ESCRU asked potential deputies their views and (Cont. page 8)

ESCRU GOES TO STOCKHOLDERS MEETING

In the first action of its kind, the Society's former President, the Rev. Joseph Pelham, will represent 5 shares of General Motors stock recently given ESCRU when their shareholders meet on May 20th, at which time he will inquire into the firm's intentions concerning Equal Employment policies in South Africa where it has extensive interests.

BRETHREN—dwell together in unity

LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE MOBILIZES

The Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, a coalition of religious and secular groups which was the primary source of support for the Civil Rights Bills of 1964 and 1965, met on May 5th to map out strategy for support of the President's recently introduced legislation on housing, jury reforms, and protection for civil rights workers. Fr. Henri Stines was there in behalf of ESCRU, which has been a part of the Conference for several years. Executive Council recently became an official participant, having been informally represented heretofore. Write your Congressman now in support of the new bill, and be ready for other efforts which may need your help - as in 1964 when Executive Council staff worked so effectively in mobilizing Churchmen to support new legislation.

STEWARDSHIP OF CHURCH FUNDS NEEDS SCRUTINY

ESCRU Board members and local chapter chairmen are to receive a packet of materials from Associate Director Dreisbach concerning "Church Investments and the Need for a More Responsible Stewardship." Ranging from a sheet on American investments in South Africa to descriptive data on the Interfaith Housing Corporation in Boston, which is headed up by ESCRU President Peabody, the packet is intended to help ESCRU Chapters and others raise questions with diocesan trustees, the Church Pension Fund, etc., regarding the investment of Church funds. A two-fold theory is operative: we should not continue to patronize and invest in firms which contribute to the maintenance of segregation (or, in South Africa, apartheid); while, on the other hand, there are increasing opportunities in investments for the Church to support and be the advocate of worthy undertakings, as in the field of housing.

SUPREME COURT WILL HEAR APPEAL OF ESCRU CASE

The U. S. Supreme Court has announced it will hear arguments in the appeal by four priests arrested in Jackson, Miss., in 1961, while on the Prayer Pilgrimage. After being acquitted, Frs. Pierson, Jones, Breeden and Morris, brought suit against the arresting officers and the judge. While finding in their favor on certain counts, the 5th Circuit struck the judge from the case and weighed the intentions of the clergy insofar as the legitimacy of their suit went. The American Civil Liberties Union became interested in the case and is working cooperatively with our attorney, Carl Rachlin (Chief Counsel for CORE), who, in turn, is ably assisted by Frederick A. O. Schwarz, Jr. It is anticipated that the case will come before the Court in the fall.

CURRICULUM STUDY HELP WANTED

Is there an educator in the membership who would do a study of Church School curriculum materials and how they affect racial attitudes for good or bad which we would publish? The Seabury Series and Morehouse publications would be included, as well as other series. Write the national office if you have experience in this field and believe that Church School is or can be important.

Bishop Myers and Fr. Gracie Discuss Northern Walkout

By THE RT. REV. C. KILMER MYERS
Suffragan Bishop

IT IS COMMONPLACE to say these days that the Church must seek new ways to minister relevantly in the inner city. This is especially true of the inner city parish. No longer may the parish situated in the deprived areas of our great cities ignore the crying needs of the communities and human beings in which they stand.

BISHOP MYERS

It is in recognition of this search for new ways that St. Joseph's Church, headed by the Reverend David M. Gracie, opened its doors to students of Northern High School. In this situation the only way the Church could show relevant interest was to identify itself with the issues which concerned the boycotting students. Very often a parish like St. Joseph's needs a "handle" which will enable it to "get into" the community. Usually such a handle is an issue which is of deep concern to the people, young and old, who live there. Father Gracie was sensitive to his neighborhood's needs and he therefore made himself available to a community in deep travail. I might add that he did this with my full approval as district head.

Obviously the school situation in Detroit, as in other great cities, is complicated. But one facet of the problem is clear: schools predominantly Negro in constituency generally are inferior as academic institutions when compared to schools in white urban areas and in the suburbs Everyone recognizes this.

Related to this is another disturbing fact: Negro parents generally play no role in up-grading their schools It is not that they avoid such a role. They are quite literally shut out of policy-making levels. This is not true in most other communities in which the opinions of organized parental groups are heeded and often acted upon by school authorities. Negroes in general have few ways to get through to policy-making groups either in education or other levels of metropolitan life. The only method open to them is that of direct, militant and organized action.

This was the situation at Northern High School as it attempted through its student leadership to meet the crisis in Negro education. Demonstrations, boycotts, parades are among the ways open to human beings with darker skins in our cities from North to South. The Church, located in the inner city, realizes this with increasing frequency. Very often such identification is not understood in human communities where access to civic and education authorities is more readily available.

Education is related to the process by which human beings reach their fullest capacity as humans. The Church which upholds the Incarnation — God coming among us as man — is concerned with the matter of humanness. This is central to its Gospel. It raises the questions: How may life become more human and how may the Church by its active posture help bring about the re-unification of the human race?

This was the primary reason for St. Joseph's involvement in the Northern High School controversy. We all should be grateful for the sensitive young minister who is the rector of that parish and for its vestry and parishioners who gave him support. I, as bishop in charge of the District, look upon the events of the past two weeks as still another indication of our Church's realistic identification with the issues of the inner city.

THE CHURCH AND RACE FUND

We continue to support giving by Episcopalians to Executive Council's "Church & Race Fund" as allocations from this source have always been to worthy causes. However, we should not be content to see the fund left as it is. Out of a total of $100,950. in grants in 1965, $64,000. went toward the Episcopal Church's contribution to the Delta Ministry and the Commission on Religion & Race of the National Council of Churches. Both agencies rightly deserve to be in the Episcopal Church's own national budget. As it is, our support of these ecumenical projects is on a voluntary basis. Even the money required for the promotion of the Fund derives from voluntary contributions, so that the Bishop of Alabama is quite correct if he chooses to tell his people that not one cent of their money goes toward NCC racial projects. The Department of Extension of the Diocese of Iowa, on the other hand, is on record to encourage the General Convention in 1967 to add the Church and Race Fund to the budget of the national Church. While there may always be need of a voluntary fund to supplement official commitments, it is clear that the Episcopal Church does not yet see the racial crisis as important budgetarily as numerous other programs which merit steady and annual support. Furthermore, Churchmen should demand of the Fund a degree of fearlessness it has not always shown, and all the moreso since it is voluntarily solicited. There is no indication that the Diocese of Alabama is throwing its weight behind the Fund because the Fund has thus far declined to make a grant to the Selma Interreligious Project, an ecumenical venture staffed by an Episcopal priest and officially supported by a number of other Church bodies.

ATTEND THE 6TH ANNUAL MEETING IN NEW YORK CITY

RACISM IN SOUTHERN AFRICA

ESCRU stands committed by Board action to send a representative to visit southern Africa as a witness to our concern for the growth of racist policies if funds are secured for this purpose. Such an expedition would, also, chiefly serve to inform us back home on conditions in South Africa and in Southern Rhodesia and to establish contacts there. A flyer is enclosed which seeks "Aid (for) Victims of South Africa's Racism". It is from the American Committee on Africa, an organization well-deserving of support by Churchmen. Exploring still other ways in which Americans might demonstrate concern for apartheid, ESCRU's Executive Director recently sent a memorandum to key civil rights leaders in this country proposing new forms of direct action against segregation in the southern part of Africa, including the possibility of something akin to the Freedom Rides. A copy of this memo will be sent on request. Ideas and reactions are invited.

LOS ANGELES CHAPTER OF ESCRU SPONSORS TUTORIAL PROGRAM IN WATTS AREA

HERE AND THERE

With Bishop Stokes heading the effort, a Protestant Commission on Church and Race has been launched in Massachusetts to coordinate efforts of various churches concerned for justice and racial harmony. Staff for the combined effort will, presumably, obviate the re-staffing of the diocese's position previously held by ESCRU Vice-President, Fr. James P. Breeden, a factor which some ESCRU people are not enthusiastic about, but a wait-and-see attitude seems to prevail.....The Episcopal Church on the coast in the Old South continues to concentrate on garden and home tours, with St. Michael's, Charleston, going in for visits to old plantations. A newspaper account featured a photo of "the slave cabin row, which has been remodeled into guest houses...." .....In Jack Mendelsohn's The Martyrs (New York: Harper and Row, 1966) there is an account of how the news of Jonathan Daniels' death was received at Saint Paul's, Selma, where the Rector then denied permission for a memorial eucharist to be celebrated..... And further on books, ESCRU Field Representative Malcolm Boyd's Are You Running With Me, Jesus? drew the weekday review in THE NEW YORK TIMES, a rare tribute to a "religious" book, by the reviewer's own admission.....In Washington, Bishop Paul Moore came under heavy fire from conservative laymen for his outspoken stand in favor of Home Rule for the District of Columbia. The ESCRU Chapter issued a statement in his defense.....And across the river, twelve years after the Supreme Court's school desegregation decision, Episcopal High School "has quietly decided to desegregate", according to the Washington Post and earlier reports from the Northern Virginia Chapter of ESCRU. The Headmaster of EHS, which is presided over by Bishop Gibson & which lies adjacent to the Virginia Seminary, pointed out that there may be no Negro pupils since none have applied. Presumably this is partly because the decision to desegregate "was not made public at the time", according to the Post.....A right-wing periodical, THE CROSS AND THE FLAG, has advised Episcopalians unhappy with the "liberalism, Communism, mongrelization and skepticism" of their Church to contact James P. Dees, a former priest who is now "Bishop" of the so-called Anglican Orthodox Church. A lay leader of this sect in St. Louis recently quit when Dees reprimanded him for saying there were no racial bars to membership in the new group.

FREEDOM SCHOOL AT CHURCH

Charging inferior standards at Negro schools and in protest over the suppression of an editorial that was to have appeared in the student paper on the subject, over one thousand students of a high school in Detroit stayed away from classes. They went, instead, to "freedom school" classes set up at four local churches, including two Episcopal parishes - St. Joseph's and Grace. The former was the headquarters of much of the protest activity, causing the DETROIT NEWS to say that the school system could not be run "from the sidewalks, or from a nearby church rectory."

SURVEY OF INSTITUTIONS

ESCRU's survey of Church and Church-related institutions may never result in a comprehensive report, but it has caused innumerable schools, homes and hospitals, etc., to examine their present racial policies and, in some instances, take steps to implement their stated position. Because the situation has been so fluid since the survey was started two years ago, and because the data is incomplete in some areas, it will probably be best not to attempt publication. The greatest service has already been rendered in the asking of questions of these institutions, causing the issue of racial makeup to be raised before trustees, vestries and boards. Interesting tendencies were noted in the response to our inquiries, such as the fact that Northern Church-related institutions generally responded readily, as contrasted with a general reluctance or refusal on the part of facilities in the South to discuss their racial policies or makeup. Some of the latter, however, acknowledged they were segregated, although in instances where this is suspected we usually did not get a reply to repeated letters. Atlanta's Church-related Lovett School wrote finally indicating they were still segregated, although the Headmaster would prefer it not be so. Lovett's Baccalaureate Service this year will again be held at the Diocese of Atlanta's cathedral, the scene of picketing by local members of ESCRU last year. In the Diocese of Southwest Virginia, Boys Home, Inc., at Covington, presumably remains segregated since it remains probably the only institution having the designation "white" to appear in the 1966 Episcopal Church Annual. The results of our survey suggest that there are many more Church facilities which remain segregated by design and more than a few which desperately hope not to become the object of attention by Negro Churchmen.

OTHER REPORTS PENDING

ESCRU Director Karl Nordling will visit Alabama soon for fact-finding in preparation for writing ESCRU's "Special Report" on conditions in the Church there, as called for by January's Board meeting.....ESCRU's Vice-President, Fr. James P. Breeden, has been meeting with New York area clergy for consultation on a "Special Report" on clergy placement. Consideration is being given to further "haunting" of the House of Bishops on this subject when they meet in West Virginia in the fall, as when the six priests from ESCRU went to their meeting in Montana last year.

PARISH SPONSORS MARCHES DURING LENT

Witnessing to cultural and racial unity, and to protest job discrimination by utility companies in St. Louis, about 100 persons walked silently each Sunday afternoon during Lent past the company headquarters, with periodic pauses for prayer. Led by a huge wooden cross, the marchers were under the direction of St. Stephen's Church, which gave them the name of "Jericho Marches", recalling the account in Joshua 6:1-21.

Commenting on the marches, William Matheus, parish worker at St. Stephen's, said: "...people who had opposed the marches gradually became fascinated with the idea and were stirred by the commitment and dedication of those who plodded along Sunday after Sunday....things have not settled down yet, nor will they ever be the same again."

AROUND THE CHURCH

Kentucky has just adopted a Civil Rights Bill considered stronger than Federal legislation. Adoption was pushed by the Dean of the Cathedral in Louisville, the Rev. Robert W. Estill, who serves as Chairman of the state Commission on Human Rights. We'll send a brochure on the new laws on request. .....Savannah's "St. John's Church", which pulled out of Episcopal ranks last year rather than admit Negroes to services, has called a Methodist minister from Beaufort, S.C., to be associate rector... ....The Diocese of Washington called on its vestries and bishops to call and appoint clergy "on the basis of merit"; and in Los Angeles, Bishop Bloy did appoint the Rev. Atwell Stewart vicar of St. Mary's, Imperial Beach, succeeding the Rev. Frederick Fenton, Chairman of San Diego ESCRU, who has moved to the parish at Chula Vista. St. Mary's is predominantly white, while Fr. Stewart is of Negro ancestry.....The Diocese of South Carolina will desegregate its summer camps, but at the request of the Bishop will open them on an "all-boy, all-girl" basis.....Bishop West of Florida has refused to license ESCRU Director Fr. Robert Hampshire who is now teaching at a Negro college at St. Augustine where he had earlier participated in demonstrations sponsored by SCLC.

THE DELTA MINISTRY: AN OASIS

Seldom in the annals of Church History have various Church groups cooperated on so significant and pioneering an effort as the Delta Ministry. A flyer is enclosed on Freedom City, an exciting, bold idea to which DM is closely related. Stemming from the Hattiesburg Ministers' Project, which we helped to launch, and the ensuing Summer Project of 1964, the Delta Ministry's Chairman is former ESCRU Director Bishop Paul Moore, who has had to absorb a certain amount of abuse for his defense of DM in times of great criticism. Other Churchmen are working directly on the scene with DM, including Patricia Mutch, a former member of NYC ESCRU's Steering Committee. If you haven't already, we suggest you send DM an annual contribution and ask them to add you to mailing list.

JONATHAN DANIELS HONORED POSTHUMOUSLY

Former Presiding Bishop Arthur Lichtenberger and Mrs. Philip Daniels look at the "Bishop Lichtenberger Human Rights Award" cross just presented Mrs. Daniels by ESCRU's Executive Director on behalf of the Chicago Chapter of the Society at a dinner on February 20th. Mrs. Daniels' response, on receiving the award for her son, Jonathan, was cited in full in a letter from Fr. Morris to all ESCRU members on March 30th. Two days later Mrs. Daniels attended another dinner in Chicago honoring Fr. Richard Morrisroe who was wounded at the same time Jon was killed in Hayneville, Alabama, last August 20th. The Catholic Interracial Council of Chicago gave its annual award to Father Morrisroe. Also during February the Episcopal Diocese of Los Angeles adopted a memorial express-thanksgiving for the life and witness of Jonathan Daniels. A similiar resolution before the Convention of the Diocese of Arizona also proposed that the Liturgical Commission consider the appointment of Propers for a day to honor Jonathan, but this motion was tabled. Elsewhere preparations are being made for publication of a book on Jonathan, which will also contain some of his writings.

ROSTER OF CHAPTER CHAIRMEN

At the local level ESCRU is at work through 28 chapters spread across the country. Since we have not issued a Directory of such personnel for some time, the names & addresses of the heads of these local units are provided here. Members who have moved should advise the Chairman of their arrival so that they will be informed about local meetings and activities. Also, it is helpful to the well-being of the organization if local units will share their newsletters, etc., with chapters elsewhere.....

The Presiding Bishop's 1963 Whitsuntide Message

Recent events in a number of American communities—Birmingham, Chicago, Nashville, New York, and Raleigh, to mention only the most prominent—underscore the fact that countless citizens have lost patience with the slow pace of response to their legitimate cry for human rights. Pleas of moderation or caution about timing on the part of white leaders are seen increasingly as an unwillingness to face the truth about the appalling injustice which more than a tenth of our citizens suffer daily. While we are thankful for the progress that has been made, this is not enough.

Our Church's position on racial inclusiveness within its own body and its responsibility for racial justice in society has been made clear on many occasions by the General Convention. But there is urgent need to demonstrate by specific actions what God has laid upon us. Such actions must move beyond expressions of corporate penitence for our failures to an unmistakable identification of the Church, at all levels of its life, with those who are victims of oppression.

I think of the words we sing as we hail the ascended Christ, "Lord and the ruler of all men," and of our prayers at Whitsuntide as we ask God to work His will in us through His Holy Spirit. And then in contrast to our praises and our prayers our failure to put ourselves at the disposal of the Holy Spirit becomes painfully clear. Only as we take every step possible to join with each other across lines of racial separation in a common struggle for justice will our unity in the Spirit become a present reality.

It is not enough for the Church to exhort men to be good. Men, women and children are today risking their livelihood and their lives in protesting for their rights. We must support and strengthen their protest in every way possible, rather than give support to the forces of resistance by our silence. It should be a cause of rejoicing to the Christian community that Negro Americans and oppressed peoples everywhere are displaying a heightened sense of human dignity in their refusal to accept second-class citizenship any longer.

The right to vote, to eat a hamburger where you want, to have a decent job, to live in a house fit for habitation: these are not rights to be litigated or negotiated. It is our shame that demonstrations must be carried out to win them. These constitutional rights belong to the Negro as to the white, because we are all men and we are all citizens. The white man needs to recognize this if he is to preserve his own humanity. It is a mark of the inversion of values in our society that those who today struggle to make the American experiment a reality through their protest are accused of disturbing the peace—and that more often than not the Church remains silent on this, our greatest domestic moral crisis.

I commend these specific measures to your attention:

1) I would ask you to involve yourselves. The crisis in communities North and South in such matters as housing, employment, public accommodations, and schools is steadily mounting. It is the duty of every Christian citizen to know fully what is happening in his own community, and actively to support efforts to meet the problems he encounters.

2) I would also ask you to give money as an expression of our unity and as a sign of our support for the end of racial injustice in this land. The struggle of Negro Americans for their rights is costly, both in terms of personal sacrifice and of money, and they need help.

3) I would ask you to take action. Discrimination within the Body of the Church itself is an intolerable scandal. Every congregation has a continuing need to examine its own life and to renew those efforts necessary to insure its inclusiveness fully. Diocesan and church-related agencies, schools, and other institutions also have a considerable distance to go in bringing their practices up to the standard of the clear position of the Church on race. I call attention to the firm action of the recent Convention of the Diocese of Washington which directed all diocesan-related institutions to eliminate any discriminatory practices within six months. It further requested the Bishop and Executive Council to take steps necessary to disassociate such diocesan and parish-related institutions from moral or financial support if these practices are not eliminated in the specified time. I believe we must make known where we stand unmistakably.

So I write with a deep sense of the urgency of the racial crisis in our country and the necessity for the Church to act. Present events reveal the possible imminence of catastrophe. The entire Christian community must pray and act.

A Call To Witness

On May 17, 1964, we observe the tenth anniversary of the historic Supreme Court decision on school desegregation. At the same time the Church marks the Day of Pentecost or Whitsunday, commemorating the outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon Christ's followers who were gathered "all with one accord in one place." As a nation we look back on ten years that were too long in coming, conscious of how much further we have to go in implementation of the spirit of the Court's decision. As Churchmen we look back through the ages to our original wholeness and oneness in Christ, penitently aware of the departures we have taken from the unfragmented Body of Christ which was filled with power on Pentecost and overcame all barriers of tongue and race. From the past we turn to the present and future and know that God is calling us both as citizens and Churchmen to take bold steps that will witness to our unity in Him while there is yet time.

In Whitsuntide of last year the Presiding Bishop said: "Discrimination within the Body of the Church itself is an intolerable scandal. Every congregation has a continuing need to examine its own life and to renew those efforts necessary to insure its inclusiveness fully." He called upon Churchmen to take action for this. Now, on Whitsunday of 1964, there is no more appropriate time for action that will witness to and call forth the unity of all men in Christ. Let the Church be renewed and stand as a beacon to guide a perplexed nation. Let the Faithful in Christ Jesus come together each Sunday with one accord in one place, so that it can no longer be said to be the most segregated hour of the week. Let us put aside our old patterns of "separate-but-equal" congregations and so live together that it will be said: "Behold, how good and joyful a thing it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" Let this begin with the witness of each Churchman who hears and responds to this call.

The Board of Directors of the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity, having duly met in Atlanta, Georgia, on February 2-4, 1964, calls upon all Churchmen, and especially those who are members of the Society, to examine their situation to determine whether they may witness to the wholeness of the Church on Whitsunday of 1964, and thereafter, by transferring from their present parish to one where the members are predominantly of another color. We rejoice in those few congregations which already reveal the richness of God's handiwork and light the way for the rest of us.

We believe that the inclusiveness of the Church must be demonstrated by both Negro Churchmen transferring to predominantly white parishes, as well as by white Churchmen transferring to predominantly Negro parishes, but we would lay special emphasis on the latter. For too long have we expected the Negro alone to take the initiative. Because the Church is the People of God, and not the house in which they dwell, each congregation is equally important and intended to be inclusive of all persons. It has been necessary for the Negro American to lead the nation into freedom through his entry into places from which he was previously excluded. Now, let white Christians demonstrate their commitment by joining in minority status with Negro Churchmen. Neither may say he has no need of the other.

Let each witness as he is able and persuaded, all for the Glory of God. Let the Church in the cities rejoice in the witness and corporately march in solemn procession to accompany those who will transfer parishes. Let Whitsunday of 1964 more nearly find the people "all with one accord in one place." Let brothers dwell together in unity and see Him so lifted up that He will draw all men unto Him.

EPISCOPAL HIGH SCHOOL, ALEXANDRIA, VA.

HEADMASTER OUTLINES ADMISSIONS POLICY

For the Sunday Program of January 30, the Headmaster gave a talk on the admission policy of the High School regarding integration. He reviewed Episcopal's past experiences with the racial question and presented the present school position as expressed in the unanimous statement by the Board of Trustees issued at their December meeting.

Mr. Thomsen spoke on what he termed "a question that is of utmost importance to the High School and its supporters." He noted that for years many Old Boys had expressed concern over recent trends regarding integration. After reading a letter expressing such concern, he remarked that all should realize that a positive stance would be most beneficial to Episcopal. He observed that he would personally have reservations concerning the admission of a Negro for it would manifest, under present conditions, difficult problems of social adjustment to both the School and the Negro, but that E.H.S. should be prepared to accept all qualified candidates who seek admission.

Mr. Thomsen cited a number of instances in which the school profited by adopting a moderate racial stance, principally in the area of interscholastic athletics, and pointed out how attitudes have changed over the past years. Following this background, he read from the statement of the Board of Trustees:

"Any and all applicants for admission shall be considered on an equal basis after giving due regard to their scholastic preparedness and their ability and desire to meet the standards of the school. Special consideration shall be given to qualified applicants who are sons and close relatives of former students. The applicant's prospects for successful participation in the life of the school and the date of his application shall also be considered."

Mr. Thomsen stated that "the best interests of the school would be better served by accepting a clearly qualified Negro than by turning him down." He explained his belief as being a pragmatic one, not based just on right and wrong, but on the possible results of accepting or rejecting such a candidate.

The Headmaster then spoke of the consequences of such an acceptance. There would, of course, be a stream of protest from Old Boys, parents, and friends, but this would be counterbalanced as the school would be in accordance with conscience, the Episcopal Church, and the prevailing "law of the land." The Negro, if accepted, may not accept or attend only long enough to set the precedent. It would establish the willingness of the High School to integrate and would spare it the active opposition of the particularly active D.C. area civil rights groups.

On the positive side, the Headmaster spoke of how the cultural exchange between a Negro and E.H.S. boys would be an enlightening and socialy broadening experience since few Episcopal boys ever see the Negro in anything other than a subserviant capacity. Mr. Thomsen found this particularly valuable as the future Old Boys would occupy important positions in their respective communities in which the establishment and perpetuation of community relations would be an important task.

After reading a January 29th letter from an Old Boy concerning the Board statement, the Headmaster concluded by saying that the fears of the writer were unjustified in that there would be no active search for Negro candidates as is carried on by some Northern schools. The very lack of qualified Negro applicants and the corresponding adjustment problem they would have to face would militate against a colored student at Episcopal in the near future, but nevertheless, the school should be prepared to accept one.

MORE ON E.H.S.

Page 3, with its reference to Episcopal High School's change in admissions policy, was completed before we received the full account of Headmaster Thomsen's remarks, now reprinted to the left. They appeared in the school paper & epitomize the nature of "progress" oftentimes in the Church. How many other Church schools across the nation take the same position, but conceal it behind a facade of liberal protestation? That the number of Church-related schools in the South, started since 1954, greatly exceeds their growth elsewhere clearly reveals their correlation with the efforts of white Churchmen to escape integration in the public schools. Executive Council and the Episcopal School Association are not taking enough initiative to combat segregation in Church institutions. Each year makes the shame greater.

MOBILIZATION FOR SEATTLE (Cont. from page 1) and then wrote all delegates to diocesan convention and ESCRU members about the issues at stake. Write the Chapter Chairmen (See page 5) if you are trying to organize effectively in your diocese and ask for a detailed picture of how they did it. If you want further information or clarification on the proposals, write to Mrs. George Edwards, 19925 Briarcliff, Detroit, Mich., or the Rev. Gordon Jones, 306 North Division, Ann Arbor, Mich. Also, keep them advised of progress in your area for support of the reform measures. During the summer Bishop Sterling will begin efforts to enlist other groups and concerned persons throughout the Church under the banner of "Episcopalians for Effective Conventions". FLASH: Rhode Island ESCRU sponsored a move at convention in support of the reforms.

STATEMENT

June 2,1966

Emory University's President Atwood rightly affirms that God has not left his campus, for God is surely no more dead at this citadel of Methodism than He is in any of Atlanta's ecclesiastical structures. The problem at Emory is that they have a controlled deity Who is conveniently shunted aside when such decisions as allowing the Lovett School on campus are made. It is apparent that Emory officials are more responsive to the old guard of Atlanta's power structure, represented on the Lovett Board of Trustees, than they are to God's spokesmen on campus who have been protesting the use of Emory's Glenn Memorial Auditorium for two years.

When Lovett holds its Commencement Exercises at Emory this coming Monday evening, it will be in spite of the fact that a committee of faculty visited President Atwood two years ago to protest allowing this segregated private school on campus; and in spite of the fact that Emory faculty and students picketed the Commencement ceremonies at Glenn Memorial last year. At that time the clergy at Glenn Memorial said that University officials had made the decision to allow Lovett in, while this year the University claims the clergy are responsible. It is plain that neither group wants to offend Atlanta's old guard, which appears to have successfully bought off the institution, as they have bought off most of Atlanta's ecclesiastical institutions, with the exception of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese.

To look at the list of Lovett trustees is to view the old guard of Atlanta's power structure in its most distilled form. Atlanta's progress in race relations has been made in spite of this coterie of bankers, lawyers, sometime gubernatorial aspirants and businessmen. They have retreated in their racial views only enough to insure their continued economic well-being, but they still hold tenaciously to the old order wherever they can, as at the Lovett School. They keep their money, derived from Atlanta's otherwise progressive spirit, in an old-line trust company.

OVER

They spend it at an exclusive driving club which is so segregated that not even the Metropolitan Opera can break through. They send their children to Lovett. And they tip their hats to God at the Cathedral of St. Philip and other socially prominent churches.

It is clear that God is no more dead at Emory than He is in Atlanta's other Churches and Church-related institutions to which this old guard seems to hold title. It is not so certain what the future holds for our city so long as the core of our community's leadership is represented in such symbols as Lovett and its first cousins.

FAILURE OF JUSTICE DEPARTMENT PROTESTED

On August 20th, 1966, one year from when Jonathan Daniels was murdered in Hayneville, Alabama, ESCRU issued a statement protesting inaction by Justice Department officials in their investigation into the shooting. Though signed by heads of 16 groups, including major civil rights organizations, it was ignored by the Washington press where it was released. Citing reasons why they could have brought charges against Daniels' assailant, the statement said: "It is time for... (Federal officials)..to stop merely collecting reports.... and get on with the business of acting vigorously on the basis of existing laws." ESCRU's Executive Director and the Chairman of Washington ESCRU led some 35 members in picketing the Department of Justice on the afternoon of August 20th.

SELMA: NOT ENTIRELY FORGOTTEN

Miss Corine Bell, a high school senior from Selma, spent the summer in San Diego at the home of ESCRU Director Mary Eunice Oliver, whose two sons, Darrel and Marc are shown here with their guest. Marc stayed at the Bell's home in Selma last summer when he worked with Jon Daniels. Still on the scene in the Selma area is the Rev. Francis Walter who heads up the Selma Interreligious Project, for which ESCRU handles receipts & disbursements. We'll send upon request a complete Program Report on S.I.P. Like the Delta Ministry in Mississippi it represents a pioneering aspect of the Church's ministry.

BLACK POWER REVIEWED

In a supplement to this Newsletter ESCRU's Executive Director reflects on the slogans and directions taken by some civil rights groups. This also receives much attention in the most recent issue of NEW SOUTH, a quarterly from the Southern Regional Council. Available from ESCRU for $1.00. An article on "Racism in Southern Africa & American Initiative" by John Morris also appears therein.

SERVICE FOR LOVETT AT CATHEDRAL PROTESTED IN JUNE

On the night of June 1st this past summer the clergy serving Atlanta's two predominantly Negro congregations entered the Cathedral of St. Philip on Peachtree Road to remain there, fasting, through the Baccalaureate on Sunday evening, June 5th, for the Lovett School. Cathedral authorities let them remain inside where they were visited by numerous Atlantans concerned that the school still enjoyed the use of St. Philip's, notwithstanding its well-known policy of segregation. On Saturday, Fr. Robert Hunter, Rector of St. Paul's, and Fr. Kim Dreisbach, supply priest at the time at the Church of the Nativity and on the ESCRU staff, were visited by the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., whose son was the first Negro applicant rejected by Lovett. Mrs. King was with her husband who is shown below talking with the press outside St. Philip's. Seventy-five Atlanta Churchmen stood in silent vigil outside during the service Sunday evening. The end of the Lovett saga came 3 months later.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, Monday, Sept. 12, 1966

Lovett School to Admit Negroes, Ending Dispute

By BILL SHIPP

The Episcopal-oriented Lovett School, center of a segregation dispute for the past three and a half years, has announced it will accept Negro students beginning in 1967.

In a letter last week to parents of children in the private school, James M. Sibley, chairman of the private school's board of trustess, said that "subject to limitations of space and facilities, those applications deemed best qualified . . . will be admitted without regard to race or religion." Thus ended the school's long standing policy of accepting only white students.

"Some three or four years ago, your trustees took a position which was controversial but one which the board believed at the time to be in the best interest of the school," Sibley wrote. "Neither then nor now have we allowed our personal views, opinions or prejudice to interfere in any way with the action that we considered wise for the school."

Neither Sibley nor headmaster Rual Stephens were available for comment Sunday on the announced end of segregation at Lovett.

The Rev. John B. Morris, executive director of the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity (ESCRU), welcomed the news. The Rev. Mr. Morris' group, ESCRU, had led protests against the school's segregation policy.

"Their good faith will have to be demonstrated now in the extent to which integration is implemented in the school," the Rev. Mr. Morris said. "The acceptance of the principle of desegregation is the first step. It will require positive steps by Lovett now if qualified Negro students are to be attracted to the institution and provide it with an inclusiveness and wholeness which can best serve both the students and the community.

"ESCRU gladly lays aside its continuing protest of Lovett's former policy of segregation and joins with all persons of good will in hoping that we will see a speedy implementation of the new position," the Rev. Mr. Morris added.

Lovett's racial problems were touched off early in 1963 when the school refused to admit a child of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Later the school turned down applications of two other Negro children.

The Episcopal Church then severed some ties with the school, although Lovett remained an Episcopal - oriented institution.

The school was picketed often after that. Two Episcopal ministers, the Rev. Robert B. Hunter and the Rev. Albert Dreisback Jr., fasted for five days in June in the Cathedral of St. Philip last June to protest the holding of Lovett's baccalaureate service in the church.

Protesters later announced plans "to focus" on the business ties of the school's trustees.

ORCHIDS to the Church & Race Fund which gave $1000. to the Meredith March and recently sent through a grant of $2500. toward the support of the Selma Inter-religious Project. Now let's work to have the Fund made a part of the Church's official budget, or at least that part which supports the NCC Commission on Religion & Race. Voluntary contributions are not sufficient to meet the needs, nor is this approach an adequate expression of the Church's commitment.

HERE AND THERE

N. Hamner Cobbs of Greensboro, Alabama, is a member of the Joint Commission on Ecumenical Relations of the General Convention and serves as one of the Episcopal Church's delegates to the General Assembly of the NCC. He also imagines himself an authority on Negroes, for in a recent talk to the Rotary Club in Birmingham he said: "The humor of the Southern Negro is being destroyed by the civil rights people." He went on to advise the Rotarians and Negroes to "...retain all this humor that you can...", and he added his feeling that "this racial unrest will pass over." /// "TWO VESTRIES CONDEMN ALL SOULS" stated the headline in a Washington, D. C. newspaper reporting that the parish which had cut its diocesan support due to civil rights & home rule efforts of Bishop Paul Moore was coming in for criticism from other parishes in the area, some of which are raising funds to offset the loss. /// A recording of Dr. Martin Luther King's address to the ESCRU Dinner at the 1964 General Convention has been banned by the Government of South Africa. About 1,200 copies of the record were made from a tape still available from the ESCRU office at $3.00 each. // // Columbia Records has issued an album on "Are You Running With Me, Jesus?", the book by Malcolm Boyd of the ESCRU staff now in its 7th printing. /// In a letter to some fellow Bishops, not members of ESCRU, Bishop Cadigan of Missouri said of the Society: "....We need this kind of group within the fellowship to serve as our unsettlers and as frontiersmen in our times." Several joined, bringing the total of Bishops in ESCRU to 51 paid-up. /// Presiding Bishop Hines sent a telegram on May 16th to Congressman Celler. It opened with: "As an individual I strongly support the general principles embodied in House Bill H.R. 14765 concerning civil rights." Said Bill died in the Senate on September 19th for lack of adequate support. /// Newly formed: Association of Episcopal Clergy, 370 Alvin Dr., Salinas, California 94102, to investigate, mediate, and - if necessary - protest abuses suffered by clergy in the Church. If interested, write for information. /// The American Committee on Africa and the National Student Christian Federation have joined in an effort to encourage New Yorkers to withdraw accounts from the Chase Manhattan and National City Banks to protest their involvement with racism in South Africa. /// Fernandina Beach's (Florida) two Episcopal congregations seem to be moving successfully toward a fully integrated status. (See ESCRU Newsletter, 10/28/65.) /// In a different Southern diocese, though, (not deep South at that), the Bishop has advised the Rector to go slow with integration which has been moving along just fine. /// Yes! The "backlash" is hurting us financially, too. $$$ needed!

FITTING PARSONS TO PLACES: (And the reverse!) Let us know if you need a Rector; or, if you are one & want to move, we invite a letter. Periodic requests come both ways and we are sometimes helpful in putting folks together - interracially & otherwise. For instance, an integrated parish in a northern urban area needs a Rector: predominantly Negro, on moderate to low side in Churchmanship, near N.Y.C.

LEGISLATION: Killed by Senators Dirkson & Russell, and not too much pushed by Mansfield, the 1966 Bill also died for lack of sufficient support from all of the groups which turned out so well in 1964 to back new legislation. /// The Diocese of Maryland has called for repeal of that state's laws against intermarriage - an effort worthy of attention for its symbolic value as well as practical effect.

Congressman Fraser Urges Forceful Action to Bring Majority Rule to Rhodesia

Mr. FRASER. Mr. Speaker, in recent months, a small clique in the United States has been spreading the fiction that the unilateral declaration of independence proclaimed in Rhodesia on November 11, 1965, is akin to that of July 4, 1776. This is fiction because the Rhodesian declaration was made by a small, privileged minority seeking to perpetuate its position against the threat of democracy in its own country. This clique, which calls itself the Friends of Rhodesian Independence, throws up a smokescreen of false issues and absurd assumptions. In a way this is useful, since to answer we have to return to fundamentals, to the nature of our society and our ideals, to what the United States stands for and wants to stand for in the contemporary world.

The rebellion of Ian Smith, the leader of the Rhodesian rebels, was designed to perpetuate the control of a small racial minority over the vast majority of Rhodesian citizens. He leads an effort by 6 percent of the population to permanently control the other 94 percent. It is a distortion of history to equate this purpose with the ideals which inspired the American Revolution and the principles for which we have been striving throughout our history.

The Smith regime seized power to prevent Britain from granting a role in government to all the people in Rhodesia as she did in all her other former African colonies; we rebelled against George III because England sought to maintain her colonial control over us. The Smith government favors rule by a racial minority through policies aimed at excluding virtually all Africans; our history has been a struggle to secure equal rights for all races. The Smith regime refuses to provide education above the primary school level for a meaningful number of Africans; we have tried to provide full public education to all citizens.

Racial injustice is no stranger to the United States. For centuries we enslaved Americans of African ancestry. We fought a Civil War to end this abominable practice, but we have moved too slowly to allow our Negro citizens full participation in our society. We have broken treaties with the Indians, and we have shunted them to reservations which are inadequate to support them.

The opponents of majority rule in Rhodesia point to these injustices and say that they justify American support for the minority in Rhodesia. But we are not proud of that part of our history, and it would be shameful for us to side with a group of people who desire only to emulate our mistakes. We have made great strides in racial equality and an aroused American conscience demands even more. We shun minority rule at home, and we cannot stand for this position abroad.

Ian Smith, the leader of the Rhodesian whites, is not George Washington reborn. Smith is defending a system which has existed in Rhodesia since at least 1923. The majority of the Rhodesian population oppose Ian Smith and proclaim the principle of majority rule. The Africans of Rhodesia say to the world that they know their own interests better than anyone else knows them, and that anyone who claims for himself a right to make decisions for other adults is by that very fact demonstrating his incapacity for responsibility in a democratic world.

THE REAL STRUGGLE FOR INDEPENDENCE IN RHODESIA

The real struggle for independence in Rhodesia today is led by African nationalists against a privileged minority. That this privileged minority was able to seize de facto power because of the errors of the colonial power, Great Britain, does not make its case any stronger. The African nationalists of Rhodesia are struggling for their freedom, however ineffectual their struggle may now seem. They should, one hopes, eventuall win. We should do whatever we can to aid this struggle and to applaud its victories.

But one can hear the defenders of Ian Smith now. Does the United States want another Congo? Is not independent Africa one long series of coups, rebellions, and anarchy? Thus, it is argued, the bad state of postindependence Africa should warn us off our hasty and ill-advised support for African nationalist movements. But these arguments misread the state of postindependence Africa. And even if they did not, it is never an argument against the possession of freedom that it may be misused.

The struggle for freedom is never simple or cut and dried. The struggle for independence in African countries has been going on since 1945. It is not yet over. Africa is still in the middle of its revolution, and it is absurd to demand that all be peace and gentility. We in the United States had to fight a second war for independence in 1812 and fought a bloody and unhappy civil war among ourselves some 85 years after our independence. We know that stability and peace are never achieved easily or rapidly.

RHODESIA IS PART OF A LARGER STRUGGLE

We cannot understand what is going on in Rhodesia today unless we remember that it is part of a larger complex—that of southern Africa. Ian Smith is fighting for the rights of the privileged minority not only in Rhodesia but in Angola and Mozambique, in South Africa and South-West Africa. If these friends of Ian Smith talk of turmoil in independent Africa, it is to make us forget oppression in minority-ruled southern Africa. If they boast of the small crumbs they have thrown the majority Africans in education, health, and living standards, it is to make us forget the enormous discrepancy between the style of life of the minority who have privilege and the lives of the majority who must work for them. If they talk of the defense of order, it is to make us forget that this status quo is not based on the consent of the governed.

VIETNAM AND RHODESIA

Another part of the smokescreen is the claim that Ian Smith and his supporters are alined with us on Vietnam and in other struggles against communism. But our Government has emphatically stated that it is fighting in Vietnam to assure the right of the people to rule themselves. Our Government rejects the claim that anyone has the right to dictate a government for the Vietnamese; we believe the people should make their own choice in free elections. To be consistent with our position in Vietnam, we must support these principles in Rhodesia as well. If Ian Smith is so sure that he represents the best interests of Rhodesia, let him present himself before an electorate where all adults can vote. He will not do it, because he would stand no chance of being elected.

The United States stands for self-determination. We have stood for this principle throughout our history. Let us make it very clear that we stand for it in Rhodesia, that we support majority rule there—not because the majority is always right, but because there is no system of government better than that of majority rule.

AMERICAN OBJECTIVES IN SOUTHERN AFRICA

If we do believe in self-determination in Rhodesia, what then should the United States do? We must do more than we have done hitherto. We have been equivocal. We have not, to be sure, supported the actions of Ian Smith. We have even sought in cautious ways to help him to disappear into the remote recesses of history where he will eventually be lodged. But neither have we clearly stated our positive objectives in the Rhodesian crisis.

The U.S. Government should state its commitment to the achievement of governments based on universal suffrage throughout southern Africa—in Rhodesia, to be sure, but also in Angola and Mozambique, in South Africa and South-West Africa. A statement by itself, of course, changes nothing. But it gives the world and ourselves a measure by which we can judge the adequacy of American policies in the immediate present. We can then ask about each decision in Washington or at the United Nations: Will that decision bring us closer to achieving governments based on universal suffrage throughout southern Africa?

Given a commitment to majority rule in southern Africa, our present position of support for the British boycott of the Ian Smith regime, while commendable, is inadequate. If we are the leader of the free world, we should take the initiative, something we have never previously done on issues involving southern Africa. If mandatory economic sanctions are needed to topple the Smith regime and bring self-determination, we should work to bring this about through the United Nations. We should not wait until we are pushed by the African and Asian nations and then try to achieve the weakest possible compromise.

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN SMITH FALLS?

The next question which is crucial and cannot be ignored is, What will Britain do should Ian Smith fall and power revert to the British Government? And in this House, the crucial question is, What does the U.S. Government think Britain should do? Because to replace Ian Smith with a slightly more flexible member of this same ruling minority group in Rhodesia does not bring us one whit closer to achieving a democratic society in Rhodesia. Britain must proclaim now its eagerness to negotiate with African nationalists the transfer of power within a reasonably short time. A government should be established based on universal suffrage and should receive its full independence. And the United States should press Britain to make clear this objective now.

Some may say, in a false shrewdness, that to do this would alienate some potential support for Britain's position among Rhodesian whites. But who can believe today, 6 months after the November 11 declaration, that such support exists in any meaningful amount? And in any case, what about the support of the overwhelming majority of the population which is not struggling for a return to British colonial rule, but for a government based on universal suffrage that would then receive its independence and full membership in the polity of nations?

DEMOCRACY VERSUS MINORITY RULE

If one wants to make a case against democracy, against majority rule, there are always arguments. The majority is never as educated, as rational, as foresighted as some of us would wish. But neither is the minority. Between the mistakes of the majority and inevitable self-serving decisions of even the most dedicated minority, those who believe in democracy must always choose the former. The decision in Rhodesia is today a simple one in the light of this fundamental principle. The majority of Rhodesians are not permitted to vote. It is said that many, if not most of them, are not civilized enough to vote. It is said that if they got the vote, they would use it in all sorts of ways that other people wouldn't like. Perhaps, but the majority is still the majority. Perhaps Ian Smith honestly believes he knows its interests best. That is irrelevant. The faith in democracy is based on the belief that all men are created equal. Equal in what? In native ability? In attained culture? Of course not. No, equal in the right to have a voice in the government.

Winston Churchill once said:

> No one pretends that democracy is perfect or all-wise. Indeed it has been said that democracy is the worst form of government except for all those other forms that have been tried from time to time.

AMERICA MUST SUPPORT FREEDOM

This is as true for Rhodesia as elsewhere. That is why our Government must make its position far clearer than it has done up to now. That is why we may not hide in the protective coat of British initiative. That is why we ought once again to take the risks of supporting the cause of freedom.

THE REV. JOHN B. MORRIS
4655 JETT ROAD, N.W.
ATLANTA 5, GEORGIA

DEAR FELLOW GEORGIAN:

"The only thing necessary for the triumph of evil is for good men to do nothing." Seldom has the truth of this been more evident than in the State of Georgia today. As Atlantans woke up after the Temple bombing in 1958 and began to work for a more progressive climate, so Georgians from all over awakened last week to the political disaster that befell the State and its demand upon ordinary citizens to take a stand for good government and continued racial and political progress.

It is in that spirit that we are writing everyone in the State we know personally and whom we believe share similiar concerns for the future of Georgia. We don't know whether you consider yourself a Republican or Democrat; and we respect the fact that some of you may choose another way for the expression of responsible citizenship on election day.

For our part, we shall join with thousands of Georgians on election day and write-in the name of Ellis Arnall for Governor of the State. We hope you will seriously consider doing the same.

We are realistic enough to recognize that Arnall probably cannot win. But a significant write-in vote for him would be a victory for some recovery of integrity in state politics. It would constitute the beginnings of statewide reform efforts within the Democratic Party. It would help to take the Democratic Party out of Senator Talmadge's hip pocket. A substantial write-in vote might throw the contest into the state legislature, and even if Maddox were named there, it would be less of a victory for him and would say something about the determination of Georgians to rid themselves of his kind.

Some say that Callaway would be better than Maddox, and it is true that most of us middle-class folks would probably feel more comfortable with his button-down manner than with Lester's brand of conservatism. We believe that Congressman Weltner, a Georgian who reminds us that greatness is still possible in our State, was right when he said, as quoted in the October 4th NEW YORK TIMES, that "Callaway is the same as Maddox on race except in a slicker way. He uses code names such as property rights, which means we ain't gonna serve no niggers."

Georgia might recover from the excesses of a Maddox as Governor; and we'll have to, for all predictions are that he'll win. It will be more difficult to renew our progress after Callaway's right-wing, polished Goldwaterism has made its mark on the state.

This is why we're going to write-in ELLIS ARNALL, a man who was a good governor once and who now is the symbol of progress and moderation in our State. We hope you'll do the same. Also, we encourage others to write all of their friends as we are doing to support the write-in effort and the principles behind it.

Sincerely,

October 7, 1966

Patsy and John Morris

Patsy and John Morris

P.S. For the long-haul recovery of political sanity in Georgia we commend to you the enclosed memorandum supporting a grass-roots effort to restore a progressive spirit to our political life. Both parties could use this kind of endeavor!

Subject: Georgia Independent Democratic Caucus

Regardless of the outcome of the November Governor's race, i.e., whether Maddox wins or not, the fact remains that he and his radical right "wool hat" group will control the Georgia Democratic Party machinery for the next four years. Under this "leadership" there will be no place for the moderate Georgian. The resulting vacuum could very well have disastrous results for the Democratic Party and the future of our State.

I would like to suggest the formation of an Independent Democratic Party Caucus to meet this urgent need for a viable structure under which the moderate Georgian, Negro and white, could coalesce.

The chief purposes of this Caucus would be:

1. To provide a district, county, and state delegate organization to reach the rank and file voter, and a communication link up and down the organization and throughout the State.

2. To serve as a program formulating, issue stating, and problem focusing structure for Georgia. This role would be two-fold - pressures on the incumbent administration in an effort to prevent erosion of already existing programs - and development of a framework of program on which to build the next campaign.

To carry out such an important and imperative program it would require that a number of Georgians of stature issue a call for the Caucus and also the commitment of some money for a modest budget.

I would be interested in your reaction to the above proposal.

THE REV. JOHN B. MORRIS
4655 JETT ROAD, N.W.
ATLANTA 5, GEORGIA

DEAR FELLOW GEORGIAN:

As a recipient of the letter Patsy and I sent friends on October 7th, this is just to let you know that our mind hasn't changed with regard to the Write-In effort and to once again invite your own support of it. Our thanks to those who let us know of their commitment to the undertaking, and especially to those who picked up on the suggestion of writing their own letter to friends.

This should be taken as a post-script to our earlier letter, for we can't add substantially to what we said then. If anything more need be said, it would be that Write-In advocates must expect the possibility of Governor Arnall once again publicly disavowing the effort in his behalf. It is known from reliable sources that he has been under great pressures from representatives of the power structure.

The Write-In Georgia group has, from the beginning, anticipated the probability that Governor Arnall would have to take such a position. It will no more affect their determination, than have the clever barbs of a few local editorialists - some of whom have been termed "the kept press". I believe that Governor Arnall respects the integrity of the Write-In effort and privately does not abjure what we are trying to do.

Backing up our own commitment to the Write-In Arnall movement, Patsy and I have been variously involved. She has been working almost daily at the Write-In office, which can use all the volunteer help it can get. Acting as a private citizen, and not in my professional capacity, I have become a plantiff in a suit filed by the ACLU to determine the legality of stickers for the write-in and certain other procedural matters. I spoke recently at a political meeting at a local church and am speaking at a write-in rally in a nearby community tonight.

In preparation for speaking the other night I prepared the enclosed sheet on the Callaway record. I will be glad to supply you with copies if you are contemplating writing people you know. Other materials may be obtained at the Write-In office in downtown Atlanta.

Issues too-numerous to discuss here are being pondered by folks wavering between the Write-In and a distasteful vote for Callaway. While I respect the fact that some people in good conscience will take the latter step, I wish we could have a long chat about the implications of the vote in either of the three directions now offered. There are valid arguments on several sides, although I discern that the more that is known about the Callaway record - the more voters are turning to the Write-In.

I hope you will do the same. For my part, I am so fed up with the political leadership we have had in Georgia, I intend, also, to write-in someone against Senator Russell as well. That will be an outright protest vote. When I write-in ELLIS ARNALL FOR GOVERNOR it will be an affirmative vote for a man who served Georgia well twenty years ago and whose platform now is one I can wholeheartedly support!

Faithfully,

John B. Morris

BO CALLAWAY: THE LESSER OF TWO EVILS? AS EVIL? WORSE?

Some well-meaning folks are still trying to persuade themselves that Howard H. "Bo" Callaway is the lesser of two evils in the choice they feel they have for governor of Georgia.

Let's look at his record:

1. Bo Callaway backed reactionary Marvin Griffin over moderate Carl Sanders in the race for governor four years ago.

2. Until Lester Maddox won them back to the old party, Bo Callaway was the choice for Governor this year of Marvin Griffin and his crowd. (And, if he wins over Maddox, they'll jump right back in the bed with him!)

3. Bo did nothing to dissuade 75,000 to 100,000 Republicans from crossing over and helping elect Lester in the Democratic Primary run-off. They thought then that Lester would be easier to beat than Arnall. Now Bo thinks that moderate and liberal thinking folks should get behind him!

4. Bo said himself that the only difference between himself and Maddox was "in approach", and he promised that he would "fight for our way of life in the South..." We know what this "way of life" business means! Segregation! (ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, October 8, 1966)

5. Here's some of Bo's voting record which he thinks moderates and liberals are going to swallow:

HE WAS AGAINST CIVIL RIGHTS LEGISLATION IN 1965 AND 1966!
HE VOTED AGAINST MEDICARE!
HE VOTED AGAINST THE MINIMUM WAGE LAW!
HE VOTED AGAINST FEDERAL AID TO URBAN AREAS!
HE VOTED AGAINST FEDERAL AID TO EDUCATION! Several times!!
HE VOTED AGAINST MILITARY & CIVILIAN PAY INCREASES, VETERANS BENEFITS, ETC.
HE VOTED AGAINST STRENGTHENING FAIR EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES LEGISLATION!

And the list could go on and on. But, that's not all....

6. ....Bo has had one of the worst attendance records for a new congressman the House of Representatives has seen in recent years, and he's not been out of the country about the government's business. When he could strike a blow for his brand of right-wing, reactionary Goldwaterism (He was for him in '64!) he managed to vote. When they wanted to appropriate money for the investigation of the Ku Klux Klan, Bo was gone!

7. It is a part of Bo's record that he has been praised several times by Georgia's KKK Grand Dragon, Calvin Craig, who said he "had high praise for Bo Callaway as a staunch conservative who was helping preserve the American way of life..." Bo has been mighty slow to disavow the KKK (and he'd really rather not be asked about the subject, because, after all, a vote is a vote), and he has refused to disavow the extremist John Birch Society, an organization so fanatical that their leader has claimed Dwight D. Eisenhower is a part of the Communist conspiracy!

We know from his ax-handles how bad Lester is! Bo went to West Point, has a little money, and raises flowers down at LaGrange, and it's probably true that he wouldn't use an ax-handle himself. A man as big as Bo has always been able to let others get their hands dirty down South. His ax-handles have been his consistent votes against the underprivileged, against Negroes, against workingmen, and against improved education and the elimination of blight in our cities.

It could be said that Lester doesn't know much better than to pick up an ax-handle and rant and rave about His Government, His President, and all that; but Bo, on the other hand, has been around some more, studied a little history, and had all the opportunities to know better about how people should live together and how government should operate for the greatest good of all the people. In spite of it all, he's got an ax-handle voting record! The lesser of two evils? Does anyone still believe that?

Congressman Charles Weltner put his finger on it when he said: "Callaway is the same as Maddox on race except in a slicker way. He uses code names such as property rights, which means we ain't gonna serve no niggers." (NEW YORK TIMES, October 4, 1966)

There are thousands of Georgians who don't like Bo's slick manner on a lot of issues and who see him as just a dressed-up Lester Maddox, using a different kind of ax-handle. THEY'RE GOING TO WRITE-IN ELLIS ARNALL FOR GOVERNOR ON NOVember 8TH!

Will you do the same?

A STATEMENT ON THE DEATH OF JONATHAN DANIELS AND THE PROSECUTION OF JUSTICE

One year ago today, Jonathan Daniels was murdered by race hatred in Hayneville, Alabama. He was an Episcopal seminarian and civil rights worker for the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity. The hand that held the murder weapon is still free a year later to strike again, for the assailant has been no more restrained by those of his community who mocked justice than by the routine investigation of Federal authorities.

As fellow workers with Jonathan Daniels in the struggle for racial equality, and as friends of ESCRU, we mourn his loss, and we fear for our country.

State and local law enforcement agencies did not prevent his murder and, indeed, there were strong indications that some of them were implicated. Federal officials have not acted to bring the murderer to justice through the means open to them. Now we are about to enact more Federal civil rights law; but we have seen too many murders, too much brutality, and too much flouting of existing law to be confident that more laws will make much difference if there is not also a greater determination to uphold and enforce these laws.

The Department of Justice claims that its file on Jonathan Daniels is still open, but they admit that no present investigative activity is proceeding. What has happened to the likelihood that there was a conspiracy of local officials in this crime? What of the standing of the assailant as a law officer insofar as Federal intervention is concerned? What of the 1965 Civil Rights Act with its provisions regarding physical harassment of those associated with voter registration efforts? The file may still be open, but, sadly, it appears that it is largely empty because of inaction or disinterest?

The alienation, the disappointment, the bitterness and the hostility which are emerging this year from some sectors of the Negro community must be seen as the inevitable response to a society that murders a Jonathan Daniels, that kills many more black men and women whose names are not even remembered, and which then hides behind unenforced laws and meaningless open files.

It is time for the Department of Justice and the FBI to stop merely collecting reports and maintaining files and get on with the business of acting vigorously on the basis of existing laws. Without such determination, the new legislation will be a hollow symbol.

"THE CAPETOWN PLACARD" AND THE LOVETT PROTEST

The only sign to be carried in the Lovett School protest will be large (22x28) representations of the "Capetown placard" as attached in smaller size.

This was originally executed at St. George's Anglican Cathedral in Capetown, South Africa, and placed on the Cathedral grounds in 1959 as a bold witness to the meaning of APARTHEID to the Christian.

The word APARTHEID, which in the original version of the placard was emblazoned on the strands of barbed wire, has been replaced in the adaptation prepared by the Episcopal Society with SEGREGATION and SEPARATION.

Dear Mr. Arnold:

I have read your letter of May 23 with great interest. I need to ask you for a few days in which to consider whether we can undertake the report you have in mind; there is no question as to our wish to do so.

Perhaps you could, when convenient, let us know what, if any, deadline there would be for the report and whether you can offer any financial support to it. I raise the latter question because we quite likely would, if we go ahead with the job, want to engage a consultant to draft a memorandum which would serve as the basis for the finished report. Some years ago I used MIS regularly. I am, therefore, familiar with your reports. I wonder, however, if you could send us a couple of sample copies of recent issues?

RECEIVED
MAY 25 1962

Dear Mr. Dunbar:

The International City Managers' Association, as part of its Management Information Service (see enclosed folder) issues 12 reports per year on a wide variety of subjects in municipal government and administration. One of the subjects we would like to cover in a future report is that of city government practices and procedures in handling potentially explosive situations in the field of race relations. Many of the 1,200 MIS cities are medium-sized and small cities in the northern parts of the United States are experiencing for the first time the in-migration of Negroes from the South.

Although much has been written from the standpoint of southern cities, including your excellent report on "Racial Violence and Law Enforcement," we feel that there is a need to cover this subject from the standpoint of implementation of public policy. One aspect of implementation is police work which has been covered quite well in the recent Charles C Thomas book on "Race Tensions and the Police." Similar documentary information is not available in other aspects of city government services, including recreation, housing standards, and other phases of community government.

This letter is a request for help. We would like to prepare a report for our subscribing cities that shows what the city council, the city manager or other chief administrator, and city department heads can do to be better prepared for necessary community adjustment. We know of some cities, like Skokie, Illinois, that have handled this quite well. We also know of two cities in the South that have handled racial tensions well--Savannah, Georgia, and Rock Hill, South Carolina. We would like to pull together information from these cities, which we can obtain first-hand from their city managers, together with materials that have been written for the report.

Would the Southern Regional Council be willing to prepare such a report? We could help by gathering as much information as needed directly from cities. If not, can you suggest some person or organization who could undertake this assignment? We are not sure how to get started on this, but we do feel that the subject is becoming a great importance in the North as well as in the South.

I shall look forward to any ideas you might have on this, and I will be glad to discuss this further--either by mail or by telephone.

Sincerely yours,

Dave S Arnold/WB

Management Information Service

A CONSULTING SERVICE BY MAIL TO CITIES AND TOWNS ON A SUBSCRIPTION BASIS

HOW MIS WORKS

The Chief Administrator Gets a Problem

He is asked by the council for advice in deciding municipal policy; or he receives a recommendation from a department head on a new service, change in procedure, or on some other matter which he must approve or disapprove; or he is in search of a better way of doing a particular job, etc.

What He Should Know

To guide him in solving a specific problem he wants to know: (1) what other cities are doing, (2) what is considered best practice, (3) the opinion of other specialists, and (4) what the national trend is. He needs up-to-date facts, methods, trends, opinions, and he needs to have them now. He does not have time to study voluminous reports, to search magazines, to read books, or to collect and tabulate data from other cities.

How He Gets the Answer

The International City Managers' Association in the past 40 years has collected, through questionnaires, correspondence, conferences, and publications, a vast storehouse of information on municipal management problems. Since 1934 the Association has collected and compiled annually much data from more than 2,500 cities and towns. Thus the ICMA headquarters is enabled to furnish promptly on a specific problem: (1) the best methods and procedures developed by municipal officials and specialists; (2) factual information on what cities are doing and current trends on a nationwide basis; and (3) opinion and advice on questions of top management policy, such as how to organize to do the job, how better to coordinate activities, how to direct the work, how to exercise control, how to appraise or measure accomplishment, how to report to the public, etc.

MIS ALSO INCLUDES

Copies of Special Information Reports

In addition to securing information on specific local problems, the city will automatically receive copies of special Reports dealing with subjects of wide general interest as indicated by officials of cities subscribing to MIS (see column at right for titles of recent Reports). This part of the Service includes a special loose-leaf binder in which these Information Reports can be filed. An index is supplied annually.

Several Copies of Municipal Year Book and Public Management

Included in the Service are a certain number of subscriptions to Public Management (see table), the monthly journal of the International City Managers' Association since 1914, devoted exclusively to local government administration, and each year several copies of the Municipal Year Book, also published by ICMA, a 600-page authoritative resumé of activities and statistical data of more than 2,500 American cities. The city will designate the department heads or other officials who are to receive these publications.

Dear Harold:

I am sorry I could not get by last Friday. I had told the girls firmly that we were going to leave at 8:00 o'clock, but they were not ready until after 10:00,,and I got to feeling a little depperate about the length of the drive.

I had wanted to talk with you about two things chiefly, one being the matter of the voting project finances. There is no urgency about this, however. I understand that you and I wre going to be at Madison together and we can do it then.

The other thingsis a request from the International City Managers' Association that we do one of their MIS reports on practices and procedures in the field of race relations. This is too worthwhile, or at least prestigious, a thing to turn down and I want to do it. I wonder what you would think, however, about our doing it together. I ask this for two reasons. One is that we would very much like to have the good judgment of you and Art in the formulation of the report. The second is that we are a regional organization with no claimed competence outside the region and, though Mr. Arnold's prose is fairly impenetrable, I surmise that he wants something on a national relevance.

Without having given a lot of thought to how this might be done my inclination would be that we acknowledge ourselves to be experts, thereby avoiding dependence on any social scientists, find someone who has some background of observations to draw upon to draft a report, and then edit and revise it and make it our own. A possible writer would be someone such as Fred Powledge of the Atlanta Journal, whose work in the last few months has impressed me. I would think no individual by-line would be appropriate.

Let me know what you think.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Les:

It was good talking to you yesterday about the MIS race relations report for the International City Managers' Association and both Harold and I look forward to a joint undertaking with you.

Since several weeks have gone by since you last heard from David Arnold on June 6, I guess it would be important, as the first order of business on this project, to inform Mr. Arnold that you will be delighted to undertake this project, and at the same time inform him about your intention to have the Potomac Institute co-sponsor. I am sure you will also want to let him know that you will in a short time furnish information about the scope and coverage of the report, and that at that time you will give him a cost estimate. Since I believe we agreed that we would both like to undertake this project irrespective of whether the City Managers' Association reimburses us at all, you might want to indicate to Mr. Arnold that he can count on us to undertake this job without regard to the cost problem, which you are sure ~~to~~ will be ~~able to~~ worked out on a mutually satisfactory basis. It was Harold's and my thought that if the City Managers' Association were not able to make any other contribution, their share might be underwritten by way of furnishing both SRC and Potomac with a given number of copies of the printed MIS report for our own use.

We will present the project to our Board next Tuesday on the basis of our telephone conversation, in which we will request authorization up to the amount of $1,000 for our share; while we do not expect that such a joint amount on each of our parts will be necessary, we just thought we would cover any unexpected contingencies. In fact, there are several people in Washington now who have had considerable experience in municipal management affairs, including intergroup relations, who might well serve as a consultant for us, either on fee or free, who might even do the entire job within the framework we set. As soon as we have had a chance to get together to delineate the scope of the report, we can pursue this consultant matter further from this end, if this is how we decide to work it out.

May I suggest that you send us a copy of your reply to Mr. Arnold, and let us know when you think you can be available for us to get together to begin setting up the project. Since you will be seeing Harold in Wisconsin I am sure you will want to discuss it with him and it might be easier to arrange getting together in that way, after which we can take it from there.

I am looking forward eagerly to doing this job with you. Best regards to Peggy and to the office people.

Sincerely,

Art

Dear Mr. Arnold:

We shall be pleased to undertake preparation of an MIS report, as proposed by your letter of May 23, on municipal policies and procedures in the field of racial tensions. Within a short time we shall send on to you a tentative outline for discussion and comment; this will be accompanied by an indication of method of work.

One of the reasons we have delayed decision here is that we have been discussing your query with the Potomac Institute (1501-18th Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.). Our aim was to secure Potomac's help in this and, in fact, if you were approving, its partnership. This has now been agreed. Because this is a fairly new organization you may want a word of description. Briefly, the Potomac Institute is a study and advisory agency in the field of national race relations and civil rights. Its operating head is my predecessor at SRC, Harold C. Fleming. The Staff Director is Arthur J. Levin, former Southeastern Staff Director for the Anti-Defamation League.

When we forward the outline, we shall send at the same time a cost estimate. We believe a good report can be done without extravagance; furthermore, both Potomac and SRC are prepared to share in the costs.

With best regards,

Sincerely yours,

Mr. Leslie W. Dunbar

Dear Mr. Dunbar:

It was a pleasure to receive your cordial letter and to learn of your interest in preparing the report on race relations. I would very much appreciate, when you get the time, your writing me and giving me an outline or your general ideas for the scope and coverage of the report. I am sure that the suggestions in my letter of May 23 can be improved upon.

We feel the need for this report for at least two reasons. One is that city managers, like superintendents of schools, are a mobile group. Many managers serve during their career in three, four, or even five cities. This mobility means that many managers from the North have taken positions in the South in recent years, especially in Florida, North Carolina, and Texas. A second factor is that many managers do not have a good understanding of community and social problems. Few have worked directly with minority groups or have attended schools or lived in neighborhoods with substantial minority groups.

In addition to your ideas for the report, I would appreciate your giving me an approximation of the cost. I hasten to add that this would not involve any commitment on your part, or on ours, but it would help in discussing this question with our Director.

I shall look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Art:

Our letters seemed to have crossed in the mail.

This morning I also received a letter from Arnold a copy of which is enclosed.

Give me a call or write after you have had a chance to think over our sketch and we can decide when and how to get together.

I hope you and Ida are making progress in settling down in Washington.

Best wishes.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Les:

I just wanted to touch base with you about the MIS race relations report for the International City Managers' Association.

First, I should tell you that our Board approved the project and authorized an expenditure of up to $1,000 for our share. They felt that the project represented an impressive opportunity. Therefore, we are ready to proceed from this end.

I received a copy of your letter of June 25 to David S. Arnold of the International City Managers' Association. Have you had any reply from Mr. Arnold as to the joint involvement of the Potomac Institue with SRC?

On the assumption that Mr. Arnold wants us to undertake the report, it would seem that the next step is for us to draw up a tentative outline and some cost estimates. When would you like to get together to do this?

Hope all goes well with you and the family -- both your own and the SRC "family." Warmest regards.

Cordially yours,

Art

RECEIVED JUL 30 1962

Dr. Leslie W. Dunbar
Executive Director
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Les:

Please excuse the delay in replying to your letter of July 13 and your draft outline for the M.I.S. report. Several other jobs intervened.

Your suggested outline is great -- too good, frankly. The comprehensive scope could be covered, it seems to us, only in a book-length document; the 2000 or 3000 words in a MIS report could hardly begin to do it justice. I have tried to condense the content of your outline, the result of which is attached for our further consideration.

Perhaps we had better start with some basic premises. In re-reading the letters from Arnold, particularly the letter of May 23, we would think that the report should propose no innovations, but rather draw on existing samples of good city practices. While it is very tempting to suggest advances which are beyond anything now being done by any city, we would feel that if we could not support any proposal by existing administrative practices, perhaps it would be better to omit the proposal. This might not be as restricting as it sounds on paper -- the attached outline does not include, as far as I can see, anything that is not being done someplace in the country. We are trying to think of this from a city manager's point of view, wherein any proposal he might make to the city commission or municipal executive would need to be supported by precedent and operational experience elsewhere.

Secondly, in such a piece we feel that we ought to devote this report to examples of good practices that can be emulated, rather than discussing pros and cons or giving examples of bad practices. It is our thought that it will be difficult enough to include all of the good practices in the limited space, and there is always the danger that some of the bad practices may be remembered out of context. Thirdly, and again because of limited space, we would feel that we should be able to make statements of "fact" on good human relations practices, without involved discussion or justification, presuming upon our "expertese" in the field. This would apply particularly to the first part of the outline (A. Background), so that the major portion of the report (B. and C.) can be devoted to examples.

If all of the above is acceptable, then it would appear to us that we would need only a good writer, sensitive to and well versed in this subject matter. We feel that there already exists adequate source material for every point in the outline, and it would be the writer's responsibility to find this material (with our help), condense it, and then write it in an interesting, narrative manner. We don't see the need for any original research which would require the services of an expert in either municipal work or human relations. We would then have in mind somebody like Charles E. Silberman (who wrote "The City and the Negro" for the March 1962 Fortune), or Bill Peters. If you agree, we would be glad to discuss with one or the other his taking on the assignment, once we have established the outline.

As to cost estimate, under the above circumstances, we would feel that SRC and Potomac should share in the writing fee (estimated $1000 total), and Arnold's contribution to the project would be to furnish us each with 1000 copies of the report (or more if you feel you could use more). Therefore, in writing to Arnold about this, we would not mention any dollar figure, but rather indicate that our share would be provided by furnishing a completed manuscript and his share would be to furnish the required number of copies.

Let us have your reaction to all of this, and perhaps we can come to an agreement without the necessity of meeting, although we are certainly not adverse to meeting because it would give us the chance to see you again.

Warmest regards.

Sincerely,

Art

Publications Director
The International City Managers' Association
1313 East 60th Street
Chicago 37, Illinois

Dear Mr. Arnold:

We have had further discussions with the Potomac Institute and have agreed on the enclosed outline for the report. As you will see, it is a general, topical outline. We thought it better to do this at this time than to work out a detailed sketch. The content will be very much along the lines that I discussed with you on the telephone.

Our expectation is that we shall be able to furnish you a completed report some time during the fall. If you, after examining your schedules, would care to give us a more precise deadline or target date please let me know. Otherwise, we shall plan simply to deliver the report some time in the October to December period.

If agreeable with you, we and the Potomac Institute are prepared to absorb the cost of the job in return for the following: (1) your assistance in obtaining first-hand information from the cities as we may request, and as you indicated in your letter of May 23 you could do; (2) 2,000 copies of the finished report for distribution by us and Potomac.

If your agreements with your subscribers would not permit you to do the latter, we would want to discuss the costs further. I think I can assure you neither the Potomac Institute or we would distribute the copies in any ways which would draw publicity or attention to ourselves. We think this is a most important thing to do, we are, therefore determined to do the very best and most professional job we can, and we would like to see that the report, as finally edited by you, reach as many of the people who should see it as we can manage.

Please let me know if this is satisfactory or if there are other questions.

Sincerely yours,

Leslie W. Dunbar
Executive Director

August 9, 1962

RECEIVED
AUG 13 1962

Mr. Leslie W. Dunbar, Executive Director
Southern Regional Council, Inc.,
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.,
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Dunbar:

I am pleased that the Southern Regional Council and the Potomac Institute are prepared to go ahead with the report. The cost and distribution arrangements are satisfactory. We, of course, will pay for printing the additional 2,000 copies, and they will be shipped to you or to the Potomac Institute directly from the printer as you indicate. We are prepared to handle promptly the letters you wish to have sent out to individual cities.

The outline looks very good. For clarification, I assume that C-1, "Licensing Powers" refers to the administration of various kinds of municipal ordinances where discrimination could be involved. Also I assume that C-4, "Education," refers primarily to the policing of school areas where integration or other problems are occurring.

The only other comment I would make with respect to content is that the report should emphasize administration as much as possible. The report will be used primarily by city managers, police chiefs, recreation directors, and other administrative officials. I have enclosed a roster of MIS cities to show the kinds of communities where the report will be distributed.

As to length, I hope that the report can be kept to 15,000 words or less. This limitation would not apply to ordinances and other materials that it might be desirable to include as appendices. In addition, a brief, annotated bibliography would be useful.

You should feel free to use any appropriate parts of our out-of-print report, "The Police and Minority Groups." A copy has been sent to you under separate cover. Also under separate cover I have sent you copies of "The Newcomer: Public Welfare's Challenge" and "Race Tensions and the Police." I would appreciate your returning these materials when the report is completed.

With this letter I have enclosed an ordinance adopted by Skokie, Illinois, last year. I believe that Skokie is one of the cities that ought to be covered for this report.

Let us set December 1 as the target date for the report.

Again I want you to know how pleased we are that the Southern Regional Council and the Potomac Institute will be preparing this report. I know it will be extremely useful for cities in all parts of the United States. I shall look forward to hearing from you soon with respect to securing first-hand information from cities.

Sincerely yours,

David S. Arnold

Dear Les:

Thank you for your letter of the twenty-fourth and your proposal to meet several weeks from now, after Margaret has had time to get into the job, makes excellent sense.

In checking with Harold, we find that it would be most convenient for our schedule if you could stop off in Washington on Friday, September 28, on your way back from New York to Atlanta. Harold has to go up to New York the previous Monday, so that we would have more time together on Friday. We'll consider this a date, and meanwhile Margaret will begin to gather background material.

In this latter connection, would you send to us the reports which Arnold sent to you (his letter of August 9, 5th paragraph), plus any materials which you think would have a bearing on the subject from your file. It would also be extremely helpful if you could put somebody on your research staff to going through SRC's clipping file to extract and forward to us relevant materials (either the originals, which we will return, or copies). I am enclosing another copy of the outline we agreed upon for reference purposes in this regard. Your suggestion of a bibliography of materials in your library would also be very helpful to Margaret, since there is no doubt that SRC probably has the best reference library available to us for this purpose.

Under separate cover I am sending a copy of the Kheel report and the other report which you requested. These are "collector's items", scarcer than hens teeth, and therefore guard them like foundation grants.

We look forward to seeing you on September 28. Warmest regards.

Sincerely,

P.S. Would you please notify whoever keeps your addresses current that Potomac is no longer at the Shoreham Building and that our current address is 1501 18th Street, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Dear Mr. Levin:

Under separate cover I am mailing this afternoon relevant clips for the City Managers' report. These are just a beginning, but I thought best to start with what we had and send the balance within the next few days as the clips get extracted. This has the advantage of letting you ask us for fuller information as topics come to your attention, and perhaps will offer leads on which we can dig further.

Dear Mrs. Patterson:

Thank you for sending the four books to Art Levin last week. I have them now and will return them to you when the current project is finished.

The clips you promise should be helpful for we seem to be short here on specific steps cities in the North and West have taken to meet racial tensions. Anything along this line, including action taken by cities in the South, will be most welcome.

I've marked several items on the bibliography you send which we would like to have and I'm enclosing a separate list of these.

Thanks so much for all your help.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Arnold:

Thank you for your letter of September 6. We are engaged in collecting from our own files all the information and materials that we can. We are well along through what is a pretty extensive set of materials. Our intention has been to call on you for securing information from individual cities after we have assembled our own data and are in a position to ask specific questions.

On the other hand, if you know of any especially noteworthy instances of good practices, either by ordnance or by executive action, we would be grateful if you went ahead with inquiries to the cities involved.

Best wishes.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Margaret:

I have finally gotten Leslie's ear to clarify what further you wanted from us, as a result of his talking with you in Washington. I wanted to get this note off quickly today so you could respond to a few things soonest. In the meantine, the enclosed clippings from Polkville and Woodstock are rather rare southern examples. The Law Journal reprint is a duplicate, but like our other materials we have sent, we do want it back when you are through. The AJC Joint Memorandum is a copy, similar to several similar ones on other areas we have received from them. Do you people get these? Or should I make copies and send? We only have one copy of, and want to keep, some LWD feels you would profit from: REPORT ON TWENTY STATE ANTI-DISCRIMINATION AGENCIES AND THE LAWS THEY ADMINISTER, Commission of Law and Social Action of the American Jewish Congress, 15 E. 84th St., NYC 28 (December, 1961) (mimeo).

The deeper I dig, the more ordinances, legislation, annual reports I come up with. LWD said something about my digesting the scope of these various ones. Frankly, Margaret, I'm inexperienced in noting always what is pertinent. And how selective of the cities to be. Should I rather send everything we have? ordinances? polished activities reports? I'm enclosing some samples. Maybe they can help you guide me.

The statements you want are clearer. I just have to dig more for them and will send in a day or so.

Let me know your thinking on this.

Thanks.

excerpts from Police and Community Relations, Sept., 1962
(National Conference of Christians and Jews)

For the second year, seminars in Police and Community Relations are scheduled for October in St. Petersburg and Miami, Florida -- and there is a possibility of a third in West Palm Beach. Speakers will be Atlanta Police Chief Herbert Jenkins and former U.S. Senator Harry Cain, now executive vice-president of a Miami Bank.

In Virginia, one-day Institutes on Police and Community Relations have been conducted in Norfolk and in Richmond. Plans are being made for another in Roanoke next February.

Suggestions to improve the way the citizenry and the policeman deal with each other are contained in a folder developed in July by the Western District Police and Community Relations Committee in Baltimore. The folder is called, "Policemen and Citizens Working Together for a Better Community." This Committee, one of four functioning in each Police District in Baltimore, sponsored by NCCJ, has 79 members, including clergymen, businessmen, educators, policemen, social workers and housewives. Rev. Ward D. Yerby and Police Lieutenant Joseph Judd are co-chairmen. A sub-committee headed by Mrs. Eula Watts and Mrs. Margaret Armstrong prepared the folder.

Dear Margaret:

I am sorry the ICMA material is coming in such dribs and drabs but nowadays in research we are juggling a lot of balls at once.

There's a packet in the mail today, and I wanted to add a few notes on some of the typed Florida materials. Those civic committees largely came into being, as you may gather from the dates, in response to the sit-in activity, or in anticipation of it. Re Florida: Belle Glade had a committee about which we know nothing; Ocala had a committee appointed by the mayor which worked quietly and off the record. In North Carolina, also, add: Asheville; Gastonia (12 members - 6 Negro, 6 white) which saw lunch counter desegregation completed peaceably by January, 1961; Kingston; Chapel Hill; and Laurinberg. Since these lists are dated, perhaps someone in ICMA could give you a current contact in the cities involved.

The Baltimore 1961 Report which I asked you about, is enclosed.

Since we only clip southern papers, notations on northern or western examples which you requested will have to come largely from the national press (NY Times or periodicals) and I have not made inroads either here on on, generally, 1962 or late 1961 yet. Soon.

The various municipal newsletters are included so that you may at least know these committees exist. We have no press on them. We do have an inquiry out to Davenport, Iowa, requesting a new ordinance creating a committee there.

Dear Mr. Arnold:

We are deep into the research for the report on municipal practices on race relations, and we have accumulated quite a bit of information. We have also had several conferences with Dr. Dunbar, whose staff is also working on the accumulation of pertinent materials.

In the course of our fact finding, several questions have arisen on which we would very much appreciate your help in gathering the necessary information. These questions are as follows:

1. The City Council of Omaha, Nebraska, on January 8, 1962 adopted an ordinance to prevent discrimination in private and city employment. On January 30, 1962, the city attorney of Omaha ruled that the City Council is without legal authority to enact an FEP ordinance, since in Nebraska cities have no inherent police powers. Has there been any change -- for example, has the legislature met in the interim and passed enabling legislation giving Omaha the right to adopt an FEP law?

2. In November, 1955, the city commission of Fresno, California appointed a Committee to Study Racial Discrimination in Employment. The following November, the Committee made its report, including several recommendations. We have seen no follow-up. Could you find what has been done since in Fresno in the matter of minority-group employment, and whether the city has taken any other action affecting minorities?

3. On September 10, 1961, police reinforcements are reported to have prevented racial disorders when 100 Negro airmen from K.I.Sawyer AFB appeared in Negaunee, Michigan, after six of their number were reported to have been attacked by 30 white men. We would like to know more about just how the police handled the disorder, particularly since it would be interesting to learn how one of the smaller cities copes with such a problem. Also, has there been any action by the town on such matters as housing, etc., as it affects Negroes or other minorities?

4. Wichita is the first city in Kansas to staff its Human Relations Commission with a paid, full-time professional intergroup relations worker. Could you find out what the city has in the way of ordinances or any action taken affecting minorities?

5. Roselle, New Jersey, as reported in the New York Times, seems to be a city which has had unusually amicable race relations. Housing was considered something of a problem, however. Has anything been done to alleviate any housing problems? And, what action has the city taken which has made Roselle comparatively free of racial tensions?

6. You have mentioned that Skokie, Illinois, Savannah, Georgia, and Rock Hill, South Carolina, have each taken some affirmative action affecting minority group relations. We would be interested in any accounts of such actions, including copies of applicable ordinances and news stories.

7. Also, we would appreciate having any information you could obtain regarding ordinances or action affecting minority groups in Canadian cities (perhaps in Halifax and Windsor, where we understand there are an appreciable number of Negroes). We have a copy of the Fair Accommodations Practices Act passed by the province of Ontario.

As we go deeper into the subject, I am sure that we will have other questions on which we will need your help, and we will be communicating further with you as the need arises. We grealy appreciate your coopemation, and we look forward to a useful document which we plan to submit to you around the beginning of December. Kindest regards.

Dear Margaret:

Thank you for your letter. It was a lot of help. I am enclosing copies of the ordinances, most of which are a little old, and a recent re: Atlanta clipping.

Just off the top of my head this morning a thought came back and I will pass it on to you. Mr. Oliver Holmes, who now works with Frances Pauley at the Georgia Council, is lately of Savannah, and some time past had told me of his very quiet appointment to the Bacon Park Commission there by Mayor Malcolm McClain. The story is thus: sometime last Spring (March or April, he recollects) Mayor McClain appointed him to the five-man commission - the other four are white - and his appointment was onlymmade public three months thereafter when someone, according to Oliver, asked, "Will it work to have a Negro on the Commission?" McClain is supposed to have replied, to the effect, "Well, it has been working." Since Holmes is now in Atlanta, his successor is a Negro, Dr. Bill Jameison. All of the parks, with the exception of swimming pools, are desegregated. Perhaps also worthy of noting for the future, McClain comes up for reelection in November and has promised more Negro appointments, specifically, Board of Education.

I discussed this with Paul Rilling, and he had some other sub-rosa stories to tell: 1) Oakridge, Tenn., Negro candidate for city councilman Washington Butler , who has been active in city commissions; 2) Mobile, Ala., Commissioner Joseph N. Langan, third party of a triumverate which in the past has behind the scenes been effective in establishing a civic tone with Negro policemen, street lights and pavements in Negro areas all very quietly, which may be of interest has to how these things get done in the South, i.e., not an ordinance on record; and 3) Louisville, which he feels you might get best results from writing to C.H.Parrish, or Mrs. Parrish, who is on various boards there.

Paul Rilling is writing Mr. Langan and Mr. Butler so any replies you address to them will not be too stunning.

I hope all this is useful, and you will continue to call on us. It seems as we get more down into bedrock, the personal approach to some of these southern situations has to be taken, because they just don't turn up in our clippings at all.

Sphere behind the scenes

Dear Barbara:

I've been trying to give a little more time and thought to the municipal study so that when I answered your letter I could give you a clearer idea of what we are lacking, perhaps. However, things have been so hectic here the past 10 days I still haven't been able to do much digging, so I'm not sure I can clarify things much, but here goes:

write CH
Parrish
U. of Louisville

For one thing, I think we are pretty well fixed on state action, as general background to what cities can do. So, the primary interest now is in specific action by municipal agencies. I think that we have enough references to state legislation in the employment, housing, etc. field. ATLANTA -

So far as annual reports are concerned, I think we need only those (from city human relations commissions, etc.) for the past couple of years--anything earlier than 1960, unless accompanied by recent reports, is likely to be out of date (unless, of course, such an early report would give a clear picture of how a city met a specific problem--how police coped with violence in a particular instance, for example).

The joint memo from ADL you sent--digests of public accommodation ordinances passed in Baltimore and El Paso--is very much the sort of thing we can use. We have not been getting the memos but Art Levin is going to write for future issues. However, if you have anything on ordinances like the above which appeared in previous issues, or those of the past few months, at least, I'd appreciate it if you could send us a copy. (Incidentally, we have a complete file of Race Relations Law Reporter, so we don't need anything that has appeared there.)

What we seem to be particularly short on now are good examples of how individual city officials--and this would include mayors; or better yet, city managers; recreation or parks directors; police chiefs, or any city department head--dealt with given situations, or in short, handled them in such a way they could well be an example to another city official. I suspect this will be the hardest part of the report to come by, but if you find any shining examples--and probably such would pop up in magazine or newspaper clips--they would be most welcome.

Dear Mr. Byars:

This report will give particular attention to recreation, housing, employment practices, police services, and other municipal government services as they affect minority groups.

I believe that Halifax is one of the Canadian cities that has an appreciable number of Negroes. It would help therefore to have information on any specific actions taken, including ordinances adopted, that apply to protecting minority groups. The Potomac Institute has a copy of the Fair Accommodations Practices Act passed by the Province of Ontario. Has any similar action been taken by the Province of Nova Scotia? Dear Bob:

The International City Managers' Association is engaged in a joint project with the Southern Regional Council and the Potomac Institute in the preparation of a report on "The Role of the City Government in Race Relations." The report will be distributed to cities subscribing to Management Information Service, and the Council and the Institute will be making their own distribution of the report. The report will give primary attention to the administration of housing programs, recreation, police work, and other city government services as they affect minority groups.

It is my understanding that the Fresno City Commission, in November, 1955, appointed a committee to study racial discrimination in employment. This committee made its report, including several recommendations, in November, 1956. What has been the follow-up on the committee report? We would like to know the actions that have been taken with respect to employment of minority groups. Also it would help to know if any other actions have been taken by the city in matters affecting minorities. This might include housing, recreation programs, and administration of police services. In addition to factual information, it would help to have your interpretative comments, any ordinances that have been adopted, and pertinent newspaper clippings.

Would you please send all of this information to Mr. Arthur J. Levin, Staff Director, the Potomac Institute, Inc., 1501 - 18th Street, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Dear Chief Andersen:

The International City Managers' Association is engaged in a joint project with the Southern Regional Council and the Potomac Institute in the preparation of a special report on "The Role of the City Government in Race Relations." This report will give attention to housing, recreation, police work, employment practices, and other municipal government services as they affect minority groups.

According to a report in the New York Times, Roselle seems to be a municipality which has had unusually amicable race relations. It would help us a great deal if you could give us a description of the actions that the municipal government of Roselle has taken to make the community comparatively free of racial tensions. I am sure the Police Department has had an important part in this record of achievement.

The New York Times report seemed to indicate that housing was something of a problem, however. Has anything been done to ease the housing problems? Any explanatory information you can provide, together with appropriate ordinances and newspaper clippings, will be extremely helpful.

Would you please send this information directly to Mr. Arthur J. Levin, Staff Director, the Potomac Institute, Inc., 1501 - 18th Street, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Dear Mr. Fitle:

The International City Managers' Association is engaged in a joint project with the Southern Regional Council and the Potomac Institute for the preparation of a special report on "The Role of the City Government in Race Relations." The report will give attention to housing, recreation, police enforcement, employment practices, and other city government services as they affect minority groups.

It is our understanding that you ruled on January 30, 1962, that the City of Omaha is without legal authority to adopt an ordinance for fair employment practices, since Nebraska cities have no inherent police powers. Have there been any legal developments since you made your ruling? Has the state legislature, for example, met in the interim and passed enabling legislation giving the City of Omaha the right to adopt a fair employment practice ordinance? Have any court decisions been handed down or have any law suits been filed?

Will you please send this information as soon as possible directly to Mr. Arthur J. Levin, Staff Director, the Potomac Institute, Incorporated, 1501 - 18th Street, N. W., Washington 6, D. C. MUNICIPAL PRACTICES FOR EQUAL OPPORTUNITY

INTRODUCTION

In war and in peace, the American people have met many challenges with vigor and resourcefulness. One of the most persistent challenges in our history is that of civil rights, and this field has proven no exception to the imaginative use of public and private initiative. That we have made much progress is indisputable, as this report will show; that we have a long way to go in providing equal opportunity to all of our citizens is equally clear.

Much publicity has been garnered in the past decade by the racial problems and difficulties experienced in a ~~number of~~ relatively few communities, both North and South. But the steady progress being made by hundreds of communities across the country toward achieving equal opportunity for all citizens is a less well-known story. While it is true that city executives can learn from the mistakes made elsewhere, and there is no intention of concealing or minimizing the fact that mistakes often are made, it was felt that space limitations of this report could be used to best advantage for member communities by detailing the scope of progressive practices. No effort was made to include all cities with worthwhile programs. Instead, examples of types of advances in selected areas of concern are used to illustrate the thesis that no community need feel that it is entering uncharted waters or that it cannot draw upon the experience of other, like communities on which to base a start toward the achievement of full equality for all its citizens.

BACKGROUND

Definition of Minority Group. An eminent social scientist once defined a minority "as a group of people who, because of their physical or cultural characteristics, are singled out from the others in the society in which they live for differential and unequal treatment, and who therefore regard themselves as objects of collective discrimination. Minority status carries with it the exclusion from full participation in the life of the society".[1/]

Legal Authority ~~Executive Responsibility for Civil Rights~~. Minorities have grown increasingly more restive under the restrictive practices which circumscribe their ~~full~~ participation in American society. Legal challenges to existing community customs and laws have resulted in recent years in a growing series of court decisions striking down racial barriers. The historic school desegregation decisions of the U.S. Supreme Court in 1954-55 brought to a culmination the legal trend of a century of litigation, declaring that "separate educational facilities are inherently unequal". It was the death knell of the "separate but equal" doctrine which had so long prevailed.

Although the new principle initially applied only to public education, it has since been applied to most facets of civil rights in succeeding court cases. And where, to begin with, these decisions applied only to direct state actions (and, by extension, to actions of local jurisdictions), recent rulings have enjoined private discrimination whenever "to some significant extent the state in any of its manifestations has been found to have become involved" in private acts of discrimination.[2/]

Today, there is little doubt of the legal responsibility and authority of executive officials to end discrimination through the use of public policy, law, and administrative machinery, attested to by a growing body of court decisions, acts of Congress, executive orders, administrative rulings, and state and local legislation.

THE PROBLEM

Civil rights problems do not arise in the abstract. Those who are denied their constitutional rights are very often also the victims of poverty and inadequate education. The quest for equal opportunity has created large mobile masses, moving from rural to urban centers, from region to region, and from city to city, in search of a better way of life. Like earlier immigrants before them, many of today's minorities have been crowded into urban slums, restricted to the poorest schools, and employed in the lowest paying occupations. In their adjustment to city life under such handicaps, they have required a disproportionate share of health, welfare, police, and other services, and have been more vulnerable to personal and social maladjustment.[3/] These deprivations have led to discrimination,

2/ Burton v. Wilmington Parking Authority, 365 U.S. 715, 722.
3/ Philip M. Hauser, "Urban Boom and Crisis in the Sixties", address before the International Municipal Assembly, May 12, 1960.

which in turn reinforces the deprivations.

Past Inequities. Many of the hardships of today's minorities - the Negro, the Puerto Rican, the Mexican-American, the American Indian - are the cumulative result of past denials of civil rights. This has produced a new deprivation - the lack of motivation and incentive. Often, newly opened opportunities are not used, even when they are evident. Frustration of ambition and lack of hope breed delinquency and crime, which further raise the cost of public services. These are essentially social problems, yet they are inextricably bound up with civil rights issues.

Present Discrimination. Unemployment hits Negroes more than twice as hard as others, underlining the fact that they are confined to the least skilled, poorest paid, most insecure occupations, highly susceptible to cyclical lay-offs. Much of the housing market remains closed to millions of Americans because of their race, religion, or ancestry, so that they are mainly confined to substandard housing in slums. In public education, eight years after the Supreme Court desegregation decision, only a little over seven per cent of the South's 4/ 3,200,000 Negro children attend biracial schools, mostly in token situations, and de facto inequalities in public educational systems exist in many cities elsewhere in the nation.

In a number of Southern states, voting restrictions are enforced by outright discrimination, physical violence, or economic reprisal. In the North, where citizens may vote freely, mal-apportionment and gerrymandered districting seriously dilutes urban votes. Recent headlines about "sit-ins", "freedom rides" and other demonstrations indicate that ~~this~~ the problem of equal treatment in public accommodations is far from resolved. There are still places in the nation where the fear of racial violence is very real, and where police brutality remains a national shame.

INSERT pg 6

New Minority Image. Against this picture of widespread deprivation, a new minority image - especially of the Negro - has emerged to challenge discrimination and the denial of equal opportunity. Bolstered by legislation, court decisions, and recent changes in public policy, Negroes have more and more taken to direct, "non-violent", action to secure their rights immediately and in full. The prevailing majority, accustomed to the concept of "gradualism", has sometime reacted with a sense of shocked resistance to what it had been prepared to grant over a period of time. Frequently, it is not so much a question of rights as a community problem of timing - but for minority groups, time has run out and unfulfilled promises are being presented for payment now. Herein lies one of the main causes of community tensions.

Minority Mobility. In a continuation of the migration which began in World War II, approximately 1.5 million Negroes left the South between 1950 and 1960. "Although the largest cities have generally registered the largest numerical gains, the largest proportional gains have been experienced by medium-sized cities in the 100,000 - 500,000 range. Syracuse, Rochester, New Haven, San Diego and Fort Wayne all saw Negro populations approximately double in the past decade".[5]

5/ Eunice and George Grier, "The Impact of Race on Neighborhood in the Metropolitan Setting", Washington Center for Metropolitan Studies, 1961.

In Toledo, Ohio, the white population increased one per cent from 1950-60, while the Negro population rose 63 per cent. In Milwaukee, Wisc., the Negro population tripled in the past ten years. The Cleveland, Ohio, Negro population increased by 100,000 (150,000 in 1950 to 250,000 in 1960), and Connecticut has double the number of Negroes (to 107,800) that the state had ten years ago. Today, one out of every eight citizens is Negro in Los Angeles, Buffalo and New Haven, Negroes make up one out of every four residents of Philadelphia and Detroit.

The Central City. The surrounding suburbs of most cities are almost exclusively white, ringing the central city of deteriorating, substandard, and slum dwellings. Unable to break out of the "white noose", ever more crowded into housing diminished by urban renewal and highway construction, with overcrowded schools and inadequate facilities of every type, Negro pressures and frustrations require disproportionate public services at mounting costs. This unhappy story is repeated in community after community where the problem is often ignored, and where the blame for tension and incipient violence is often placed upon the victims rather than upon the actual causes.

Leadership Responsibilities. The assumption of leadership responsibility by municipal executives and administrators is a prerequisite to solution of this modern "American dilemma". A realistic appraisal of community problems, planning for the provision of equal opportunity in all aspects of daily living for every citizen, and the large scale educational job that is required for public acceptance of such planning, must be undertaken by the city leadership before conditions reach the threshold of violence. Wise city heads will institute a program of prevention that will insure the continued growth and prosperity of the community instead of the economically ruinous conflict that some cities have suffered before bowing to the inevitability of desegregation and integration.

TOWARD A SOLUTION

Each community must assess its own stage of civil rights development and its own requirements for achieving progress. However, there are principles common to all civil rights solutions, by which specific implementation should be guided. Following are some of the ~~preconditions~~ of successful social change:

1. A clear-cut policy, firmly enunciated and unequivocally applied. An ambiguous policy half-heartedly applied is a sure invitation to resistance and trouble.
2. Emphasis on inevitability. The South has demonstrated that people will rise above their prejudices and adjust to new racial patterns if they are convinced that change is unavoidable.
3. Reassurance that change will not be overwhelming or catastrophic. Many whites equate integration with inundation. The cooperation of the communication media in reporting needed facts and interpretations can be helpful in effecting ~~needed~~ change with minimum disruption.
4. Convincing precedents for change, drawn from the experience of other, like areas. Next to first-hand experience such precedents offer the best way ~~of~~ to allay~~ing~~ unjustified fears, familiarizi~~ng~~e people with new ideas, and destroy~~ing~~ the myth that racial change always means trouble.

5. Communication between ~~the~~ majority and minority groups, allaying fear through the destruction of mutual, long-held stereotypes. Mutually agreed upon approaches to solutions worked out in concert, including the pressing problem of timing, will find much more ready acceptance on the part of all concerned.

6. Practical self-interest (most especially economic self-interest) enlisted on the side of change. This is critical, and should be brought into play at the earliest possible moment to establish that the entire community has a great deal to gain from progress toward equal treatment and opportunity.

7. Moral leadership. The churches have a special responsibility to clarify the moral issues involved in discrimination. But all community leaders can contribute to public acceptance of needed social change as a moral as well as practical imperative.

Resource Agencies. In the accomplishment of these overall objectives, city executives may wish to avail themselves of the services of the many intergroup relations agencies whose representatives ~~serve~~ reach virtually every community in the country. These specialists in human and intergroup relations are skilled and experienced not only in community tension problems, but also in affirmative actions which can help to eliminate discrimination and provide equal opportunity to minority groups. If such resource agencies do not have local representation, the International City Managers' Association or the state university can recommend an agency representative.

Guides to Progress. Progress toward equal opportunity in this great nation is the sum total of the advances made in the thousands of local communities that comprise it. This report is an account of such progress through community examples in the areas of education, employment, housing, public facilities, police practices and through ordinances, policy pronouncements, ~~ordinances,~~ human relations commissions, and other administrative devices ~~steps.~~ These examples are meant to serve as guides to advancement in those communities which conscientiously seek to improve relations among all their citizens.

RECEIVED

December 31, 1962

Mr. Arthur J. Levin, Staff Director
The Potomac Institute, Inc.
1501 Eighteenth Street, N. W.
Washington 6, D. C.

Dear Mr. Levin:

It was good to talk to you on the telephone. Again I apologize for the delay in getting in touch with you. While I could not avoid going to the hospital, that does not excuse our failure to acknowledge receipt of your letter of December 12. The following remarks represent the consensus of three of the staff who have reviewed the report in detail.

Page 7--In the first paragraph under "Toward a Solution" it would be helpful to add something along this line:

"Clearly defined city government policies and programs are an essential prerequisite for social change. They provide not only the climate for social change but also the legal tools for accomplishing the job. For many cities in this country, irrespective of geographic area, the question is not whether a change will occur but the kind and extent of change that will occur. Is this social change going to be a period of stress, conflict and recrimination? Or, is it going to be handled gracefully within the contect of constitutional law? The city government has a great deal to do in influencing this choice.

Page 7--In Point 1, I suggest adding something like this:

"A clear-cut policy, firmly enunciated, and unequivocally applied, should be adopted by the city council in the form of a resolution. The statement should make clear that the city government is committed to working toward equal opportunity in all areas that are deemed appropriate in any given city. Such areas may include, but would not necessarily be limited to, the following:

"The civil service or merit system ordinance governing the employment of the city's own employees will be followed with respect to nondiscrimination because of race, religion, political affiliation, or country of origin (most state and local civil service laws and ordinances, and all of the "model" ones, have provided for this for many years.)

"Eligibility for public housing will be determined solely on the basis of need as determined by the local housing agency (or other appropriate governmental authority).

"Urban renewal, especially involving slum clearance, will not be undertaken until relocation housing has been provided for all who are displaced because of redevelopment. The spirit as well as the letter of federal law will be observed.

"The city government has a definite interest in federal and state laws and codes that bar discrimination in the sale and rental of private housing. The city government, through the appropriate administrative agency, will mediate any disputes.

"The police department and other appropriate city government agencies will enforce city ordinances barring discrimination in hotels, restaurants and other places of public accommodation, including both those under private and governmental ownership."

Page 9--I think a section on "The Organization Job" should be added just before the section on "Human Relations Commissions." This section should make clear the leadership responsibilities of the city manager, mayor or other municipal chief administrator. He is a catalyst. He is the person who carries more responsibility than any other individual. The section could be approached along these lines:

1. Identify the problem and define objectives.

2. Plan a tentative program for meeting these objectives.

3. Inventory local resource groups for program, including the city council, city employees, the ministerial association or local council of churches, the central labor council, the board of education, the school superintendent and staff, and the chamber of commerce.

4. Develop a more detailed program covering housing, employment, and other agreed-upon areas.

5. Identify and specify the responsibilities of each of the resource groups with respect to: program, financing, procedures, staffing, and reporting.

6. Provide a formalized review and evaluation so that the program can be modified as needed on the basis of experience.

Pages 8-9--It would be helpful to add a paragraph desgribing the types of human relations agencies.

Page 10--One of our staff members lives in Park Forest, and he is going to write-up a paragraph or two describing the arrival of the first Negro family there.

Page 15--Somewhere in the section on "Police," we should add a description of the work done in Little Rock. I think it could be taken right out of the Southern Regional Council publication, "Racial Violence and Law Enforcements" (pages 29-31). It would help for managers to know how it was done, the steps that were followed, and the contrast with the unfavorable experience in Chattanooga and Montgomery.

Page 26--I would like to conclude the police section by stressing the importance of training, where it can be ontained and how to go about it. City officials need to know how to plan, what to look for, departmental organization, the use of specially assigned units, and other procedures and practices.

Page 38--Under "Municipal Law" it would help to have a description of the various kinds of municipal ordinances outlawing discrimination in employment. I assume that these ordinances range all the way from exhortations to laws that provide means of enforcement and sanctions. How effective have such ordinances been?

Page 47--Under "Private Housing" I am not clear with respect to "Cities in over 20 per cent of the country now are governed by state laws which prohibit racial and religious discrimination in some parts of the private housing market." Does 20 per cent refer to population or area or what? What do these laws and ordinances typically provide for? I assume you are referring to "open occupancy ordinances." It would help to have a description of the content of some of these laws and ordinances.

Page 49--It would help to give some emphasis through a paragraph or two on the police problems in public housing areas. Also, somewhere in the section on "Public Housing," I believe we should give some attention to the problem of quotas. Some city managers may unwittingly encourage a policy of adopting a quota for the number of Negroes or other minority groups to be housed in a public housing project. What do you think? I assume you are familiar with Morton Grodzins' "The Metropolitan Areagas a Racial Problem" published in 1958 by the University of Pittsburgh Press. Grodzins makes a persuasive case for a quota system in all kinds of housing, public and private.

Page 51--Relocation is the problem in urban renewal. What can cities do about it? I know that easy answers are not available, but I do believe that t he problem should be given some attention.

Page 54--The Shaker Heights ordinance sounds most unusual. How is it enforced? Has it worked out well?

Finally, as I mentioned on the telephone, I still think we need a bibliography with items annotated and showing publisher, publisher's address, year of publication, title, number of pages, and price. We want to encourage city managers and other city officials to buy these various publications that are recommended by inclusion in the bibliography.

I shall be most appreciative if you can get these additions to the report in the mail no later than Tuesday, January 8. I think you have done a fine job on this report, and these additions will make a good report even better. Be sure to call me if you have any questions.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Art:

Many thanks for sending us a copy of your letter this week to David Arnold. Les and I both read it through carefully, and we think you-all have done a very fine job of revising the piece along the lines suggested by Arnold. In fact, it seems to me you've given him everythink he could desire and possibly a great deal more than he deserves. I was particularly impressed by your recommended reading list which should certainly be enough to satisfy even the most curious city manager (whose curiosity, I suspect, is hardly boundless).

We trust this will wrap-up the report for good-and-all, but please let us know if we can do anything further to help. I can't imagine, however, any further help being required, and I look forward to reading the published version. Best regards to Harold and Margaret.

Dear Mr. Arnold:

Following your most helpful suggestions in your letter of December 31, please make the below-listed changes in the manuscript on Municipal Practices For Equal Opportunity which was forwarded to you on December 12:

1. Page 6 - delete entire paragraph headed "Leadership Responsibilities", starting at the bottom of page 6 and continuing on page 7. (This paragraph has been incorporated in the following section.)

2. Page 7 - delete entire section sub-titled "Toward A Solution", starting in the middle of page 7 and continuing to the middle of page 9. Substitute in its place in the manuscript the attached revised section of the same title.

3. Page 18 - add the following sentence immediately after the first word on the top of the page (...programs.): "In addition to these regional programs, counterpart institutes of one to three days duration are held in at least 12 states, and more than 50 cities hold local programs in cooperation with the NCCJ.[6]

4. Page 18 - add the following footnote 6/ at the bottom of page 18: "For additional information on police training institutes, write: National Conference of Christians and Jews, 43 West 57th

THE POTOMAC INSTITUTE, INC.
1501 Eighteenth Street, N.W. • Washington 6, D.C. • DEcatur 2-5566

Street, New York 19, New York; School of Police Administration and Public Safety, Michigan State University, East Lansing, Michigan; Southern Police Institute, University of Louisville, Louisville, Kentucky; International Association of Chiefs of Police, 1319 Eighteenth Street, N.W., Washington, D.C."

5. Page 47 - under sub-section Private Housing, first paragraph, line 3, change to read: "However, cities in over 20 per cent of the states now are governed..." (substitute word "states" for "country".)

6. Page 48 - insert following paragraph between the first full paragraph on the page (ending: "... are enforced by administrative agencies.") and the next paragraph (starting: "The Virgin Islands has added..."):

"There is wide variation in the various fair housing laws. New York City, for example, bars discrimination in all housing for rent or sale except the rental of an apartment in an owner-occupied duplex. It has been estimated that the New York law covers over 95 per cent of the total housing market in the city. On the other hand, California and Oregon do not cover private housing as such but affect the market by prohibiting discriminatory actions by realtors. Connecticut's Public Accommodations Act prohibits discrimination in housing by anyone controlling three or more contiguous units. New Hampshire outlaws discrimination "in the matter of rental or occupancy of a dwelling in a building containing more than one dwelling"."

Now for some specific reactions to the other remarks in your letter, identified according to the page number references noted in your letter:

Page 7 - both of your comments on the first and second pages of your letter have been incorporated in the attached revised section "Toward A Solution".

Page 9 - "The Organization Job" has partially been covered in the attached revised section as to objectives, but not as to "how to do it". As we discussed on the telephone, we believe it would be virtually meaningless to generalize for the multitude of city sizes, minority compositions, differing problems and goals, differing administrative structures, political complexities, etc., in any brief section on how a city administrator can go about achieving these objectives. Instead, there might be one or several follow-up reports written by selected city managers on the "how to do it" aspects of successful accomplishment, such as Oakland, California. These reports will be more meaningful and instructive because they will be specifically based on the experiences of those involved in city government. Such reports differ in subject matter and purpose from this report, and would require more space than could be alloted in only one section of this report to do justice to their importance. We have included specific references in the Resource Reading list to how some of these problems were handled for city managers who wish to delve more deeply, and we recommend that city managers consult resource agencies in tailor-making a program for a given city. Beyond that, we do not feel that city managers can benefit from any broad generalizations which could not be specifically applicable.

Page 8-9 - we believe the types of human relations agencies are covered by examples on pages 9 through 14.

Page 10 - we think a paragraph on the first Negro family in Park Forest would be fine, and we would like to read it before inclusion, if time permits.

Page 15- we have included Virgil Blossom's book in Resource Reading for a detailed description of police work in Little Rock, as well as other references to police practices.

Page 26 - we have added a paragraph in the text on where information on police training can be obtained, as well as resource reading material on the entire subject of police training.

Page 38 - the second paragraph on page 38 explains the variety of municipal ordinances outlawing discrimination in employment, and examples of the different types are given on pages 38 through 43. We do not feel capable of assessing their effectiveness in practice.

Page 47 - we have changed the text to read "20 per cent of the states..." (rather than "country") to clarify this point, and we have added a paragraph further describing briefly the content of some of these housing laws and ordinances.

Page 49 - on page 25 of the text, San Francisco's example of police practices in public housing areas is described. The whole problem of quotas is discussed in an article listed in Resource Reading (Journal of Intergroup Relations, Benign Quotas Reexamined, Spring 1961.).

Page 51 - experiences with relocation are discussed in an article listed in Resource Reading (Journal of Intergroup Relations, What Do We Know About Our Experiences with Relocation?, Autumn 1961).

Page 54 - we do not know how the Shaker Heights ordinance has worked out in practice.

We have also attached to this letter an extensive Resource Reading list, with sources and prices where available. This is intended as an Appendix to the report. We do not call it a bibliography to avoid the inference that all of the listed publications have been drawn on for the report. Please add to the Resource Reading list the reference to your own publication "The Police and Minority Groups".

The above amendations and comments have been discussed with the Southern Regional Council and represent our joint thinking. We feel that your suggestions have helped to strengthen the report, and we greatly appreciate your constructive involvement. Warmest best wishes for a fruitful new year.

TOWARD A SOLUTION

Leadership Responsibilities. For many cities across the country, the question is not whether there will be social change but rather the kind and extent of change that will occur. Will the time of transition be a period of stress, conflict and recrimination? Or, will it be handled expeditiously within the context of constitutional law? The city government has a great deal to do with influencing this choice.

Clearly defined city government policy declarations and ordinances are an essential prerequisite for social change. They provide not only the climate for such change but also the legal tools for accomplishing the job. Such directives should make clear that the city government is committed to working toward the goal of equal opportunities for all. In the unequivocal implementation of official regulations, the city manager, the mayor, or other municipal chief administrator bears prime leadership responsibilities. He is the catalyst in the complex interactions in any given city that finally result in achievement.

The assumption of responsible leadership by the municipal administrator is the key to the solution of this modern "American dilemma". A realistic appraisal of community problems, planning for provisions of equal opportunity in all aspects of daily living for every citizen, and the large scale educational job that is required for public acceptance of such planning, all must be undertaken by the city leadership before conditions reach the threshhold of violence. Wise city heads will institute a program of prevention that will insure the continued growth and prosperity of the community instead of the economically ruinous conflict that some cities have suffered before bowing to the inevitability of desegregation and integration.

Guidelines to Progress. The following are some suggested objectives toward which the chief administrator can work to effect meaningful social change:

I. Municipal Policy. Through resolutions and ordinances, establishing an enforceable policy of nondiscrimination in:

1. public and private employment
2. public and private housing
3. public education
4. public accommodations and facilities

II. Enforcement Authority. Coordinating, conciliating and enforcing officials policies through:

1. a Fair Practices Commission which receives and investigates complaints, holds hearings, and enforces policies of nondiscrimination.

nondiscrimination.

2. regulations binding city departments to nondiscrimination.

3. a Civil Rights Coordinator in the executive branch. As executive responsibility is increasingly accepted within governmental departments, a special Coordinator in the executive branch charged with civil rights responsibilities can stimulate and coordinate functions. Such a Coordinator can command the authority of the executive branch in the task of keeping heads of departments alert to their obligations and in giving vitality and implementation to civil rights programs within city departments.

III. Implementation Programs. Providing administrative machinery to implement programs in the fields of:

A. Employment

1. affirmative nondiscrimination recruitment programs by the civil service or merit system, and comprehensive reporting on minority placement.

2. inspection and compliance programs in contracting departments of the city respecting fair employment on city contracts.

3. procedures for obtaining fair employment compliance from private employers, and for correcting violations.

B. Housing.

1. eligibility for public housing solely on the basis of need as determined by the local housing agency or other appropriate governmental authority.

2. provision of relocation housing for all who are displaced by redevelopment, and administrative controls to insure nondiscrimination in urban renewal programs especially involving slum clearance.

3. elimination of discrimination in the sale or rental of private housing.

C. Education (in cooperation with the Board of Education)

1. a clear policy declaration and an implementing program to overcome de facto segregation in public schools.

2. a specific program to overcome the cultural lag in learning receptivity among minority group children.

3. inclusion of human relations subject matter in the curriculum, and review of textbooks to eliminate minority group stereotypes.

D. Public Accommodations

1. regulations requiring nondiscrimination in public services and accommodations, including those both under private and governmental ownership.

2. enforcement by the police department and other appropriate city government agencies of regulations barring discrimination in hotels, restaurants, theaters, hospitals, and other places of public accommodation.

3. licensing controls on public services and accommodations requiring nondiscrimination.

E. Community Tensions

1. a Mayor's Committee on Human Relations or other such official body which can coordinate community efforts to promote affirmative programs of civil rights.

2. a police training program on community and minority group relations.

3. a human relations training program for recreation workers.

4. in cooperation with the Board of Education and institutions of higher learning, a teacher training program on intergroup relations.

Preconditions for Successful Change. The organization job to achieve these objectives will depend principally on the type of community involved, the size and nature of the minority population, historic and existing regional and community intergroup relationships, the structure of city government, political alignments, and a host of other socio-economic complexities. Each community must assess its own stage of civil rights development and its own requirements for achieving social change. However, there are principles common to all civil rights solutions, by which specific implementation should be guided.

Following are some of the preconditions for successful social change:

1. A clear-cut policy, firmly enunciated and unequivocally applied. An ambigious policy half-heartedly applied is an open invitation to resistance and trouble.
2. Emphasis on inevitability. The South has demonstrated that people adjust to new racial patterns when they are convinced that change is unavoidable.
3. Reassurance that change will not be overwhelming or catastrophic. Many whites equate integration with inundation. The cooperation of the communication media in reporting needed facts and interpretations can be helpful in effecting change with minimum disruption.
4. Convinging precedents for change, drawn from the experience of other, like areas. Next to first-hand experience such precedents offer the best way to allay unjustified fears, familiarize people with new ideas, and destroy the myth that racial change always means trouble.

5. Communication between the majority and minority groups, allaying fear through the destruction of long-held stereotypes. Mutually agreed upon approaches to solutions worked out in concert, including the pressing problem of timing, will find much more ready acceptance on the part of all concerned.

6. Practical self-interest (most especially economic self-interest) enlisted on the side of change. This is critical, and should be brought into play at the earliest possible moment to demonstrate that the entire community has a great deal to gain from progress toward equal treatment and opportunity.

7. Moral leadership. The churches have a special responsibility to clarify the moral issues involved in discrimination. But all community leaders can contribute to public acceptance of needed social change as a moral as well as practical imperative.

Resource Agencies. In the accomplishment of these overall objectives, city executives would do well to avail themselves of the services of the many human relations agencies whose representatives reach virtually every community in the country. These specialists are skilled and experienced not only in community tension problems, but also in affirmative actions which can help to eliminate discrimination and provide equal opportunity to minority groups. If such resource agencies do not have local representation, the International City Managers' Association or the state university can recommend an agency representative.

Community Examples. The nation's progress toward equal opportunity is the sum total of the advances made in thousands of local communities. This report is an account of such progress through community examples in the fields of education, employment, housing, public facilities, police practices and through ordinances, policy pronouncements, human relations commissions, and other administrative devices. For those municipal administrators who wish to delve more deeply into specific problems and measures to overcome them, a resource reading list is appended to the report. These community examples are meant to serve as guides to advancement in those communities which conscientiously seek to achieve "...liberty and justice for all."

Dear Mr. Levin:

Thank you for your prompt and thorough review of the manuscript for the report on "Municipal Practices for Equal Opportunity." I think the changes have helped a great deal particularly the revised section on "Toward A Solution."

I have edited the entire manuscript and it will be sent to the printer today. A number of changes have been made in the interests of clarity and concision. In a few cases we have shifted paragraphs around to bring related material together. A few examples have been deleted. The only changes in content, however, are the addition of new sections on "Park Forest" and "The Organization Job." Carbon copies are enclosed.

Just to be on the safe side I am asking the typing service in Pittsford, New York, to send thermofax copies of the report to you and to Mr. Dunbar. I will telephone both of you for any corrections that are needed. It will be 10 days to two weeks before these thermofax copies are mailed from Pittsford.

Thanks again for your help. I will be in touch with you just as soon as we receive the thermofax copies.

Sincerely yours,

The Organization Job

The preceding section outlines the policy framework for the city government in fulfilling its role as an agent in providing equal opportunity for all citizens. Beyond this, however, a start must be made ~~on the part~~ by of the chief administrator in clarifying problems and setting forth immediate and long-term objectives. In doing this it helps to envision six steps that should ~~have to~~ be taken.

Identify the Problem

The first step is to identify the problem areas ~~and~~ define objectives. The problems may be cultural rather than ~~ethnic~~ ethnic—that is to say, a major ~~problem~~ may be the difficulty that ~~the young people~~ children of urban newcomers have in developing suitable language skills for doing adequate work in the public schools. Remedial reading may be of more importance in the long run than ~~for~~ fair employment practices.

~~Problem areas should be identified on the basis of prevailing conditions. Then priorities can be set and objectives defined.~~

Plan a Tentative Program

The next step is to develop a tentative ~~program~~ priorities for meeting ~~the~~ objectives. This program may include, but is not necessarily limited to, establishment of a human relations commission, development of in-service training for the police department in race relations, studies of environmental health programs for ~~with~~ ethnic groups, remedial reading programs for the children of in-migrants, and preparation and review of appropriate city ordinances.

Inventory Local Resources

The next step is to inventory the groups within the community that can help in various aspects of a well-rounded program. Such resource groups include the city government itself, both the city council and ~~the~~ city employees; the local ministerial association or council of churches; the central labor council; the local board of education and the school superintendent and staff; the downtown insert on preceding page

no 91 Depending upon his position in the community, the chief administrator should determine the extent to which he can assume leadership and the degree to which he should work through other leaders in the community. Successful programs depend upon effective leadership and a systematic job of organizing community resources.

businessmen's association; the health and welfare council; and service clubs. It is likely that some of these groups already have demonstrated an interest in some aspects of human relations, and they may even have developed certain programs. These resources provide the foundation on which the city government can develop an over-all approach.

Develop a Detailed Program

When the inventory has been completed, the chief administrator knows about the work that already is being done by private organizations and other governments in housing, employment, and other areas. He then can think in terms of the work that must be undertaken by the city government to meet deficiencies.

It is up to the appropriate authorities, usually the mayor or the city council, to call together representatives of these resource groups for discussion on the work to be undertaken in agreed-upon areas.

Assign Responsibilities

The next step is to assign responsibilities for each of the resource groups, including of course the city government, with respect to program, financing, procedures, staffing, and reporting. Obviously this involves a cooperative approach. Compulsion is neither feasible nor desirable. The more that agreement can be reached, the more specific that the responsibilities that can be undertaken and the better the over-all program will be.

Review and Evaluation

Finally, the program should be placed into effect and then modified as needed on the basis of experience. Review and evaluation should be built in to meet changing needs and to learn from past mistakes. It should be emphasized that the role of the city government throughout this process is that of gathering information, meeting with representatives of appropriate organizations, encouraging cooperative action, recommending community goals, and providing, in a non-authoritarian sense, community leadership.

Park Forest.

The trustees (city councilmen) of Park Forest, Illinois, appointed a human relations commission ~~a group of citizens~~ to study what could be done to provide a smooth transition if a negro family moved to the village. The commission ~~committee~~ enlisted the support of leaders of the community, including the clergy. The group took no overt action until the first negro family moved to the city in 1959. The commission ~~committee~~ and trustees then went into action. All residents in the neighborhood affected were visited by a trustee and their clergyman. It was made clear that the village leaders welcomed the new family. Police surveillance of the area was increased for the first week. This same procedure was used in 1963 (but with less fanfare) when a second negro family moved in. (The first family in the meantime had moved to New York City.)

It would be less than honest to say everybody was happy about the "move-in," but everybody respected the law. Three factors seem to have been important to this peaceful transition. First, Park Forest is a suburban community with a large percentage of well educated people. Second, the leadership let it be known that the negro family's rights would be respected. Third, the situation was handled with as little publicity as possible. ~~no one made a "federal case" out of the situation~~

Dear Mr. Arnold:

Thank you very much for your letter of January 11. We are glad that you feel the report has been further strengthened, and we appreciate the arrangements you have made to have 1,000 copies of the February issue shipped to SRC and to us, respectively.

The substantive information on Park Forest will make an interesting addition to the section on human relations commissions.

We have discussed with SRC the suggested added section titled "The Organization Job" and we both agree that its maximum effectiveness will be achieved by carrying it as an introductory foreword at the beginning of the report, over your signature. Neither we nor SRC have any recognized claim to special competence in city administration and we believe city managers will tend to give these helpful hints greater currency if the source is a respected official such as yourself. Since it would be less than honest to attribute these suggestions to our agencies, we know you will accept this arrangement in the interests of the strongest possible report.

We shall look forward to reading the edited thermofax copy as soon as it is available, and we appreciate this productive association. Kindest regards,

Sincerely yours,

Arthur J. Levin

Dear Mr. Levin:

We have no objection to having the section titled "The Organization Job" attributed solely to the International City Managers' Association. Because of mechanical problems, however, it would be extremely difficult to pull the section out and place it at the front of the report. I hope, therefore, that you will not object if we clarify this with a footnote to the section on "The Organization Job" to explain our responsibility for the section.

We do feel that city officials need help in making a start in the difficult area of community relations. We feel that these steps should be taken by a city official in tackling any problem of comparable complexity. We, of course, will check out this and other points when the Thermo-fax copies are received from the typing service.

My best regards.

Dear Barbara:

Filing the last of the material used for the municipal report, I came across the enclosed, which must belong to SRC. So far as I know, this, along with the material returned a month or so ago, is all we had from SRC. But, if some stray piece turns up I'll return it promptly.

Once again, and somewhat belatedly, I want to thank you for your help. I know how time consuming it is to wade through file folders and then have to re-file it all again later.

The report is now out of our hands, I hope, and will be coming out the middle of next month.

Please tell Staige we send along our thanks to him, too, for his help.

A Council to attain, through research and action, the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

INTEROFFICE MEMO

Date February 22, 1963

To: MA cc: Staige Blackford From: LWDunbar

Subject: Distribution of ICMA Report

Will you and Staige please plan or carry out a distribution of the ICMA report and the CCR's report on Mississippi?

The ICMA report should go to the Board (I believe this has been done), State Council directors (I believe this also has been done). I am sending it to a few individuals. The only suggestion I have to offer you is that we send it to police chiefs around the South and that it go to ADL and AJCommittee regional directors. Any distribution plans we make should be checked in advance with Art Levin to avoid duplication. I would hope also that we could save for our own stock a couple hundred copies which I would suggest be given out over the next months only to individuals with a serious interest. We cannot get more copies.

The Civil Rights Commission asked me informally if we could not put the report on Mississippi before some good people. Suggestions you might think about are newspaper editors, preachers, liberal lawyers over the South.

Here is a copy of the roster we have, dated Sept. 1961.

It's probably still reasonably accurate

Dear Mr. Dunbar:

A letter similar to this one is being sent to Mr. Levin. I am enclosing a thermo-fax copy of a letter we just received from the Wichita Human Relations Commission. It is most gratifying to see that they felt that the report was of value, particularly after receiving the criticism from Park Forest. Incidentally, I happen to know Mr. Cunningham and spoke to him briefly about his remarks. He considers himself somewhat of an expert and probably in this case was too close to the trees to see the forest.

If you will notice the city of Wichita desires 50 more copies of the report. We print these reports in limited number and therefore do not have 50 extra copies to send to them. I have written them (a copy of my letter enclosed) stating that I would contact you to see if you had any of your extra copies available. It is my hope that the Potomac Institute could provide 25 copies and the Southern Regional Council 25 copies.

Dave Arnold again expresses his appreciation for the fine job you did on this report.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. Nolting:

We received via our City Manager's office, the report on city government and minority groups. I have surveyed the report, and passed it along to members of our Human Relations Commission. We all agree that it is very well done, and appropriate to our time and need.

We are anxious that this material be distributed among our 30 member Commission, and copies available for our Board of City Commissioners, and the City's executive offices. In short, we are anxious to receive 50 copies. We understand the limit of this distribution and trust that if copies are not available, we might be given permission to reproduce a limited number for our own use.

Again in behalf of our Human Relations Commission, let me express our appreciation for the work that has gone into the preparation of this report, and compliment the staff members who prepared it. We received it enthusiastically.

Please advise me as to the above.

Dear Dave:

This is in reply to your letter of April 4 inquiring about the materials which you sent for reference purposes in preparing the report "The City Government and Minority Groups".

You originally sent these materials to the Southern Regional Council on August 9, 1962. They included:

Police and Minority Groups, Weckler & Hall
Intergroup Relations for Police Officers, Charlotte Epstein
The Newcomer - Public Welfare's Challenge, American Public Welfare Association
Race Tensions and the Police, Curry & King

The Southern Regional Council forwarded these materials to us on August 29, and we returned them to SRC after using them for the report. Therefore, SRC should have these materials unless they had already returned them to you.

By copy of this letter I am letting Les Dunbar know of your inquiry concerning these materials, and the fact that we returned them to SRC after use here.

Warm regards.

Dear Sirs:

I am writing with regard to your Management Information Service, Report No. 229, dated February, 1963. The subject of this report is The City Government and Minority Groups. My general reaction is one of appreciation for your attention to this subject, however I wish to point out an error which occurs on page 20 of the report.

Under the subtitle Cooperative Action for Improved Housing, it is reported that the Greater Seattle Housing Council joined certain civic groups in 1958 to combat housing discrimination. In addition, you report that in 1961 the Council established an experimental clearing service to help minority families find housing outside the central city. While there was some talk in 1961 of establishing such a listing service, no actual listing service ever came into being.

A committee appointed by the Mayor and City Council of the City of Seattle in 1962 published a report which made findings that the problem of housing discrimination in Seattle had increased at an accelerated rate in recent years. This committee recommended that the City enact an ordinance prohibiting discrimination in the sale or rental of all housing, that a Human Relations Commission be established, and that a listing service also be established. None of the recommendations of the committee as yet have been implemented.

Sincerely,

Edward S Singler

Dear Dave:

We have been making a selective distribution of the report, "The City Government and Minority Groups", to private intergroup agencies and the resultant requests for additional copies have about depleted our supply.

These private agencies wish to circulate copies to their respective boards, to local commissions and committees on human relations, to boards of education, to police officials, and other civic and voluntary officials concerned with minority groups. We also had a request from Frank G. MacAloon, editor of Mayor and Manager (the magazine of municipal management) for a book review copy, which was sent in my absence. I personally would have referred this request to you for reply.

It is apparent that the current supply will not begin to meet these needs, and I am wondering what your policy is about reprinting particular issues of your MIS reports?

Best regards.

Dear Art:

I have discussed the MIS Report with our Executive Director, and we have decided to keep it in its present MIS format, at least for the next six to 12 months. We have enough copies for our purposes, but we would be glad to arrange reprints for the Potomac Institute and the Southern Regional Council if you would be willing to pay for the cost of printing. I suggest that you and Mr. Dunbar let me know how many copies you need, and I then will write to the printer to get the price on reprints.

We recently received a letter from Mary Alice Baldinger, Executive Director, National Civil Liberties Clearing House, requesting "either (1) 50 copies for distribution at our monthly meeting; or (2) 600 copies, to be sent out to our entire mailing list." We cannot handle this, but you may want to phone Miss Baldinger to work out some subsidiary financial arrangement for the number of copies she needs. The organization is in Washington, as I am sure you know, and their phone number is Dupont 7-6300.

I shall look forward to hearing from you and Mr. Dunbar and I then will let you know about the prices.

Dear Dave:

Thank you very much for your letter of May 22 which was on my desk when I returned from the West Coast today.

After discussion with Les Dunbar of the Southern Regional Council, we would like to order 1000 copies each (total 2000) of the MIS report number 229, "The City Government and Minority Groups". As I understand it, the price will be $276.00 plus shipping charges from Ann Arbor, Michigan. I would very much appreciate your arranging this reprinting with the printer, and asking that 1000 copies be sent to SRC directly and 1000 copies to us, if possible. The printer can send us the entire bill and we will arrange pro rata costs with SRC.

As you requested, I am enclosing the original of the letter from Mr. Edward S. Singler of the University of Washington. However, both Les Dunbar and I feel rather strongly that it would cause a great deal of confusion to make any corrections in the original report so that there will result two versions of the same report. None of the comments and corrections that we have seen to date change the import of the report to any degree, except in some minor details which are at best matters of opinion. In Mr. Singler's case, we seem to have given the Greater Seattle Housing Council more credit than they deserve, but again here it does not affect the report in any significant way. We feel that if any revision is to be made, it should await a complete updating of the report at some future date, at which time we can crank in these minor corrections. Until that time, we would suggest that the report be available in only one version with the knowledge that any report is always subject to correction.

We will of course be guided by your policy and your own thinking in regard to making corrections, but I thought you would want to know how we felt about it. Thank you very much for arranging for us these reprints, and warm regards.

Sincerely,

I have ordered 2,000 copies of MIS Report No. 229 as shown in the attached carbon copy of my letter to Cushing-Malloy, Inc. If you should have any difficulties with delivery, please let me know.

I am happy to report that my letter of May 22 was in error on the price, and you will be billed $230, plus shipping, instead of $276.

I am much relieved that you do not want to do anything with respect to the letter from Edward S. Singler of the University of Washington. This is my preference also, but I thought you might want to attempt a correction in the reprint.

We are continuing to get nice compliments on this report. The city manager of Richmond, California, (Ed Howell), for example, used a substantial amount of the material in the report in preparing an administrative report for the Richmond City Council on setting up a human relations commission. Ed is of the opinion that the report is an outstanding contribution to municipal government.

As I wrote last week, our study is gathering momentum. Our field work will begin within a week.

My assistant is leaving next Monday for a trip that will take him through several Southern states for the purpose of conducting personal interviews and on-the-spot observation. I know that one of his major stops will be Atlanta for he is looking forward to discussing the project with you.

Before reaching Atlanta, he will drive through the Carolinas and plans to visit Winston-Salem, Charlotte, Greenville, and Charlotte. It would be very helpful if you could send us the names of Southern Regional Council people in these towns or smaller towns en route to Atlanta so my assistant could develop a better understanding of local situations. In each town he will interview city officials, newspapermen, minority group leaders, library officials and civil rights leaders.

I hope that you will be able to send us a few names. I am looking forward to learning your overall impression of the study and the role that the Southern Regional Council can play.

I am glad to learn that you have been getting a good response to the questionnaires we sent to various individuals around the South.

I am enclosing some information on the degree of desegregation in southern schools, eating facilities, parks and transit sustems. I am also enclosing the map you requested. I hope this material will be helpful to you.

We would be interested in learning what you have found out about libraries in the South. It may well be that you have gotten some information which we do not have. So, if at all possible I would appreciate you sending a run-down on your findings in the South, particularly with regard to communities who have desegregated library facilities. We would of course treat this information as confidential. It may be that such data will appear in the report you are preparing for A.L.A., but if not I would appreciate learning the results of your investigation in this area.

We are happy to have been of service to you in this project, which I think should produce an extremely useful and valuable publication.

Dear Mr. Blackford:

Mr. John Hall Jacobs, the Atlanta public librarian who is a member of our Advisory Committee sent us a list of desegregated Southern libraries which your office gave him over the phone on May 18th.

We would like to have permission to incorporate this information into our report. This information could be used in the report in many ways. By comparing recent lists of desegregated public libraries with lists compiled several years ago, we can show the rate and location of change from segregated to non-segregated library systems.

The questionnaires from your members continue to come into the office. We are quite pleased by the rate of return as well as the thorough manner in which the questionnaires were filled out.

If you give us permission to use the list you have compiled, we can give the Southern Regional Council as the source of this information or we can state that this information has been compiled by a voluntary organization. The degree of specificity as to source is left up to your organization.

Sincerely,

Michael Rosenbaum

Dear Mr. Dunbar:

I am pleased to be able to report that our study on "Access to Libraries" was reviewed on Friday by the Advisory Committee of the American Library Association, and that all seven members of the committee seemed very well impressed. The report will become part of the "public domain" on July 15th, the date when it will be presented to the convention of the ALA in Chicago, and shortly thereafter I shall mail a copy to you.

At this time, I would like to say that I am most grateful to you for your cooperation and assistance in the development of the project.

Dear Mr. Dunbar:

I have just returned from Chicago, where INRA presented the report on "Access to Libraries" to a variety of forums, including the Library Administration Division and the Intellectual Freedom Committee -- the sponsoring organizations within the ALA (a highly complex organization, incidentally, with an unusual degree of fluctuation in the allocations of functions and powers from one sub-organization to the next). Interest in the report was extremely high, with the topic clearly rising in priority of interest from day to day as the convention proceeded.

As expected, the report, covering an area of both great delicacy and high explosiveness, brought on a number of strongly asserted self-justifications by certain librarians. Interestingly enough, these views came almost entirely from the librarians of systems located outside ofthe South -- systems described as evidencing "indirect discrimination" in the locations and resources of branch libraries. I will leave it to you to make your own assessment of the report when you read it -- and would be pleased to hear any comments that you might like to pass along.

The report will be published by the ALA as of August 19th, and they are providing us with sufficient copies so that we can send one to you at that time. As the convention got under way, the ALA urgently asked us for more than their original allotment of copies, so that we felt obliged to send on the copies that we had originally set aside for those contributing to the study. In the meantime, I am enclosing a copy of the summary of the report that was distributed at the convention, and we will send on the full report as soon as our copies arrive from Chicago. Should you want any additional copies, you may order them directly from: Alphonse E. Trezza, Executive Secretary, Library Administration Division, 50 East Huron Street, Chicago, Illinois, at the published price of $3.00 per copy.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Rosenbaum:

My associate, Mrs. Albright, received a letter today from Mr. Brown of your office, concerning her request for two extra copies of your report "Access to Public Libraries." In his letter, Mr. Brown mentioned that we would probably be charged for the two extra copies by ALA.

In view of the fact that our funds for publications are by no means unlimited, and since we expended considerably more than $6.00 in helping gather information for the study, I am writing to inquire if it would be possible for us to obtain two additional complimentary copies, either through you or through the ALA. Perhaps this is impossible, but I thought I would inquire anyway.

Many thanks for your help in this matter.

Dear Mr. Moss:

Thank you for your letter of the 22nd.

I do not seem to have made a copy of my letter to you, but I take it that the Council's interest is in the files of hate sheets, the Klan propaganda, and the Klan reports. While this is not so bulky as the other, it is of cour se the most valuable to students of the period.

Since my prime interest is in placing the material where it is likely to do the most good, I have decided to offer the SRC the above-mentioned for the sum of $150, with the stipulation that your files indicate that the material was compiled by me, and, secondly, in the event of eventual dissolution of the SRC, this material then be deposited in some other place with general access to the public.

Let me know if this is acceptable to you, and I will proceed to prepare the material for shipment.

I am happy to know that the Council has accepted my offer of Klan propaganda and hate sheets.

It seems to me that the honorarium quoted, all things considered, is yet a fair one for this material.

We are pleased to accept your offer to provide us with:

the files of hate sheets, including Eugene Talmadge's Statesman, Pappy O'Daniel's News, The Southern Outlook of Alabama, and others, the most extensive collection in existence of KKK printed propoganda, originals and photostats.

Since we are not interested in receiving the inside reports on the KKK meetings, would this still be at the quoted price of $150.00 or would the price be somewhat lower? In any event would you please proceed to forward the above materials to us and as soon as we hear from you as to the final price, we will forward our check.

We would be particularly interested in items 2 and 5 , so designated in your letter. This includes the file of hate sheets and the KKK printed propaganda, originals and photostats. We might be interested in the inside reports on the KKK meetings held in Georgia, Tennessee, Alabama and other southern states.

Dear Sirs:

In the course of my work in t he field of race relations during the 1930's and 1940's (some of which was published by the SRC) I accumulated a good deal of material which would be of value to present and future students of this period.

After considering the various institutions which might serve as a depository for this material, it has seemed to me that the SRC, because of its special emphasis as a research organization and its location in the heart of the South, is the most logical place for it.

While I should like to make an outright donation of the material, I have encurred an e xpense of more than $500 for its storage alone during the last decade, and so feel obliged to ask that whoever takes it over defray at least half of this sum.

In bulk the material comprises something like two file cabinet drawers, and includes such categories as the following:

1. "Scrapbook"folders containing news clips and personal field reports on some of the major incidents of race violence occuring in the South during those two decades.

2. Files of "hate sheets" of the period, including Eugene Talmadge's "Statesman," Pappy O'Daniel's "News," the "Southern Outlook" of Alabama, and others.

3. "Scrapbook" folders of clips and other materials, classified under such headings as "Transportation," "Education," "Employment," et cetera, covering the entire field of race discrimination.

4. Scores of first-hand inside reports on secret KKK meetings held in Georgia, Tennessee, Alabama, Florida, Virginia, and other states, compiled by me while serving as special agent of the GBI during the Arnall administration.

5. The most extensive collection in existence of KKK printed propaganda, originals and photostats. Include s "Prescript" constitution of original post-Civil War Klan, the "Kloran" of the present-day Klan, KKK membership cards, etc.

6. A collection of photographs, most of them 8x10 in format, depicting lynchings, race riots, police brutality, and other such events of the period.

Please let me know whether you wish to acquire this material, as I am obliged to make some disposition of it without much delay.

Sincerely,

Stetson Kennedy

PRESENT STATUS OF THE KLANS IN THE SOUTH

There has been a significant resurgence of the Klans throughout the South. In our opinion, this increase in Klan activity and membership has come about as the Klan focalizes the objections to the Civil Rights Bill.

Included in the general term of the Civil Rights Bill, is the loss "of our southern way of life", "breakdown of our customs and traditions", "the grab for pure power by the Federal government", "the protection of states' rights", and other cliches and platitudes of this nature. With the exceptions noted below, the intensity of the Klan thrust is specifically pointed to defeat the Negro drive for equality which is taking place.

As you know, for some time during the latter part of the 1950s, the Klan reached a low point and, for all intents and purposes, was no longer an effective instrument throughout the South. With the coming of the social revolution of our time, the Klans grasped this issue and have used it as the vehicle on which their new found strength is based.

The Klans have used most of the arguments known as the segregationist line in their drive to regain power and recruit members. There have been straight-out appeals to pure segregation. There are appeals to fight Communism. There are appeals blatantly anti-Semitic -- "The Jews are responsible for the race mixing". These are but some of the exhortations that the Klans have used with the basic theme always being white supremacy.

It is estimated that Klan membership throughout the South has risen approximately 5,000 to 10,000 persons in the last year, with a total of between 45,000 to 65,000 Klan members. In many cases, the Klans have spread into areas of the country that have not seen Klan activity for many years. Using the Civil Rights issue, Klan organization is taking place in West Virginia, Indiana, Minnesota, Iowa, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and California. This is not to suggest that there are not other places where the Klan is seeking to re-establish itself. These are merely the areas of most intense activity.

The largest group is THE UNITED KLANS OF AMERICA, KNIGHTS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN, INC., headed by Robert Shelton of Tuscaloosa, Alabama. This group has for some time been attempting to change its image into one of so-called respectability. This Klan has announced that it has purchased land in Alabama where white segregated private communities will be established. In addition, through the organizational structure of this Klan, insurance of all kinds is being sold so that the income can be used for Klan activities.

Affiliated with this Klan are a number of other Klan groups which will be outlined below. In addition, other Klan groups in Georgia, Tennessee, Florida, South Carolina, North Carolina, are part of the UNITED KLANS OF AMERICA.

The Grand Dragon for Georgia is Calvin Craig, and in Georgia there are 40 Klaverns with an estimated membership of from 700 to 800 persons in THE UNITED KLAN.

The Grand Dragon for North Carolina of THE UNITED KLANS is Robert Jones. There are approximately 25 Klaverns in the North Carolina area with about ~~800~~ to ~~900~~ members.
6000 7000

The Grand Dragon for South Carolina of THE UNITED KLANS is Robert Scoggins.

The Grand Dragon for Alabama of THE UNITED KLANS is Robert Creel.

THE UNITED KLANS have been trying to spread into Louisiana and Mississippi. It is reported that in Louisiana they are meeting with some success, but, so far, all indications show that they have not made much inroad into the Citizens Council areas of Mississippi.

THE NATIONAL KNIGHTS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN, INC., with headquarters in Tucker, Georgia, is headed by Atlanta attorney James Venable. In addition, Venable is the head of the Defensive Legion of Registered Americans, Inc., The Committee of One Million Caucasians to March on Washington, and, with Wally Butterworth, The Christian Voters and Buyers League, which produces and disseminates viciously anti-Semitic, anti-Negro and anti-government records which, among other things, are used as Klan recruiting devices and to further the other groups, which are all for the same purpose.

The major emphasis of THE NATIONAL KNIGHTS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN, INC., has been in bending most of their efforts toward this March on Washington as this has been a very lucrative program for them. While some recruitment has been taking place, much of their stress has been on activating chapters of this organization throughout the Midwest. In each of the areas where Governor George Wallace has been involved in primary campaigns, this group has flooded the area with material and has been receiving responses and money. They use the responses to create a new mailing list and attempt to use these people to start Klan chapters in their respective areas.

THE FEDERATED KLANS, KNIGHTS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN, INC., is headed by William Hugh Morris of Buchanan, Georgia. This group has a very small membership, no programming and lacks power. It is, at present, merely a paper organization.

THE U.S. KLANS, KNIGHTS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN, INC., is now headed by H. J. Jones, a roofer who lives in Jonesboro, Georgia. This group has only one chapter with approximately 100 members from the local East and South areas of Atlanta. This group, however, is considered to be very radical, weapons conscience and prone to violence.

THE IMPROVED ORDER OF U.S. KLANS, headed by Earl E. George, has two small chapters in Georgia; one in Ocala, Florida, and two in Alabama. They are associated with Shelton's UNITED KLANS. Jones' group, THE U.S. KLANS, actually split off from Earl George's IMPROVED ORDER because George was not doing anything. THE IMPROVED ORDER has relatively little membership, programming or influence.

THE ASSOCIATION OF GEORGIA KLANS is headed by Charlie Maddox of Savannah, Georgia, has two or three small chapters in the Savannah area and is associated with Shelton's UNITED KLANS. This group is small and of little influence.

THE DIXIE KLANS, KNIGHTS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN, INC., is headed by Jack and his brother, Harry Leon Brown, of Chattanooga, Tennessee. This group has a few small chapters in the Northwest corner of Georgia, one relatively strong Klavern in Anniston, Alabama, headed by a man named Adams, but most of their strength is in the Chattanooga, Tennessee, area. They also are associated with Shelton's UNITED KLANS but work closely with other Klan groups.

UNITED FLORIDA KLAN, KNIGHTS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN, INC., is headed by Jason Kersey in the Jacksonville area. This group is associated with Shelton's UNITED KLANS but does not have a large membership or much influence.

They have been superseded by a group called simply THE KNIGHTS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN, headed by a Gene Fallow of Jacksonville, Florida. This group has been attracting members at a very high rate, is considered to be an extremely radical group and very dangerous. It is thought that an effective persecution of the bombers from this group may stop their growth and slow down the organization. There is no indication that they are associated with any other Klan group.

THE ASSOCIATION OF SOUTH CAROLINA KLANS, KNIGHTS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN, INC., is headed by Robert L. Hodges of Columbia, S. C., and this group is picking up members as part of the general resurgence of the Klans throughout the South.

This listing is certainly not meant to indicate where all of the local chapters in each state are, and where we have used the expression "This group is small and of little influence", this is a relative statement in relation to the other Klan groups.

It is our considered opinion that from now through the rest of the Summer there will be a small surge of Klan activities such as public meetings, cross burnings, recruiting drives, etc.. It is to be noted that each facet of political or social upheaval which, in any way, can be interpreted as a set-back to the passage of the Civil Rights Bill, is eagerly grasped and used by the Klans at present.

There are no clearly defined lines that each individual follows by being a member of a particular Klan group. In many cases, these people are also members of other extremist groups and, in effect, a complex web has been formed with such organizations as the National States Rights Party and the Citizens Councils, etc.. The more violence prone of the Klan groups such as Venable's already are advocating that a race war will be the only solution, and they are sowing the seeds for this violence, if it comes.

Georgian Seeks Inquiry on Klan Links to Police

Weltner / Gp. KKK LA 4-19-65

BY JACK NELSON
Times Staff Writer

ATLANTA—Exposure of law-enforcement involvement in the Ku Klux Klan "could be one of the real values" of the investigation by the House Un-American Activities Committee, says Rep. Charles L. Weltner of Atlanta.

"In some places," said the young congressman in an interview, "you call the sheriff and you don't know whether he'll show up with his badge or his hood."

Weltner said the purpose of the investigation should be to expose the Klan's unlawful activities in order to "galvanize public opinion."

The committee already knows of some involvement by southern law officers, he said, and it should dig deeply to expose all ties between law enforcement and the Klan.

Weltner, a 37-year-old lawyer and the newest member of the Un-American Activities Committee, proposed the Klan investigation almost two months before President Johnson declared war on the hooded order and suggested a congressional probe.

A liberal first elected to Congress in 1962 with strong

PROBE OF KLAN

Negro support, Weltner mystified some of his closest followers this year by seeking a position on the controversial committee, which is still disdained by most liberals.

On Feb. 1, less than two weeks after being named to the committee, Weltner called for an investigation of the Klan. The next day the committee approved a preliminary inquiry. On March 17 the committee met again and agreed to continue the preliminary probe before making a final decision on a general investigation.

Inquiry Speeded

On the night of March 25, Mrs. Viola Liuzzo, a civil rights demonstrator, was shot to death in Lowndes County, Ala. The next day President Johnson went on nationwide television to announce the arrest of four klansmen (complaints against one have since been dropped) in the ambush slaying and to call for a congressional probe of the Klan.

The committee quickly responded by voting for a full-scale investigation. "We were headed in that direction anyway," said Weltner, "but the President speeded it up."

Weltner, who hopes to be named to the subcommittee which will conduct the investigation, has little patience with what he considers "knee-jerk criticism" of the committee by some liberals. Without bothering to check, he says, they "just say the committee does no good."

New Protective Rules

In the past the committee has been severely criticized for using tactics that tended to taint or smear innocent persons. Weltner said that while he disagrees with some of the committee's past methods, he believes that new rules, which provide for more closed-door testimony and give a witness a chance to refute any accusations before they are made public, afford ample protection for witnesses.

"The committee is extremely sensitive now about the need for avoiding the wide, shotgun attacks," he declared.

Weltner believes that if the investigation "is run properly," the information developed will so stigmatize the Klan, which already is scorned by the great majority of southerners, that it will find continued operations almost impossible.

"If the investigation consists of broad statements reiterating what's already known and a couple of public hearings and that's all, then it will have no effect," he said.

But if we can show the people the number of klansmen in the different Klan organizations, identify the klansmen and the location of klaverns (chapters) reveal the sources of financial support and disclose the acts of terrorism, then we can provide guidance for the people."

Klan Warning

Weltner said one reason Bogalusa, La., is experiencing racial turmoil is that "the Klan set the policy for that city." A fully informed public would not have permitted this, he said.

"You remember," the congressman said, "that Brooks Hays (a Presidential assistant) was invited by a Protestant church to make a speech in Bogalusa last fall. The Klan began warning against the speech and handing out cards saying "The Klan is watching you."

"The people were stampeded. The invitation was withdrawn."

Weltner said "the unknown quantity" caused fear among the people of Bogalusa. "Nobody knew how many klansmen there were or who they were or whether they were living next door. Their judgment would have been substantially different if they had known."

A committee report exposing the Klan could be a ready reference, he said, "so that the next time Brooks Hays goes out, say to Opelousas, La., if the Klan got active the people could look up the klavern and see that it was headed by an ex-bootlegger and that its members were a bunch of misfits. Then the people could decide whether they would be guided by that kind of people."

CONTINUING GROWTH OF THE KU KLUX KLANS

Since the beginning of May, 1965, the Ku Klux Klans in the United States have made new gains, carrying forward the upsurge in Klan strength that started late in 1964 and continued through the first quarter of 1965.

Last May, overall Klan strength was in the neighborhood of 35,000 to 45,000 activists. Today, it has jumped to about 51,000 -- a gain of anywhere from 6,000 to 16,000.

Furthermore, a close study of attendance at Klan rallies and public meetings in various parts of the South during the last half-year indicates a sharp increase in the size of audiences. Whereas six months ago a typical Klan rally might attract 200 to 400, today these convocations are attracting audiences of 1,000 or more. This suggests that in addition to gains in actual Klan strength, there has been a ground-swell of grass-roots support in the rural South for the Klan and that many more Southerners are pro-Klan than was the case six months ago.

Some knowledgeable observers of Klan operations suggest that in the last half-year, perhaps 55,000 to 75,000 persons in the small towns and hamlets of the rural South have been drawn into the Klan orbit as sympathizers of the Invisible Empire, over and above the 6,000 to 16,000 who have actually joined the activist ranks of the hooded order. These observers point out that audiences at Klan rallies in recent months have been far more sumpathetic to Klan speakers and far more vocal in their support than they were earlier. Fewer of those present, moreover, can be classified as mere curiosity seekers or observers.

There is evidence of a new trend in Klan activity -- the expansion of recruiting operations beyond the boundaries of the Deep South to other states -- Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, Delaware, Wisconsin, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Washington. The Invisible Empire has already recruited members in Ohio and Delaware; organizing in Kentucky, Indiana, Wisconsin, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Washington is planned or has started. The Delaware Klan has indicated it will accept Roman Catholics as members provided they take the Klan oath to rejct orders from any "foreign"authority.

Klan leaders have stated that they will have active organizations in 38 states by the middle of 1966. This claim is probably self-serving and exaggerated. There is, nevertheless, reason to believe that the Klans will continue to grow in the near future, as the nation continues to pass through the crisis generated by the thrust of the civil rights movement and as the Federal Government implements the far reaching Civil Rights legislation adopted by the Congress in 1964 and 1965.

Knowledgeable observers of Klan activity in particular and of the Southern scene in general give a number of reasons for the stiffened resistance of hard-core segregationists and extremists that has sparked the Klan upsurge now in full swing;

1) The denunciation of the Klans by President Johnson following the slaying of Mrs. Viola Liuzzo at the time of the Selma crisis.

2) Continuing reluctance of Southern juries to convict alleged perpetrators of violence in the racial crisis.

3) The investigation of the Klan launched by the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

4) Continuing publicity focussed on the Klan movement.

5) Continuing desegregation of public schools and places of public accommodation.

6) Continuing pressure of the civil rights movement.

7) The adoption this year of the Voting Rights Bill, and increased Negro voter registration in the South.

These developments, coming on the heels of earlier setbacks for the cause of last-ditch segregation, have hardened the resistance of extreme segregationists. They also have dealt a staggering blow to the White Citizens Councils, which tried to preserve segregation by litigation and by economic pressure and which, in the eyes of extremist elements in the South today, have failed. It is not surprising that the White Citizens Councils have turned their organizing efforts northward to California, Maryland, Missouri and other states.

Meanwhile, the Klans have been preaching race warfare as the only way of preserving segregation and have gained membership at the expense of the Councils whose strength and influence are declining. In effect, the Klans have been telling extreme segregationists in the South: "We told you so. We have the only answer to the problem -- race warfare."

The trend, in short, has been toward extremism in defense of segregation and growth in support of the Klans has been the result.

Maintaining its position as the largest of the various groups is the United Klans of America, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Inc., led by Imperial Wizard Robert Shelton, with headquarters in Tuscaloosa, Alabama. The United Klans now has members and supporters in 15 states, compared to nine states six months ago. The United Klans' strength today is 40,000 - 41,000, contrasted with an estimated 26,000 to 33,000 six months ago.

Of the 50,000 Klansmen now active, therefore, the United Klans control 75% to 80%. Almost all of the remaining 10,000 in the Invisible Empire are affiliated with the National Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Inc. which is headed by Attorney James Venable of Atlanta where the headquarters of this hooded order are located. Most of the strength of the National Knights remains concentrated in the state of Georgia, where there are 7,500 activists, plus a scattering of support in Alabama, Florida, South Carolina, Tennessee and Ohio.

Alabama, with United Klan strength of 11,000 and NOrth Carolina with 10,000, are the two strongest Klan states. North Carolina, in the last six months, has been the scene of a sharp increase in recruiting activity by the United Klans, headed by Grand Dragon James R. Jones. This state organization is the best run and most highly organized in the United Klan movement and, with six paid organizers in the field, has shown a gain in strength of approximately 2,000 to 3,000 in the last six months. Present plans call for a boosting of the paid field staff in North Carolina to eleven at the earliest possible date.

Shelton's Georgia operation is headed by Grand Dragon Calvin Craig and boasts strength of some 7,000.

The Shelton hooded order also has scored gains in Mississippi and Tennessee. In Mississippi, the independent White Knights of the Ku Klux Klan have been absorbed by the United Klans and is now 3,500 strong. In Tennessee, United Klans' strength has jumped by approximately 2,000. The gains in Tennessee were at the expense of the old Dixie Klan which fell apart when its leaders became ill. Raymond Anderson heads the United Klans in Tennessee.

A state-by-state rundown of approximate Klan strength is attached.

Cold Light of Truth on the Klan

Three positive accomplishments can be crafted from the Ku Klux Klan hearings of the House Un-American Activities Committee. First, legislation to control the Klan and its acts of violence may be written. Second, Southerners and other Americans who've been inclined to accept the Klan as of some value will be rudely awakened to the totally despicable nature of the organization. And third, the Klan itself may be so injured by the truth as to become a very, very minor platoon of semi-literate bed-sheeters.

Both Democrats and Republicans on the committee agree that legislation may be necessary. Congressman Weltner of Georgia says, "The end result might well be legislation to control acts of violence." Republican Congressman John Ashbrook of Ohio adds, "The committee will do two things. It will first lay before the public a complete, specifically detailed picture of the Klan. It will show that Klan violence follows a definite pattern and does not consist of isolated instances. And it will propose legislation to protect the public from this violence."

Congressman Ashbrook, who talked to fellow Republicans in Columbia a few years back, has a clear picture of the bizarre Klan. "The minute I walk into these hearings," he says, "it is like entering another world where all of the values meaningful to me—law and order, respect for your fellow humans, justice—all go out the window. You enter an eerie world where evidence of guns, beatings, exhortations to violence, hate, arson, bombings, shootings, blacklists, sugar in gas tanks, and night rides become commonplace."

Why does the Klan survive and why has it grown recently in South Carolina? Ashbrook says, "Because good people—and they are by far the majority—do nothing about the Klan. There is something else, however; a kind of mystique which is built up by their absurd sheeted costumes, their night riding, flaming crosses and violence, all designed to frighten the Negro and impress the uneducated whites. The Klan also seeks favor by loud denunciations of communism."

Many Carolinians, addicted to the silly and indefensible notion that the whole of the Negro protest movement is dominated by communists, actually believe that the Klan is dominated by communists, actually believe that the Klan is an opponent of this totalitarianism. On the contrary, Ashbrook believes that the Klan is "possibly the greatest ally of communism in the United States. That is because the Klan spreads hatred, suspicion, lies and racism—all of which make up the soil in which communism thrives. The Klan is doing the devil's work. Its so-called 'attacks' on communism are nothing more than a smoke screen for demagogues, and so tend to discredit those who are truly anti-communist."

The Klan is an agency of deviltry and hate, an abomination in the sight of the Judeo-Christian Lord, a desecrator of God by its words and acts, and is unworthy of the slightest sympathy by literate, reasonable Carolinians.

The hearings of the House Committee, we are certain, will bountifully substantiate this reiterated judgment of THE RECORD.

By MAX FREEDMAN

UNITED NATIONS — When the Pope delivered his excellent address to the United Nations, he disappoined some people by appearing to discourage efforts at birth control. We shall have to await the final decisions of the Vatican council to see if this impression is correct. It is clear even now, however, that the Pope was expressing a religious conviction held not only by Catholics but by many members of other churches.

The disappointment at the Pope's remarks was caused,

The hearings of the House Committee, we are certain, will bountifully substantiate this reiterated judgment of THE RECORD.

Indictment of Southern Justice

"Southern Justice: An Indictment" is the subject of a 31-page special report issued by the Southern Regional Council.

True to the character of an indictment, the paper is designed to convict. It charges offenses of racial discrimination against Southern judges, lawyers, law enforcement officers and juries.

It uses sample cases as blanket indictment of the region, but avoids mention of circumstances which might weight the other side of the scales of justice.

The report contains much truth, although the authors had to reach back three or four decades to get some of the material. It also contains some half-truths, which are the hardest kind of falsifications to combat.

Conclusions are that special federal protection should be provided for civil rights agitators, that a federal police force should enforce integration, that the Southern courts system should be integrated on a system of balanced racial representation, and that white Southerners should not be appointed to federal judgeships.

It suggests further that juries should have class representation as well as inter-racial composition. For example, an illiterate charged with a crime would be assured that the jury would have illiterate members, and a pauper's case would be heard by a jury that included paupers.

Virtually all the cases cited are from Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and North Carolina. South Carolina is mentioned only once in the book, and that paragraph is a half-truth that distorts an observation by the Governor of the state.

It says:

"Governor Robert McNair of South Carolina was quoted recently as saying that the real threat of increased Negro votes is not so much at the polls as on juries. He said that adding large numbers of Negroes to the electorate would put more and more illiterates on juries, and he saw that as unfortunate."

As written, this statement makes an interpretative assumption. What the Governor said was that the federally imposed abandonment of South Carolina's literacy standards would be more damaging to the jury selections than to the voting system.

He did not cite race, but since the federal government abolished literacy in target Southern states for the purpose of putting more Negroes on the registration books, the Council wrote its conclusion into the Governor's remarks. Most readers outside South Carolina will not understand that the Council's paragraph is a subtly written half-truth.

Federal Control on Highways

If South Carolina and other states continue their reluctance to meet their safety obligations to the motoring public, the federal government will step in and do the job for them.

The House of Representatives has already placed restrictions on federal funds for continued construction of the interstate highway system. It provides that any state which does not have a federally approved highway safety program by the end of 1967 will not receive further highway aids.

Conditions to be met will be set by the Secretary of Commerce and will cover such areas as driver improvement, correction of high accident locations and increased enforcement.

South Carolina is vulnerable. It had the highest road fatality rate in the nation last year.

Bold action for increased safety on the highways should be a high priority item for the state General Assembly.

By MAX FREEDMAN

UNITED NATIONS — When the Pope delivered his excellent address to the United Nations, he disappoined some people by appearing to discourage efforts at birth control. We shall have to await the final decisions of the Vatican council to see if this impression is correct. It is clear even now, however, that the Pope was expressing a religious conviction held not only by Catholics but by many members of other churches.

The disappointment at the Pope's remarks was caused, in part at least by the most unsatisfactory way in which President Johnson had formulated this problem in his State of the Union message. Supporters of birth control and planned parenthood were so grateful for any Presidential support that they tended to ignore the shortcomings in the President's statement.

Quality of Life

The President saw the problem entirely in economic terms. He spoke of the growing pressure of population on limited resources. He said nothing about the responsibility of parents to give their children a fair chance in life. As the discussion moves from the quantity of life to the quality of life, advocates of birth control will find that they have the understanding and the support of members of all faiths. In the United States very little progress can be made unless the religious judgment of the nation endorses the reform.

President Johnson made the additional mistake of assuming the very thing which has to be proved. He assumed that no new methods of production would ever be developed to take care of a much larger population. The Communists are less pessimistic. They have always maintained that the best way to control the population problem is not to limit population but to increase production.

President Johnson and other Western leaders, on reflection, will not prove less eager to put an immense emphasis on better production. The most useful policy would combine a search for better methods of production with reasonable measures of birth control.

Truman, Ike

President Truman used to scoff at the notion that any American government should concern itself with birth control. In much the same spirit President Eisenhower described birth control as a matter for the private conscience of the citizen rather than for the government. Both know better now. They have both supported the work and championed the objectives of the Planned Parenthood Foundation. The stand taken by President Johnson, while open to criticism on certain fundamental points, has nevertheless given great encouragement to the whole movement. In the Sen-

JACKSON, Miss., May 31—Medgar Wiley Evers likens his feeling during a racial demonstration to the reaction of a varsity football player. "I played football in college for four years," he said, "and no matter how many games you play, there is still a certain amount of butterflies. But the first time you tackle a man, your fear disappears. You're just in it." The husky 37-year-old Negro is now at the center of racial turmoil in this city. For nine years, he has served here as state field secretary for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Whether speaking to rallies or arranging bail for N.A.A.C.P. members arrested for picketing downtown stores, Mr. Evers gives evidence of his college training in business administration. He talks quietly and attends to small details.

But his strong feelings, like his unexpected smile, are never fully submerged by his methodical manner.

His 9-year-old son, for example, is named Darrel K. Evers. The "K" stands for Kenyatta.

"I named him for Jomo Kenyatta, now the Premier of Kenya, who was allegedly one of the leaders of the Mau Mau," Mr. Evers said somberly.

"At one time I was really violent," he continued, adding with a quick smile: "In thought, in thought."

Mr. Evers was born on July 2, 1925, in Decatur, Miss. He went through school in Newton County, Miss., and entered the United States Army in 1943.

At the war's end, Mr. Evers enrolled at Alcorn A. & M. University in southwestern Mississippi. Working as an insurance salesman after graduation, he joined the N.A.A.C.P. in 1952 and became a member of its staff two years later.

On Dec. 24, 1951, he married Myrlie Beasley. In addition to Darrell, they have an 8-year-old daughter Reena Denise, and another son, James Van Dyke 3d.

Mr. Evers recalls one college experience that left a deep impression:

"The president of Alcorn, a Negro, had discouraged us from trying to register to vote. He said we had no contribution to make to the community. I couldn't forget that."

Mr. Evers has other memories of practices he wants to eliminate before his own children repeat his experiences.

"A close friend of my dad's was lynched when I was 14 or so," he said, continuing:

"He was supposed to have insulted a white woman. His clothes stayed out in the pasture where they killed him for a long time afterward. You'd see the blood turning rust color."

The white officials who deal with Mr. Evers consider him an effective organizer. Although the name of his organization is anathema to them, they describe Mr. Evers as a reasonable and dependable man.

This grudging respect has not protected him from police harassment, however.

"During the first sit-ins here in 1961," he said, "I went to the trial and applauded the defendants. The police lunged in, and I was beaten over the head with a snub-nosed revolver."

Convicted for Contempt

On another occasion, in 1960, Mr. Evers was visiting a cousin when a judge ruled against a Negro in a civil rights case.

Sitting in the kitchen of his cousin's house, Mr. Evers wrote a statement condemning the decision and called the news services.

When the statement appeared in print, he was arrested, fined $100 and sentenced to 30 days in jail for contempt of court. The conviction was reversed by the Mississippi Supreme Court.

"When my sons are grown," he said in a tone that was faintly challenging, "they're going to find a season even better than New York City."

SUGGESTIONS FOR RECORDERS OF MEETINGS

Taking minutes of meetings has been termed "a necessary evil." Many recorders take voluminous word-for-word notes that are impossible to wade through.

The key to the problem of taking minutes lies in making a distinction between meeting CONTENT and meeting PROCEDURES. "Mr. Jones suggests we have a fund raising event, there is a discussion," etc. — these are PROCEDURAL things. FORGET THAT. You should get on-the-spot HIGHLIGHTS OF WHAT THE MEETING PRODUCES, not what goes on in the meeting.

Here are some "do's and don'ts" for you, Mr. Recorder:

DO

1. Record selectively.
2. Try such methods as labeling one column "problems," another "consensus," still another, "bright ideas."
3. In a meeting which tackles a problem or issue, state the problem, note the major points of agreement and disagreement, and the conclusions.
4. If you are in doubt about the group's opinion on a point, ask the group to check the accuracy of your record.
5. Try to organize for final presentation as you go along. This will not only clarify your understanding but will enable you to give an on-the-spot summary of discussion if the group calls for it.
6. Be ready to give a summary of what has gone on if the group requests it during the meeting.

DON'T

1. Try to take down all details of the process. (Concentrate on content)
2. Hesitate to ask the group to correct and amend your record where you are in doubt.
3. Use startlingly new language in summarizing discussion without asking the group if you have changed its meaning.
4. Fail to work with leader (or whole group) in planning what records are needed in this meeting and for later use. (By the way if you are Chairman, don't try to be the recorder, too!)

SUMMER VOTER REGISTRATION PROJECT

INSTRUCTIONS FOR HOUSE-TO-HOUSE CANVASSERS

As a precinct worker you have the opportunity of coming into contact with the grass roots of the local community. Your ultimate responsibility is:

A. DOOR-TO-DOOR-CANVASSING

1. Locate eligible voters who are not registered.
2. Get them to apply to register.

   (a) If person has made a previous unsuccessful attempt to register, encourage him to make another attempt.

   (b) Suggest attendance at nearby Citizenship Clinic.

B. Checklist of information you should have and things you should do BEFORE YOU START CANVASSING.

1. Know the physical boundaries of your precinct and your assigned working area.

2. Know the legal requirements for voter registration. Have this information with you whenever you are working your precinct.

3. Know when and where to register (exact address and hours and dates for registration).

4. Know date registration closes.

5. Have list of eligible voters in your assigned area. This is your basic working tool.

6. Know under what circumstances a person must register.

7. Know the period during which absentee ballots must be cast.

8. Know what services (babysitting, transportation, etc.) our organization offers and the pertinent details or where you can get such details (office address, telephone number etc.).

9. Have a supply of volunteer cards.

10. Have information leaflets.

    (a) Containing registration information during registration period.

    (b) Containing information on issues after registration closes.

11. Be sure you have a friendly and cooperative attitude.

12. Be sure your appearance fosters a good impression.

13. Before ringing a doorbell or knocking on a door, attempt to find out the name of the resident from:

    (a) mailbox or door name plate
    (b) the neighbor you just visited
    (c) the local registration committee of the Branch

    It is an advantage to be able to ask for a person by name.

14. Ask each person you visit whether other adults over 20 live at the same address and whether they are registered or have attempted to register.

15. Give information as to when and where to register.

16. Inform the person of the services offered by the NAACP Voter Registration Summer Project.

17. Check to see if the person will encourage some one else to register and assist in the campaign.

18. Tell the people about the Summer Project and the importance of every Negro registering. (Refer to Memphis where Negroes are now in elective office, Georgia with a Negro senator etc.).

19. Get the person's telephone number so that the telephone committee can give information by phone AFTER YOUR VISIT.

20. Immediately upon leaving and before going to the next house:

    (a) Write on your working list the names

(b) Be sure you have the telephone number
(c) Make a note as to whether the eligible voter in the house is registered.
(d) Be sure you have the correct address.

21. Turn in to precinct chairman or campaign headquarters

(a) All volunteer cards filled out by new workers you have recruited.

(b) Names and addresses and telephone numbers of all eligible voters whose names were not on your original working list.

(c) If your original list included names from sources other than the official list of registered voters, indicate whether these persons are registered or not and give telephone numbers.

22. Make arrangements for any services you have promised.

23. Arrange for follow-up calls to unregistered voters.

ORGANIZING YOUR COMMUNITY FOR A POLITICAL ACTION DRIVE

STEP I:

1. Prepare recommendations for a proposed structure for the campaign organization.

2. Consider recommendations for campaign coordinator and other key personnel, paid and volunteer.

   (a) If branch is able to donate the services of a full-time campaign coordinator, this will give a tremendous boost to the project and also strengthen the Branch's position within the community-wide organization.

3. Branch should make arrangements to furnish competent secretarial help for the first community-wide meeting and be prepared to offer such services for future meetings. Use a paid person, if necessary, to insure a competent record.

4. Give consideration to a possible location for campaign headquarters space.

   (a) Be sure that your recommendation includes all pertinent information such as availability and expense. Secure a donation of space if possible.
   CAUTION: Unless absolutely necessary, don't fall into the trap of accepting a donation of space which is otherwise not particularly desirable.

5. Give consideration as to whether the Headquarters should be staffed solely by volunteers or by paid personnel.
   NOTE: Any recommendation for paid personnel should include suggestions for obtaining funds to pay such personnel.

6. Prepare recommended guidelines for the community-wide organization.

   (a) You want to insure that the organization operates within the framework of NAACP POLICY.

7. Determine the desired goals of the first meeting (Suggested goals are listed later).

STEP II:

I. Set up a coordinating committee

   A. Convene a meeting of representatives from as many interested or potentially interested groups as possible, including:

      1. Churches
      2. Social and fraternal organizations

3. Service and other community organizations.
4. Labor organizations
5. Business organizations
6. Retiree organizations
7. Businessmens organizations
8. College students
9. Political parties
10. Professional or occupational groups such as: doctors, lawyers, nurses, cosmotologists, teachers, etc.

These persons will form the coordinating council.

II. Desired goals of first meeting are:

A. Determine overall campaign structure.

The following structure, discussed in more detail later, has been proven to be quite effective.

COMMUNITY-WIDE COORDINATING COUNCIL

CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT COUNCIL

ASSEMBLY DISTRICT COUNCIL

AREA COUNCIL

PRECINCT COUNCIL

B. Lay out purpose, guidelines and discuss overall program.

C. Study the election procedures in your community to see if liberalization of these procedures is necessary to facilitate the mechanics of registering. Unless your community permits deputy registrars to canvass door-to-door, the election procedures in your community need liberalization. Urge your local election officials to approve such procedures as:

1. Deputized registrars who can register door-to-door.
2. Establishment of registration facilities in such places as schools, police stations, fire stations, public libraries and recreation centers.
3. Permitting deputized registrars to work in shopping centers, churches, office buildings, plants and other places where large numbers of adults assemble.

D. Discuss means of involving as many people as possible in the campaign.

E. Discuss qualifications desirable in a campaign coordination. Begin getting suggestions for a person to be named as coordinator. If at all possible, the coordinator should be a full-time person (for small communities it may not be necessary to have a full-time person, but it is imperative to have someone who can devote regular hours to the campaign).

1. This is a budgetary problem which may necessitate prime consideration by the finance committee or perhaps you can get pledges of immediate contributions from among individuals and organizations represented on the coordinating council.

F. Discuss headquarter requirements and possible locations.

G. Begin getting suggestions for chairman of Congressional and Assembly District Chairmen.

H. Discuss what paid personnel is necessary.

1. Consider the possibility that some cooperating groups may be able to assign an experienced full-time staff person to work in the campaign.

I. Set time and place for a second meeting of the Coordinating Council, and arrange the mechanics of sending out notices.

J. Suggested Committees are:

Materials and Education
Housing
Speakers Bureau
Press coverage
Research
Finance and fund raising
Public relations and recruitment
Precinct operations (Register and get-out-the-vote)
(a) Baby sitting
(b) Transportation
(c) Telephone
(d) Citizenship Clinic

STEP III:

I. Desired goals of meeting are:

A. Select a chairman of Coordinating Council and a secretary.
B. Select a campaign coordinator.
(1) This is not the time to promote the welfare of your friends, try to get the best qualified person possible.
C. Select Congressional District and Assembly District Chairmen.
D. Select chairmen for committees on community-wide levels.
E. Set up a steering committee composed of Coordinating Council Chairman, Committee Chairmen, Congression and Assembly District Chairmen.
F. Further discussion of overall program and recruitment.

G. Set time and place for a general campaign meeting; ask each organization to get as many members as possible to participate.
(1) Ask each organization to assume a minimum quota (perhaps based on membership).

H. Give particular attention to duties and responsibilities of committees:

COMMITTEES

(1) Education - Plan campaign literature and/or determine what already available literature should be purchased by the group. Materials should include:

handbills, bumper stickers, leaflets, sample ballots where permitted and doorknob hangers, similar to the cards used by telegraph company to notify you of delivery when you are not at home. Print on it the facts about registration and voting or about the issue or candidate or perhaps about your campaign slogan.

(2) Speakers Bureau-

A. Recruit persons willing to speak before community groups.
(1) Have some central, well advertised place to which requests for speakers can be directed.
(2) Be aggressive in seeking engagements, remember you are the one with an idea to sell.

B. Prepare a speaker's kit containing information to be used by speakers.
(1) Prepare the text for several speakers. Remember some potential speakers don't have the desire or time to pore through reams of materials in order to prepare a knowledgeable speech.

(2) Prepare a list of questions and answers that a speaker can expect to be asked.

(3) Conduct several speakers clinics to serve as training for speakers.
(a) A good format is that of presenting speakers for and against the proposition with an opportunity for rebuttal and questions from the audience. This gives the potential speaker an opportunity to become familiar with the type of questions he can expect and to evaluate possible answers.

(3) Press Coverage and Publicity

Duties of the committee are to prepare press releases (to be approved by campaign coordinator for release) and to try to get as much press, radio and TV coverage as possible.

(a) Make all possible use of community service time on radio
 (1) Spot announcements
 (2) Inclusion of registration and voting information in regular programs.
(b) Try for appearances on interview programs on TV
(c) Use daily and weekly newspapers
(d) Use church bulletins
(e) Use organization newsletter
(f) Don't leave the coverage to chance. Plan a general press campaign with attention to what points you want to stress at what time.
(g) Consider the possibility of securing a column in the press.
(h) Try to get dailies to run editorials in support of your position.
(i) Try to get dailies to run feature articles
(j) Initiate a "letter to editor" campaign
(k) Ask radio and TV stations for free time
 (1) to present skits which emphasize registration and voting, and
 (2) talks by prominent civic leaders and/or officials.
(l) Ask organizations to insert information sheets in their regular mailing.
(m) Ask theatre managers to use "Register and Vote" slides between films.
(n) Ask businesses to include register and vote information in their regular advertisement.

4. Public Relations and Recruitment

All aspects of public relations, excluding press coverage. Major purpose of this committee is to encourage cooperation from all segments of the community and to recruit volunteer workers.

(a) Send persons to meet with various organizations to explain program and solicit workers. Don't stop at asking for on-the-spot volunteers. Ask each group to furnish a certain minimum number of workers based on its membership; this places upon the group the responsibility of putting pressure on its members to work in the campaign thus giving you the advantage to be derived from group loyalty.

(b) Set up a telephone committee to recruit workers by telephone.
 (1) Use a city cross-directory so that you can work in neighborhhods with the highest potential and so that you can solicit by blocks.
 (2) Ask groups to let you use their mailing lists.
 (3) Use a precinct register of voters, a list that can be secured from your election officials, Assemblyman or Congressman. People who are registered are usually more likely to work in a campaign than people who are not registered.

(c) Recruit by mail; use a reply envelope or fold-over card. A volunteers card may look like this:

I want to volunteer to work on registration and getting out the vote in my neighborhood.

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

CITY _____

PHONE _____

ORGANIZATION _____

Fill in the space below, only if certain of information.

CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT _____

ASSEMBLY DISTRICT _____

PRECINCT _____

This form should be memeographed and used when recruiting workers through organizations. Each precinct worker should have cards available to be filled out as he recruits new workers. Give cards to organizations that are requested to furnish workers.

(d) Get organizations and businesses to use the slogan "Register and Vote" on their mailing envelopes. This may be done by hand stamp, stamp meter machines or gummed labels.

(e) Use direct action techniques---have a register and vote march using appropriate signs etc. Involve a cross section of the community.

(f) Use buttons, ribbons and lapel cards. Imprint them with "I have registered" or "I will vote" slogans. Have all workers wear them. Issue one to persons who have registered and urge them to wear it on their lapels.

(g) Plan a campaign kick-off ceremony with dignataries. Plan rallies during a campaign. Always have volunteer cards available.

(5) Finance and Fund Raising

Every campaign takes money.

(a) Use whatever type of fund raising activity that might be successful in your community. These might include: pot-luck suppers, cocktail parties,barbecues, dances theatre parties, dinners, bean-feeds and shows.

Use your imagination. Best plan is to get some organization to put on these affairs.

(b) Solicit contributions from individuals, businesses, clubs, churches and other organizations.
(3) Consider a "Mother's March for Freedom". Select one day as Freedom Day. Publicize it extensively and have women volunteers canvass neighborhoods. (Be sure you comply with all city ordinances).
(1) Same idea is good for youth or any other group.
(d) Get contributions at rallies.

(6) Precinct Operations

This committee is responsible for setting up organizational structure on the precinct level and seeing to it that the precinct workers have all the aids and materials prepared for his use by other committees. Details as to organization will be considered later. Appropriate subcommittees are (at the precinct level these will be separate committees)

(a) Transportation: Recruit volunteer corp of cars and drivers to transport voters to the polls. If it is necessary to go to a central place to register, transportation must be furnished during the registration period. Have a well organized dispatch procedure.
(b) Baby Sitting: Recruit a corp of babysitters.

(1) Recruit volunteers to be dispatched to homes.
(2) Recruit babysitters within a block with whom children in that block may be left.
(3) Recruit homes in a block to which children in block may be brought to be cared for by babysitter furnished by you.
(4) Have well organized dispatch procedure.
(c) Telephone Committee: By election day, you should have compiled an extensive of potential voters from your precinct workers. The job of the telephone crew is to call persons who have not voted and urge them to go to the polls immediately prior to election day and remind them to vote on election day. On election day the telephone crew should telephone persons to see if they have voted and to urge them to do so if they haven't. In some preceicts, information as to who has voted is available. In this case, have someone to obtain this information and get it to the telephone crew. The crew then can limit its calls to the persons who have not voted.

The Telephone Committee should operate at full capacity during the week prior to close of registration and the week prior to election day. Prior to close of registration the committee should contact all persons whose names have not been checked off as having registered. Prior to election day, all registered voters with telephones should be contacted to offer them services and to give information.

(7) Research and Planning Committee: The duties of this committee include:

(a) Determining the geographical concentration points of the campaign by finding out the voting pattern of districts.

(1) Get past election results
(2) Get racial composition of District
(3) Find out what percentage of eligible voters in district were registered for last election
(4) Find out what percentage of voters actually voted. This information helps you to determine where your efforts might be most effective. Thus, an area that normally has a high percentage of voters does not require the effort needed in an area with a low percentage. Similarly, your effort would probably be less effective (as to yourultimate goal of the desired results at the pool) if you concentrated great registration effort in an area that consistently votes an undesirable (from your viewpoint) pattern. CAUTION: Don't overlook these areas, however, in your education campaign. You need to win converts.

NOTE: The information required may be obtained from election officials and census tracts. Your Assemblyman or Congressman or party official can give you instructions as to how to obtain this information.

(b) Determine area of concentration as to mechanics of casting the ballot.
(1) This information may be obtained by getting it from election officials; information as to number of void ballots cast in various precinctsduring last election.

(C) Determine division of workload.
(1) Determine boundry lines of districts and precinct. From this information work areas can be set up. This would include division of assembly districts into areas containing one or more precincts and division of precincts into smaller work areas.

MEASURING LEADERSHIP PERFORMANCE

Let's assume that we have reached a point in the Branch where we have decided that we want to learn to operate more efficiently. Perhaps the most helpful thing to do is to help the Branch take a look at itself and how well the leadership services necessary for an efficient operation are being performed. This can best be done by use of a checklist, such as the following:

The Branch can use this checklist, even without a tabulation of the results, as a discussion guide, the members going through it point by point, sharing their ideas about the answers to the questions and agreeing on steps to improve their meetings. I think that, perhaps, the greatest value of the checklist is that it is a training device in itself. Some groups have found it quite valuable to have an observer or team of observers make notes at their meetings. As simple type observation checklist could indicate the kind of information about five general aspects of groups funtioning.

THE CONFERENCE

It has been jokingly said that "A conference is a group of men and/or women who individually can do nothing but who must meet and decide that nothing can be done."

Conferences are generally classed as staff (investigate or find facts); production (solve problems); committee (determine policy); training (inform and instruct); interview (counsel and advise); large or multiple (other or mixed).

Although conferences differ in type and pattern of discussion, the place of a conference in our organization is primarily as a communication medium to insure communication downward and upward and to draw on members of a work group to contribute their knowledge and experience to the solution of problems, the determination of policy, and development of information.

PLANNING A CONFERENCE

Conference objectives are usually to (1) solve problems, (2) determine policy, (3) investigate, (4) inform or instruct. Many conferences fail for want of careful planning and preparation. Your next conference can be a success if you follow a series of systematic steps.

STEPS IN CONFERENCE PLANNING

1. Determine the purpose of the meeting.
2. Consider the participants or speakers.
3. Analyze the entire group.
4. Prepare a conference agenda.
5. Send notice to all invited to attend.
6. Arrange physical facilities.
7. Assemble necessary materials.
8. Prepare an outline for leading the discussion.
9. Prepare for participation (if a participant).
10. Plan for making a report of the results.

FACT FINDING & INFORMATION-SEEKING QUESTIONS

Where did the problem start?
How did it start (what, when, how, who, where)
When did it start?
Who are the people responsible?
How much does this cost us?
Money? Manpower? Materials?
How many people affected?
What are the causes?
Just what does it add up to?

OPINION-SEEKING AND VALUE-JUDGMENT QUESTION

Do you think this plan will solve the problem?
Is this practical?
What do you think of solution A? B? C?
Will Plan B remove the causes?
In your judgment, what is the best plan?
From your experience, will this work?

Note: The leader must also handle questions raised by group members which seek information. Such questions are usually aimed at the leader with the expectation that he will answer them. The leader should refrain from answering questions as much as possible, for this puts him in the role of "experting" and dominating the discussion. Such questions should be bounced back to the group by the leader in which he asks the question of the group as a whole. He may reverse the question back to the person who asked it with "That's an interesting question - what is your best judgment regarding it."

Leadership requires resourcefulness, initiative, imagination and skill. The foregoing information, properly used, should assist you in developing your skill in leadership.

THE WORKSHOP TRAINING PROCESS

Adapted from Adult Education Association
Leadership Pamphlet No. 9

Workshops and institutes, regardless of their subject-matter, are usually devoted to training their participants to do some job better, whether it be teaching English to adults, leading a community council, or supervising a production line.

Improving performance, is, therefore, a common goal for all participants in workshops and institutes. Listed below are 11 steps in the process of training workshop participants (who are referred to as "leaders-in-training"). The first column describes the steps and the second column suggests ways the workshop leader can help participants take these steps.

PHASE I - GETTING READY TO CHANGE

1. Develop an atmosphere in which people feel free to discuss and express their problems of leading, their needs to change, their feelings of difficulty the places where they need help.	Listen sympathetically to the ideas, suggestions, and feelings of all members. Play down status distinctions among members and between leader and members. Assume all members have a part to play in defining the aims of training. Try to make participation easy for every member.
2. Develop a sense of shared interests and a climate of mutual respect and understanding among members in which each is willing to help and be helped by the others.	Help all members to understand and appreciate the contributions of each. Offer opportunities for every member to help and be helped by other members (organize sub-groups, etc.). Encourage group activities outside of training (meals, social events, etc.). Try to show common elements in the leadership experience and problems of different members. Stress that the training goals are the members', not the leader's.
3. Develop an expectation that all leaders-in-training (and the training-leader too) will change during their experience together.	Tell about other successful projects in leadership training. Assume that change is possible and desirable for every member. Accept members' fears of change as natural. Encourage them to share in planning. Try to select realistic limits to what members expect to learn from their experience. Suggest relatively easy first steps to insure a success experience.

4. Adapt the training program to meet the needs and interests of all members in this particular group.	Build training agenda out of the expressed needs, interests and problems of members. Encourage members to test ideas expressed in terms of their own experience. Use examples of leadership situations similar to those of members. Set up a steering committee in which members can take part in determining what to do next. Give members an opportunity to react anonymously to each training session and suggest improvements.
5. Develop a problem-solving orientation toward difficulties of leadership.	Encourage members to state and look at their problems objectively. Avoid identifying problems with persons. Encourage group to identify common elements in their individual problems. Encourage group to analyze and define their problems. Discourage members from looking for ready-made and over-simple answers. Assume that group can fully test ideas expressed only as they try them out and evaluate the results.
PHASE II - MAKING THE CHANGE
6. Clarify the training goals - what members hope to accomplish through study, discussion and practice.	Involve members in defining goals. Try to be sensitive to feelings of confusion and to help group clarify confusions. Encourage expectation that goals will change as the training experience develops. Discourage efforts to freeze goals at the beginning of training.
7. Understand why leaders-in-training have been performing as they have been, the factors that make them want to change and those that make it hard for them to change.	Help members answer: How have we been performing as leaders? Why do we want to change? What keeps us from changing? How can we change? Discuss usual psychological resistances and supports to change. Discuss usual institutional or organizational factors for and against change.

A. Understand internal forces for and against change. B. Understand external forces for and against change.	Discuss community resistances and supports operating in the typical leadership situation. Help members apply psychological, institutional and community understandings to their own leadership situations. Use your own behavior as training-leader as an example for discussion and analysis of leadership problems. Ask for periodic group evaluation of group and member experiences.
8. Modify forces that will permit leaders-in-training to perform in an improved manner. A. Decide what changes we can make here and now. B. Plan what changes need to be made back home.	Help members pick out relevant psychological, institutional and community factors that can be modified most easily. Help members select things that can be worked on in the training sessions and those that will have to be modified later. Help members to determine a sequence of changed practice that will cause least disruption in their home settings.
9. Acquire and practice new skills which analysis of the leadership shows are most needed.	Set up opportunities, through role playing, for practice. Provide for practice in a setting where initial failure or imperfect performance is not too disturbing. Encourage helpful criticism by group of each member's practice attempts. Help group plan collection of data for evaluating practice experiments (use member observers, etc.)

PHASE III - TRANSFERRING CHANGES BACK HOME

10. Relate training to the actual situations in which the members will use it.	Use situations for training that seem real to the members. Help members generalize principles from their training experiences. Encourage testing of principles developed in training against the realities of the home leadership situations of members.
11. Provide continued re-enforcement and help in applying what has been learned in training on the job situation.	Encourage members to continue working as teams after training to help each other on leadership problems as they come up. Help members plan ways of getting support for improved practices in their parent organizations. Help members locate consultant resources available in their communities. Plan with members concerning their needs for further consultation and supervision.

SUGGESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION LEADERS

There are few hard and fast rules for discussion leadership. A good leader should be flexible in adapting his technique to varying situations. However, some general principles can be suggested as a guide to effective leadership:

1. Prepare thoroughly for the meeting. This involves:

   (a) Reading the basic material carefully.
   In addition, do a little outside reading if possible. You do not have to be an expert or provide the answers, but you cannot lead a discussion on a subject about which you know nothing.

   (b) Analyzing the material carefully and determining the boundaries of the subject.

   (c) Spotting the issues — those points on which there are likely to be differing opinions.
   Note these down, for they are likely to be the most significant and stimulating areas for discussion.

   (d) Preparing some questions.
   Frame your opening question carefully, and have a few others in mind. Keep the questions brief and straightforward, and phrase them so that they get straight to the heart of the issues. Be sure that they are not loaded; never ask, "Don't you agree that ...?"

2. Open the meeting.

   Give a brief introduction so that people have a chance to settle down and adjust their thinking to the subject of the evening. Then (unless there is a recording first) open the discussion with a question to the group.

3. Keep the discussion moving along.

   A good brisk pace is desirable, but don't move it faster than the group wants to go; patience is an important attribute of the good leader. Have some questions on tap, ready to throw in if the discussion lags. But don't ask your questions mechanically according to any rigidly prepared agenda. The best questions are usually those which can be shaped out of the discussion itself.

4. Encourage general participation.

   Don't let anyone take over and monopolize the meeting, and don't rely only on those who are always articulate and eager to talk. Try to bring in those who aren't talking by making them feel that their contribution would be welcomed by the group. But call on people by name only when you know that they are trying to get in, or when you are sure they won't be embarrassed by being called upon.

5. Try to bring out all sides of the question.

   If only one point of view is being expressed, ask the group to think of arguments that might be expressed for the other side of the question. If the other side is brought out in any of the readings, use short excerpts for this purpose. Remember that there is no attempt in these programs to produce a single "group answer" to the questions considered.

6. Help the group go about its task systematically. This involves:

   (a) Keeping the discussion on the subject. Some digressions may be fruitful, but only insofar as they can be related before too long to the main topic.

   (b) Taking up one issue at a time — although the first part of a meeting may be spent in exploring the subject and finding out which issues are important.

   (c) Helping the group bring out logical fallacies and errors of reasoning. It is one of the primary objectives of this program to improve the participant's ability to analyze problems systematically; and sometimes a sequence in systematic analysis may be followed. Nevertheless, it would be a mistake to try to push too hard or too fast along these lines; and the leader should not fit the discussion rigidly into a preconceived pattern, nor use cross examination where the result is to make people look foolish.

As you can see from the above suggestions, the discussion leader has a very positive and creative function, which keep you fully occupied during the discussion. This will mean that, with few exceptions, you should bear in mind the following cautions:

Don't give the answers. It is not your function to lecture or instruct. If there are answers, they are to be sought in the basic materials or from the members of the group.

Don't give your own opinions. It is very difficult to be impartial, and you may have strong opinions on the subject being discussed. Still, the same principle applies here as governs the conduct of the chairman under parliamentary rules or the moderator of the panel discussion. The reasons for these are:

1. The prestige of leadership may give your views a little more weight than anyone else's, and you will be using your position unfairly if you express your ideas.

2. Once you become involved as a protagonist, expressing and defending your own views, you will not have time to perform the real functions of discussion leadership.

BRIEF TIPS ON DISCUSSION LEADERSHIP

Listen carefully and don't talk too much. Whenever the talk is worthwhile without you, stay out of it. The less you become involved in the discussion, the more you will be able to observe its development and be ready to improve it when help is needed.

Be a leader, not a lecturer. Don't use people for the purpose of giving the right answer. The program is based on the discussion method. Don't turn the discussions into disguised lectures.

The best opening questions are less than about twenty words long. Don't make your first question so involved that no one is sure when you have finished just what the question is. Make it brief, tough, uncomplicated, and right to the heart of the problem.

Remain neutral whenever a good controversy exists within the group. The leader may have to play devil's advocate at times, but only when there is no other member to support one side of the argument. Never open the discussion with a statement in support of one side of the argument.

Never interrupt a good discussion, if it is relevant, to introduce a new and different question. If interest in the discussion is high, but somewhat off the subject, try to steer it on to a more relevant vein without cutting off the interest existing at the moment. That is, don't break the discussion, turn it.

Sympathetic listening is an important part of good leading. Good ideas, being profound, are often difficult to express. It is your job as leader to detect half-hatched ideas and coax them into their full development. Never scoff when someone is struggling with a tough idea. Help him to work it out.

Don't encourage hand-raising. A good discussion should be like a good conversation. No one raises his hand in the living room.

Avoid confusion. Don't ask more than one question at one time, and never permit two discussions to go on simultaneously.

Look interested. Nothing is more effective in maintaining the group's interest. On the other hand, a bored leader staring off into space will soon find the group adopting the same pose. Keep looking at the participants. Read their faces. Set the example of listening attentively and of asking critical and analytical questions in a friendly way.

NEW FRONTIERS IN THE TEACHING OF LISTENING

Listening Is in Part a State of Mind

Good listening implies the development of the ability to concentrate on the ideas being expressed, the application of good listening habits, and the desire to hear and to understand.

Be Ready To Listen. This includes physical readiness and mental readiness. Adapt to the atmosphere of the situation. In church emotional readiness for the sermon requires a different attitude from the after-dinner, contest, classroom, or club speech. You can prepare yourself physically by an alert posture, mentally by a sense of expectancy.

Want To Listen. You may feel impelled to try to understand, especially if what the speaker says has or may have an effect on something vital to you. On other occasions, as in class or club, you may feel trapped or that it is the job of the speaker to be interesting. Listening is work because it includes thinking and concentration. Unless you really want to share the speaker's ideas, you may listen half-heartedly and probably inaccurately.

Have In Mind A Purpose. One's goal in life affects the way he lives it. The way we swing a golf club, or drive a car, or write a letter is largely determined by the purpose we have in mind. Our listening is also affected by some motivating factor. Unconsciously perhaps, you have a reason every time you listen to what someone says. It may be involuntary or you may have a clearly defined purpose. Most purposes are predominately one of three types:

a. To be informed

b. To be critical or analytic

c. To be creative

The first of these is obvious; you want to learn something that you think the speaker can provide. It is similar to the way we read directives, reports, and most non-fiction material. We want to be better informed.

The second purpose predominates when we plan to evaluate or to formulate a critical judgment. We are concerned with content and the logic or selection of developed data, not just to acquire information, when we listen critically, we intend to form opinions, make judgments, and evaluate overtly or privately. This is the kind of listening you will do primarily when you anticipate using one of the charts in this manual.

The third type of listening is predominant when you go beyond the speaker, when you lend to his contributions experiences of your own that support or disagree with his. It is a type of silent discussion. You react mentally, emotionally, and perhaps physically. You may have noticed how children often react with their whole bodies as they listen with delight or fear. When the adult listens creatively he also feels a part in what the speaker says.

These are general purposes, but they can help to give your listening a focus. You can generally predetermine your reason for listening and frequently you can decide exactly what you hope to do.

Find areas of interest. If you know your general purpose in listening, you may find areas of interest easier to identify. Attention is vital, and attention can most successfully be maintained when you are interested. Seek to be interested in the subject; try to discover the significance of the subject; let your mind become curious about the topic and the way the speaker develops it.

Sometimes we may excuse our listening ineffectiveness by calling the subject uninteresting or by criticizing the speaker's delivery. Sometimes we may hear a point that excites us, stirs our imagination, and we will stop listening in order to think about all of the implications that the idea might have. We lose interest in the main stream of the speaker's ideas.

In successful listening it is important to develop the ability to be interested. In most instances the very act of attempting to listen will increase interest. Sometimes it helps to ask ourselves, "Why is this speaker addressing this audience at this time on this subject? Why did he select this information, this argument, this manner of persuasion, this means of explanation, this pattern of development?"

Most people find that much greater attention can be given to a book they are reading if they are seeking answers to specific questions. Raise questions in your mind that the speaker may answer in his talk; guess what kind of an approach he will take toward an issue; guess where his line of discussion will lead and then watch to see if you are correct.

Try To Understand - But Don't Try Too Hard

Almost all mental skill is achieved by effort. Don't expect the speaker to do all of the thinking. You will need to work with him if you are to get the most from his presentation. The more you try to understand, the more easily you will learn. Even in conversation, you will become more proficient as you try. It is effort that induces learning; experience alone is not enough.

Have you ever watched a three-ring circus and found that by watching one ring you missed other events which might have had even greater interest? There are times when the listener also becomes so attracted by a speaker's choice of words, his accent, or his manner of speaking that he misses the ideas. We can tense up mentally as well as physically. When we listen well, we need to be poised and alert, ready to leap from idea to idea, ready to receive and to analyze.

Keep An Open Mind. Listen and be willing to hear. If you are annoyed by diction, the use of a word, an error of statement, note these but don't fade out. Listening does not mean believing; it means being able to understand so that a fair judgment can be made. The speaker must realize that his listeners are forming opinions about him when his information is questionable or his arguments are specious. As a listener, part of your talk is to evaluate what you hear. It is possible, even probable, that frequently we do not hear what is actually said. We "hear" what we hope or expect to hear and then we react to our assumption instead of reality. The effective listener seeks to understand, to judge, to accept or reject, and to remember; he "hears" - Hears, Evaluates, Accepts, Remembers.

Certain Suggestions Can Help in Listening

Listen for Ideas. Most speakers develop a single central idea. They use facts, stories, illustrations, and other ideas to support the main thought - and it is the main thought that the listener must grasp. It is so important that every chart used in this manual asks you as a listener to identify the principal point the speaker was attempting to express. Other charts help you in this identifying skill by considering the pattern the talk follows, transitions and means of development. Basically, the question to be answered by the listener is "What did the speaker actually say?"

Rarely will you be told, "The central idea that I am developing is ..." Whether the purpose is made obvious or not, it should remain the focus of the talk and determine the selection of supporting material. Listen for the ideas as they are presented and seek to discover the principal idea toward which they point.

Listen Between the Lines. You have undoubtedly noted in letters from friends an emotional quality that is not fully expressed in words. Playwrights frequently depict characters by what they do not do or do not say. A good listener needs to note the obvious omission of points as well as those stated if he is to understand most fully both the speaker and his idea. This is especially true when there are certain qualities in the speaker's voice or appearance that cause you to feel a sense of uncertainity in his presentation. Speech has many subtle vocal changes that may tell you more than the speaker's words convey. You can identify the comment that is flattery and the one that is sincere, and you must also be able to note the implications of the omitted comment.

Let the speaker know you are listening. The comic character in cartoon or play listens on the phone with his contribution limited to, "Yes, Dear." In some situations a smile or a nod of the head provides the speaker with helpful encouragement. Applause is generally a statement of approval. In discussion you may preface your comment with, "Now, as I understand you. . ." Some form of overt signaling to the speaker helps in listening. It is difficult to respond in any intelligent manner without remaining alert. And one must be alert to listen well.

Listen in Context. The proficient listener will seldom consider any presentation as an isolated event. When we see a dog or hear a train whistle or talk to a friend or eat a meal or become involved in any other fairly common event, we are likely to relate that with some past similar event. We evaluate in terms of past experiences. Listening to the speech of others is no novelty to any of us. But the habit of relating what we hear to what we have learned on other occasions may not be very thoroughly developed. Our major basis of evaluation is one of comparison. As listeners, our concern should be not only with what the speaker says, but also with how his statements compare with others we have heard.

Watch for Sign Posts. This habit of relating the comments of a certain speaker with previous knowledge will lead the listener to watching for signposts. Although we may have travelled in many cities, our visit to each one is a new experience. But we know from past experiences that almost all cities have street signs and directions. By watching for the signs that the speaker uses to indicate his line of thinking, we can follow him more readily and understand more fully the message he is attempting to communicate.

Anticipate. This habit also gives us the chance to discover the path that the speaker is travelling so that we can leap ahead to a certain point and watch him as he approaches. When we are able to do this, we are able to see the discussion from more than one point of view and to evaluate the ideas much more accurately.

Use Your Time Efficiently. We have much time to think as we listen. A sophisticated and intelligent listener has spare time at his disposal when he is listening to a communication that is easy for him to understand--that is, he can handle the concepts faster than the talker is sending them. Think circles around the speaker if you really want to find him interesting and to understand what he means. One way is to engage in the activity just described--identifying the inferences and discriminating between them and the statements made by the speaker.

Another is developing more efficient ways of handling the information sent us and fitting it into our established meaning structures. We can use this spare time to examine our direction of attention and realign it with the purpose we have in listening. Or we can use it to make note of the way our own biases are filtering the talker's words.

Avoid Distraction

Distractions occur so easily. A distant radio, the shifting of a class or club member, smoke, in fact any noise or movement, pleasant or unpleasant, may cause you to think about something else.

Internal distractions - The way you feel today, what happened yesterday, your plans for tomorrow, your unknown biases can all interfere with your listening.

Our reaction to the speaker's method of presenting his ideas whether the situation is an interview, conversation, discussion or a formal address needs to be considered from at least two points of view. The speaker may have a pronounced dialect, or a heavy, unusual accent; therefore, we weigh his comments with our attitude toward persons whose speech is different from ours. This fellow has a speech defect; he has a lisp, or a poor voice, or his speech is "mushy." Our reactions to his speech mannerisms may influence our reaction to his ideas. Any speech condition that tends to call unfavorable attention to itself may affect our listening.

Influence - Usually the enthusiastic speaker will cause us, as listeners, to be enthusiastic with him. There is the reaction known as empathy which causes us to tend to give back to a person the same spirit that he is exhibiting. We tend to react to sincerity with sincerity. If the speaker through voice and gesture carries us with him, we may find that we are listening to him rather than to his ideas. Some speakers shout most loudly when they have the least to say. Some speakers may cover the debris of thought or lack of thought with beautiful words. As efficient listeners, we need to avoid reacting against a person because of the way he speaks as well as to avoid "being taken in" by technique.

Emotional symbols - Some speakers, especially in propagandizing or in emotional persuasion, lean heavily upon slogans and commonly accepted generalities in order to lead the listeners into belief. As you listen, check yourself occasionally to see if you really agree with the speaker, or disagree, or whether you are allowing preconceived prejudices to determine your attitude. Effective listening requires an open mind and a willingness to delay judgment.

Make a habit of careful listening. Start listening now and don't stop. To improve, do some difficult listening every day. You may select a lecture, a radio or television commentary or program, a Sunday Service or even a serious discussion with your friends. Stretch that listening skill. If you read simple stories, your skill as a reader will remain pretty static. If you seldom do more than the basic requirements of your job you'll never advance very far. The same applies to learning to listen well.

Good listening comes from the combination of skills, attitudes, and knowledge. There are certain basic principles which are important and some things we should avoid as barriers to effective listening. Good listening implies the development of the ability to concentrate on the ideas being expressed, the application of good listening habits, and the desire to hear and to understand.

Listening can and should be a humanizing process. For example:

a. Listening courteously to the other person may help reduce his tensions, help him to get problems off his chest and to keep hostility from arising within him.

b. Listening may help another to clarify his own thinking about a matter. Often when we talk something out we can understand it better.

c. Mutual problems can frequently be handled best if both parties listen to each other. An intelligent disagreement requires mutual respect and willingness to listen.

d. Listening can help you win friends, not only because the other person appreciates your interest in his ideas but also because you learn to understand him better.

e. Knowing what and how the other person thinks can help you to work better with him.

f. Knowing more about a problem can aid in decision making. The man who says, "Don't bother me with facts, I've already made up my mind," may illustrate the humorous side of the executive who fails to listen to his consultants and colleagues. When you ask another what he thinks, you should listen to the reply.

g. If you listen intently and intelligently to arguments either from an opponent or from a collaborator, you can think with more data and act with more confidence. It is not selfish to seek assurance.

In a general way, the process of "humanized" listening can be encompassed under a half dozen headings:

a. Listen without your fears, worries, problems, and other emotions influencing what you hear.

b. Listen without wearing your judgments on your face. Of course, it is impossible to enter a conference or listen without some tentative opinions, but don't broadcast your opinion too soon.

c. Share some of the responsibility for communication with the speaker. Try to understand both his attitudes and ideas.

d. Remember that even people whom you do not greatly admire may have some very worthwhile things to say. React to ideas rather than to the person who expresses them.

e. Note not only what is said but how it is said and the implications involved. The emotional status of the speaker may be vital to his statements and his desires.

f. Listen to others as people. Little profit can come from antagonizing those to whom you listen either by interrupting them or by making too evident that you do not understand or agree. Withhold not only judgment and conclusions but also your overt attitudes, until you are fully aware of idea and intent.

Listening is a mental and emotional contact with others. The definition of successful listening includes the human element of one "who is able to follow, heed, trust, evaluate or enjoy what he hears." To this should be added that successful listening is a large part of successful living.

It has been a pleasure and a privilege to share with you some of my thinking about my favorite subject--the teaching of listening.

PLANNING AND ASSIGNING WORK

OBJECTIVE: To emphasize the importance of planning branch operations and to help branch officers learn how to use the planning formula in directing the branch's operation.

To learn the factors to consider in assigning tasks and responsibilities to individuals.

For Your Notes

A. WHAT PLANNING IS

B. WHY PLAN

C. KINDS OF PLANNING

D. HOW TO PLAN

IN ORDER TO DO EFFECTIVE PLANNING, THE BRANCH OFFICER NEEDS TO:

1. Understand the organization of which his unit is a part

   --Relationships up the line, with other units, with technical staff.

   --Possible affect of action by his staff on work of people elsewhere.

2. Appreciate the objectives - general and specific of:

   --Association
   --Region as a whole
   --State or Area Conference
   --Local Branch

3. Know what is expected of him and of his branch:

   --Areas of activities

   --Degree to which he is responsible for developing or proposing solutions to problems.

   --What he may, or should, or should not delegate to -stand in or substitute
   -other staff in unit

   --What tasks must be done in the unit
   -monthly
   -at regular intervals
   -at no stated time

   --How long it takes for staff or committees to perform different tasks if they are -experienced
   -fairly new
   -still in training

   --What qualitative standards of performance have been set or has he set himself.

   --The capacities, skills, limitations of individuals who report to him in relation to what the unit is expected to achieve.

   --The tools and materials he will need to do the work.

PLANNING WORK SHEET

WHAT, WHY	HOW, WHEN, WHERE	WHO	HOW WELL

Cautions in Making Assignments

1. Get acceptance of the assignment by:

   --Giving the individual time, in advance, to consider the pros and cons
   --Giving him reasons for and importance of the assignment
   --Telling him why he was selected
   --Meeting his objections and resistance. Remember these may be because he is not happy on his present job, or because he feels he is being demoted or being asked to do work out of title

2. Do not take the "easy way out" by doing any of the following:

   --Imposing on the willing, cooperative workers who accept assignments without question
   --Giving or avoiding the giving of hard assignments to the problem or lazy workers
   --Giving the best assignments to favorites
   --Calling for volunteers too often; this gets good results usually but the volunteer may not be the best person for the assignment
   --Relying on the principle of rotation; this gives staff maximum chance for development and may solve some of the problems just mentioned, but often involves an extensive training job.

Criteria for Planning

Signals to Watch For:

Experienced, as well as new branch officers, sometimes find their plans are not working out. Situations such as the following may be "signals" to you pointing out faults or errors in your planning.

--Lack or shortage of materials, equipment
--Backlogs in work production
--Frequent need for reorganization
--Too many and unwarranted emergencies
--Misunderstanding, confusion
--Inadequate training
--Avoidance or postponement of disliked tasks
--Committee members not happy or adjusted in assignments
--Dissatisfaction, low morale
--Adverse criticism from public, state conference, regional or national office.

PROBLEMS IN ADMINISTRATION

OBJECTIVE: To learn how to handle branch problem situations.

For Your Notes

Human Relations Principles

Attitudes and the Branch Leader

The Branch Officer

The job of the Branch president is to get results through the efforts of others.

The results of your Branch activities can be no better than the sum of the accomplishments of the individual committees in the Branch.

A Branch committee chairman's accomplishment is greatly influenced by his attitude (his will to do).

Therefore, the Branch president, to meet his responsibility to get and maintain satisfactory committee and individual accomplishment, must give attention to:

Committee Chairman - Natural Ability (Aptitude)
Training and experience
Physical condition

Materials

Methods

Attitude

Equipment

Only by giving attention to all these factors can the Branch president meet this responsibility for controlling the effectiveness of his Branch as an Arm of the Association in the Civil Rights struggle.

Sources of Problems

Problem Solving Pattern

Notes on Cases Discussed

Things to Remember in Handling People

1. Learn self-control.

2. Recognize good work and praise it.

3. Take a real interest in others.

4. Make people feel important.

5. Get people to work for rewards rather than to avoid punishment.

6. Criticize sparingly, gently, and constructively.

7. Listen; hear the other fellow's full story.

8. Explain thoroughly.

9. Put yourself in the other fellow's place in passing judgment.

10. Be fair and tolerant in all matters - and toward everyone at all times.

11. Review with committee chairmen at regular intervals how they're doing--their successes and their failures.

12. Be genuine.

13. Most leaders have the faculty of gaining confidence without becoming intimate with individuals. This avoids personal entanglements and the obligations they impose. Most leaders are, therefore, in a position to deal fairly, squarely and impartially with their men on the sole basis of their individual merits.

14. Most leaders are incapable of intense hatred, grudges or bitter quarrels, and are not conscious of enemies.

15. All leaders suggest rather than order.

SIGNS OF LEADERSHIP

1. A low voice and, frequently, slow and thoughtful speech.
2. A neat appearance in moderate style.
3. Rarely in a hurry.
4. Easy gait and moderate pace.
5. Does not show all he feels and thinks.
6. Looks you squarely in the eye without staring.
7. Punctual.
8. Orderly.
9. Accurate.
10. Decent.
11. Laughs only when he means it, and then under control.
12. Rarely interrupts.
13. Rarely says "I".
14. Is not afraid to have others think he doesn't know when he doesn't.
15. Rarely tells everything he knows.
16. Makes sure you know the difference between his opinions and his facts.
17. Easy to meet and easy to leave.
18. Enjoys a contest of wits and a game of chance.
19. A good loser.
20. Bored with too much logic.
21. Is not usually a heavy reader.
22. Hard to sweep off his feet.
23. Quickly gets to the point.
24. Never takes himself too seriously.

25. Does not like to do things himself; likes to do what he does through others.

26. Likes people.

27. Likes to read.

28. Has assurance.

29. Not inclined to sit still for long.

30. Good memory.

It would be hard to conceive of any human meeting all of the specifications for leadership we have listed. Personally, I doubt very much whether any such person ever lived. While an examination of ourselves in the light of these specifications might be somewhat depressing for the time being, in the long run a knowledge of our weak spots should be our first step in strengthening them.

In spite of our efforts to turn out good production work, we know for a fact that none of it has ever been perfect. That is why we have manufacturing limits, high and low.

DECISION-MAKING

(Adapted from "The Leader Looks at Decision-Making" by David S. Brown)

WHAT IS DECISION-MAKING?

Decision-making is the process by which individuals and/or groups of individuals attempt to adjust their ideas and actions to outside factors which are believed likely to have influence on them. It may involve a personal action, such as the decision to wear a blue or a white shirt to work; or an organizational one, such as introducing a new product line. It may be important (initiating a new stock issue), or relatively consequential (choosing the color of the cafeteria walls).

Decisions provide answers to questions, whether they are actually asked or not. Some of the more common of these are the following:

* What, specifically, is needed?
* What quality (or type, pattern, style, etc.)?
* What quantity?
* What are the time factors? The priorities?
* How much will it cost? Can we afford it?
* What procedures or methods will be used?
* Who will do what? Do they understand this? Do they agree?
* How does this fit with organizational objectives?

ANALYZING THE DECISION-MAKING PROCESSES

An understanding of how decision-making takes place in an organization is fundamental to improving it. It is useful, therefore, to analyze decision-making processes with respect to four elements which seem to encompass the cycle of a decision. They are:

1. Background Factors in Decision-Making - Background factors involve not only the basic objectives of the organization, but also the manner in which these are related to each man in his particular job. This is more than what people say-it is what they do, The President is more than what the Branch Constitution defines him to be. The relationship of the officer to his fellow officers and members is something that each lives and feels. He knows what they approve, what they disapprove, and what they are indifferent to-and he is guided accordingly.

2. The Problem of Perception in Decision-Making - Each member of the organization sees events and persons in the light of his own experience. Individual perception therefore becomes very important in understanding the decision-making process.

   It involves also the individual's view of the organization and the organization goals. (What, for example, are the association's objectives? How does it seek to accomplish them?) In a more analytical way, it probes into areas of problem recognition and factor identification.

   A good mechanic is not satisfied with a motor because it happens to be running satisfactorily at the moment. He is concerned with its future performance as well. Those of us in organizations must also be concerned with future behavior-with what is likely to happen. Our ability to recognize problems and potential problems is a mark of our sensitivity to organizational performance.

It is also important to identify the factors that bear upon the problem. This involves analytical as well as perceptual skills, but our analytical ability depends to a large degree upon prior perception of what is taking place.

It is possible for an otherwise competent administrator to have grave deficiencies in this area. He may not see, for example, that the organization is changing, bit by bit as in the building of an ant hill; or that "little decisions" are remaking "large purposes". Or he may not understand how (and why) this is occurring. These are among the most common failings of managers.

In such cases, facts are replaced by assumptions. We assume that things are well because the balance sheets are favorable ("After all, the motor isn't knocking"). We assume that Bill is doing his job properly because no one has complained. We assume that "God's in His Heaven and all's right with the world" because there is no evidence to the contrary.

As any mechanic knows, such assumptions can be but an engine throb from disaster.

3. The Analytical Processes in Decision-Making - Once a problem has been perceived, attention ordinarily turns to its analysis, where the traditional approach assumes the "decision" is ordinarily made.

The process of analysis involves asking a variety of questions. What is the problem? Are we sure? What will happen if nothing is done? Is this good or bad? What is my role with respect to it? Is this the kind of a problem that I should decide, and then inform others? Or is it something that I pass along with information and recommendations to a higher echelon? What are the alternatives? Which is the best?

A satisfactory approach to problem analysis involves (a) problem recognition (b) factor identification (c) prognosis (d) listing alternative courses of action (e) weighing and testing possibilities (f) selection of the most appropriate course of action, and, finally (g) relating the decision to action on the total organization.

4. Action and Reaction - Far more emphasis has been placed in most organizations upon the making of the decision than upon its actual implementation.

Logically, no decision should be made without considering how it is to be implemented-the procedures and how they are likely to work, as well as the roles which various persons are to fill, and in what priority. It should take into account the current assignment of those involved, as well as their skills and their willingness to use them.

The action processes also involve communications-communications not only of ideas down the line once agreement has been reached, but also communication up (if the decision has been made at a lower level), and communication across, obliquely, and even tangentially. Sometimes communication needs are great; sometimes modest. Whatever they are, they should be taken into account.

Attention should also be given to determining what takes place after agreements have been reached. For some, this will be interpreted as determining that the action has been carried out as intended. Those who are more realistic will realize that the decision will probably require continuing modification as time goes on; and that this can be done adequately only where the information is available to all parties to the decision.

IMPROVING THE DECISION-MAKING PROCESSES

An administrator can improve the decision-making processes by:

1. Understanding organizational objectives
2. Understanding what is going on in the organization
3. Understanding the role of the individual
4. Clarifying problem areas and issues
5. Improving problem-solving skills
6. Strengthening internal communications
7. Clarifying the relationships between decision-making action
8. Improving the working relationships at all levels.

GUIDELINES FOR IMPROVING DECISION-MAKING

1. There are no one-man decisions in an organization. Any kind of a decision will eventually involve others.

2. Even those at the lowest echelons of the organization, drawing the lowest pay, may have a significant influence upon what takes place.

3. If the client ultimately determines the shape of the organization, then those dealing with the client become persons of substantial influence as well.

4. Problem-solving and decision-making can be improved not so much through the improvement of the individual executive's performance as through finding ways and means by which others may be involved.

5. The time and attention given to the involvement of others may be costly, but not so costly in the long run as the failure to carry out properly the decisions of the organization. This failure is the price that is nearly always paid by autocratic administration.

6. Just because you don't see the slow-down, don't conclude it isn't there. Sometimes a slow-down is of such a nature that even those most involved are not aware that they are failing to give their best.

7. There are many blocks to effective organizational performance. The intelligent administrator will try to understand and remove them.

8. Communication is the medium through which the various posts of the organization-top, bottom, and across-are helped to understand each other. No organization can be really effective without an effective communication system.

9. It is usually more dangerous to act without sufficient knowledge than to slow down the processes while information is being obtained.

10. There is no "decision-making type", just as there is no single "leadership type". The person in an executive position will do well to understand what others expect of him in a problem-solving way-and also how others see their own roles in the process.

11. Don't expect that your organization can change too rapidly from "poor" problem-solving is good. Whatever change takes place is likely to gradual. Give it all the time it needs.

12. Finally, people will support what they help to create. If they are invited into the decision-making process, they are likely to feel more responsibility for the decisions that are made.

LEADERSHIP DEVELOPMENT INSTITUTE

What Type of Leader Are You?

The following quiz can reveal to you in approximate terms the type of leader you actually tend to be. Answer all questions as honestly and as accurately as possible. Where the question asked has no ready answer from your experience, indicate what you believe you would do in the situation described.

When you have completed the quiz, go on to the directions for scoring, and the analysis will be given by your instructor.

	YES	NO
1. Do you "enjoy running the show"?	____	____
2. Generally, do you think it's worth the time and effort to explain the reasons for a decision or policy before putting it into effect?	____	____
3. Do you prefer the administrative end of your leadership job - planning, paperwork, and so on - to supervising or working directly with your subordinates?	____	____
4. A stranger comes into your department and you know he's the new employee hired by one of your assistants. On approaching him, would you first ask his name rather than introduce yourself?	____	____
5. Do you keep your people up to date on developments affecting the group, as a matter of course?	____	____
6. Do you find that in giving out assignments, you tend to state the goals, leave methods to your subordinates?	____	____
7. Do you think that it's good common sense for a leader to keep aloof from his people, because in the long run familiarity breeds lessened respect?	____	____
8. Comes time to decide about a group outing. You've heard that the majority prefer to have it on Wednesday, but you're pretty sure Thursday would be better for all concerned. Would you put the question to a vote rather than make the decision yourself?	____	____
9. If you had your way, would you make running your group a push-button affair, with personal contacts and communications held to a minimum?	____	____
10. Do you find it fairly easy to fire someone?	____	____
11. Do you feel that the friendlier you are with your people, the better you'll be able to lead them?	____	____
12. After considerable time, you dope out the answer to a work problem. You pass along the solution to an assistant, who pokes it full of holes. Would you be annoyed that the problem is still unsolved, rather than become angry with the assistant?	____	____

13. Do you agree that one of the best ways to avoid problems of discipline is to provide adequate punishments for violations of rules? ___ ___

14. Your way of handling a situation is being criticized. Would you try to sell your viewpoint to your group, rather than make it clear that, as boss, your decisions are final? ___ ___

15. Do you generally leave it up to your subordinates to contact you, as far as informal day-to-day communications are concerned? ___ ___

16. Do you feel that everyone in your group should have a certain amount of personal loyalty to you? ___ ___

17. Do you favor the practice of appointing committees to settle a problem rather than stepping in to decide on it yourself? ___ ___

18. Some experts say differences of opinion within a work group are healthy. Others feel that they indicate basic flaws in group unity. Do you agree with the first view? ___ ___

YOUR SCORE

To get your score, indicate the number of yes answers you had for the following groups:

I: 1, 4, 7, 10, 13, 16

II; 2, 5, 8, 11, 14, 17

III: 3, 6, 9, 12, 15, 18

If you had most "yes" answers in Group I, chances are that you tend to be an autocratic leader.

If your total of "yes" answers was highest in Group II, you probably have a predisposition toward being a democratic leader.

If Group III is the one in which you show the greatest number of "yes" answers, you are probably inclined to be afree-rein leader.

Dear Friend:

How long must the Negro citizens of the South be subjected to murder and intimidation in their struggle to achieve freedom? How long will the authorities -- federal and state -- permit the brutal murder of civil rights workers to go unpunished? How long will Klan-dominated "lily-white" juries set free the brazen criminals who have perpetrated these disgraceful crimes?

The answers to these questions concern every one of us, Negro or white, wherever we live. At stake is the very core of American morality and justice.

On January 10, nightriders in Hattiesburg, Mississippi, killed Vernon Dahmer, a local NAACP leader, in a pre-dawn firebomb attack on his home and his grocery store. Only by a miracle did Dahmer's family escape death. Dahmer had been leading the local drive to register Negro voters. Ironically, four of his sons are members of the U. S. armed forces.

This "Crime Against Civilization," described in the enclosed Washington Post editorial, is but a single link in the shameful chain of lynchings and assassinations designed to obstruct the Negro's drive for full freedom. In August, NAACP leader George Metcalf was critically injured by bomb throwers in Natchez, Mississippi. In December the homes of NAACP leaders were bombed in Charlotte, North Carolina.

Those who believe in freedom for every American MUST FIGHT BACK. Efforts are already under way to define such attacks on civil rights workers as a federal crime. There is only one enduring answer to the bomb throwers and the other cowards -- one meaningful memorial to the martyrs in this struggle: to register every qualified Negro we can reach.

Through the tax-exempt NAACP Special Contribution Fund, we are seeking $385,000 to mount the most massive voter education campaign in the history of the South. Our goal is to register at least 800,000 new Negro voters by Election Day next November. Only in this way can we attain our freedom and exercise it meaningfully.

I implore you to contribute to this historic undertaking. Please make the most generous possible contribution. It will aid the families of the bomb victims and it will help to liberate the Negro from Southern bondage and brutality.

Sincerely,

Roy Wilkins

MR. CHAIRMAN AND MEMBERS OF THE COMMISSION:

My name is Herbert Hill and I am Labor Secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People whose national office is located in New York City at 20 West 40th Street. I wish, first of all, to thank the Commission for this opportunity to appear and to present testimony on the urgent need to eliminate the pattern of discrimination in the building and construction trades industry of New York City.

In New York City and elsewhere in this state, high public officials are calling upon the Negro community to observe law and order, but the entire body of federal, state and municipal anti-discrimination laws and executive orders is being nullified as a result of non-enforcement in the construction industry. The failure to enforce civil rights laws and executive orders is directly contributing to the growing civil rights crisis in New York City and in other urban communities throughout the state and nation.

The public demonstrations at major public construction sites by the NAACP and other civil rights organizations in New York City during 1963 and 1964 after years of futile negotiations with representatives of the building trades unions have had only one purpose -- that is, to get the laws against racial discrimination in employment on public works contracts enforced.

The rights that Negro workers have been seeking through these demonstrations are non-negotiable legal rights that exist at the federal level through Executive Order 11246 (previously 10925 and 11114) and now because of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

At the state level, by virtue of the New York Civil Rights Law and the State labor law, both of which specifically prohibit discrimatory practices by labor unions and employers on the grounds of race and color and at the city level by Section 343-8 of the Administrative Code which prohibits discrimination by contractors doing business with city agencies. The failure to enforce this extensive body of civil rights law constitutes a classic example of the administrative nullification of anti-discrimination statutes and executive orders.

The irony is not lost upon the Negro citizens of Harlem and Bedford-Stuyvesant or of Rochester, Syracuse, Albany or Buffalo for that matter. They have noted that high government officials who piously demand law and order are the same public officials who refuse to enforce the law in protecting the rights of Negroes against discrimination in employment. This can no longer be permitted. Public officials at every level of government must immediately enforce the letter and spirit of civil rights laws with special emphasis as they relate to the construction industry.

In this industry, especially in the craft occupations, trade union racial practices are the decisive factor in determining the status of Negro workers. The basic operational characteristics of craft unions in the building and construction trades is that they control access to employment by virtue of their rigid control of the hiring process. In this industry labor unions control the assignment of union members to jobs. The refusal to admit Negroes into membership simply denies Negro workers opportunities to secure employment. Quite frequently Negro craftsmen denied union membership are totally excluded from work in white residential neighborhoods and new commercial construction. This means that skilled Negro workers are restricted to marginal maintenance and repair work within the Negro community and that they are seldom permitted to work on the larger and more desirable construction projects.

All state and municipal construction contracts contain a clause, pursuant to Section 220-e of the New York State Labor Law which states: "That in the hiring of employees for, the performance of work under this contract or any sub contract hereunder, no contractor, sub contractor, nor any other person acting on behalf of such contractor or sub contractor shall by reason of race, creed, color or national origin, discriminate against any citizen of New York State..." Section 220-e which became law in 1935 has never been enforced.

Paragraph 296 of Article 15, 1-a (a) and (b) of the Executive Law of 1945 which established the State Commission for Human Rights reads in part as follows:

> 1-a. It shall be an unlawful discriminatory practice for an employer, labor organization, employment agency, or any joint labor-management committee controlling apprentice training programs:
> (a) to deny or to withhold from any qualified person because of his race, creed, color or national origin the right to be admitted to or participate in a guidance program, an apprenticeship training program, on-the-job training program, or other occupational training or retraining program.
> (b) to discriminate against any qualified person in his pursuit of such programs or to discriminate against such a person in the terms, conditions or privileges of such programs because of race, creed, color or national origin.

Paragraph 296 of Article 15 of the Executive Law prohibiting racial discrimination in apprenticeship training programs has never been enforced. The State Civil Rights Law declared that the opportunity to obtain training and employment without discrimination is a basic civil right, but this has not been enforced in the construction industry of New York City and State.

The city of New York adopted a law in 1945, Section 343.8 of the the City Administrative Code, requiring in addition to what is called for by Section 220-e of the State Labor Law, that each city construction contract contain a provision which states that discrimination in employment because of race, creed, color or national origin constitutes "a material breach of the contract," and that the city may cancel such contracts. Not a single contract has ever been cancelled and this law has never been enforced.

In addition to prohibiting racial discrimination in employment, on state and municipal construction projects, New York State Law also specifically bans racial discrimination by labor unions. Section 43 of the Civil Rights Law states "no labor organization shall hereafter directly or indirectly, by ritualistic practice, constitutional, or by law prescription, by tacit agreement among its members, or otherwise, deny a person or persons membership in its organization by reason of race, creed, color or national origin." Violation of this law is punishable by fines up to $500 and jail sentences up to 90 days. This law has never been enforced.

Amendments to the National Labor Relations Act adopted by the Congress in 1947 have clearly outlawed the closed shop. Under federal labor law union membership must not be a condition of employment. Closed unions operating closed shops through the device of union hiring halls which refer only union members to jobs, is clearly a violation of the National Labor Relations Act, but this law has never been enforced in the construction industry in New York City.

The contract of the Board of Education of the City of New York contains Article 64 on pages 21 and 22 of the printed contract which states that:

> In the hiring of employees for the performance of of work under this contract or any sub contract hereunder, neither the contractor, sub contractor, nor any person acting on behalf of the contractor or sub contractor, shall by reason of race, creed, color, or national origin, discriminate against any citizen of the State of New York who is qualified and available to perform the work to which the employment relates.
> Neither the contractor, sub-contractor, nor any person on his behalf, shall in any manner discriminate against or intimidate any employee hired for the performance of work under this contract on account of race, creed, color or national origin.

This contractual provision and similar provisions in other municipal contracts have never been enforced.

The Labor Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959 clearly outlaws the closed shop. The statute specifically prohibits making initial employment dependent on union membership and bans discrimination in hiring hall arrangements as well as other discrimination based on an employee's membership or non-membership in employment.

Such exclusive hiring hall arrangements, which in reality constitute a "lily white" closed shop, are in violation of the decision of the National Labor Relations Board in the case of Astrove and Plumbers Union Local 2. In this decision the NLRB explicitly established the legal concept that a union has no right to establish union membership or any other qualification as a condition for employment and that labor unions may not exclude Negroes from membership and prevent them from being employed in public construction. The law established that only the employer can determine qualifications for employment and that any other test is illegal.

Labor unions that engage in discriminatory practices are violating their duty of fair representation as established by the law and may have their certification as exclusive collective bargaining agent revoked. Thus, basic federal labor law is violated in New York City because of exclusive hiring hall arrangements, either formal or informal, between contractors and labor union, and the NAACP will have no choice but to take appropriate action on behalf of Negro workers as indicated by the law.

The announcement by the New York City Board of Education on September 5, 1966, regarding 17 new public schools built at a cost of 58.9 million dollars means that the city has again used public funds, including the tax dollars of its Negro citizens, in violation of its own municipal code and state and federal laws. The fact is that not one public edifice has been constructed in New York City during the last half-century which has not been the work of labor provided by craft unions which systematically deprive Negroes of the right to work in the craft jurisdictions they rigidly control. It is, of course, also a fact that such discrimination is expressly forbidden by a comprehensive body of federal, state and municipal laws.

Failure to enforce the laws by public officials makes a mockery of the law and breeds contempt for it. The high public officials who do not enforce anti-discrimination statutes and contractual provisions are at the very least as guilty of breaking the law as the person who throws "Molotov cocktails" during disturbances in the ghetto.

The question arises has there been any racial discrimination in violation of the statutes I have cited, and does is still exist? Does the broad pattern of discriminatory practices continue in the skilled trades, on public construction projects in New York City? The answer to both these questions is yes.

The economic structure of the building industry is unusual in that it concentrates in local craft unions the power to decide who obtains employment and who gets admitted to the craft. Men engaged in construction work are recruited from labor pools controlled by the various unions in the craft jurisdictions in the building trades. By virtue of exclusive hiring hall agreements, contractors must rely entirely on pools of available workers in each trade and are completely dependent upon the local unions for their labor supply. Thus, the economic characteristics of the industry provide the soil in which racial discrimination flourishes.

The broad pattern of Negro exclusion and other discriminatory practices by the building trades unions of the AFL-CIO in New York City has been documented again and again. I will cite but a few instances. On August 1, 1963, the New York State Advisory Committee of the United States Commission on Civil Rights released a report that sustained the charges made by civil rights organizations that a variety of anti-Negro practices were characteristic of the building trades unions in New York City. The Report was based on a seven month investigation of the industry by Dr. Donald Shaughnessy of Columbia University and stated that:

> Negroes are denied access to employment in most of the building trades in New York City...the retention of present practices of admission to apprenticeship programs will mean that Negroes can expect no more than token participation in most of the building trades in the future.

The Report also noted that "out of town construction workers commute over 100 miles daily to jobs in New York City while local Negroes and Puerto Ricans are denied employment and entry into union dominated apprenticeship programs." Dr. Shaughnessy's study noted, for instance, that Local 2 of the Plumbers Union, AFL-CIO, with 3,300 members did not have a single Negro member but as a result of an acute labor shortage in its jurisdiction had brought in 1,000 out-of-town white plumbers to work on new construction within New York City.

On December 13, 1963, the New York City Commission on Human Rights after an extensive series of public hearings and investigations of the racial practices of New York building trades unions issued an official report entitled "Bias in the Building Industry." The Commission said it found "a pattern of exclusion in a substantial portion of the building and construction industry which bars non-whites from participating in this area of the city's economic life." By restricting the right to become an apprentice to sons and relatives of its members, the Report of the City Commission explains that unions thereby automatically exclude Negroes since few have ever belonged. Union members view this position as a source of "job security" and proclaim that they do not discriminate against Negroes but only against non-members. But this particular form of "union security" results in the systematic exclusion of Negroes and Puerto Ricans as a group.

On March 4, 1964, the New York State Commission for Human Rights ruled that Local 28 of the Sheet Metal Workers Union had "automatically excluded" Negroes over the entire 78 years of the union's existence. This was held to be a violation of the New York State Law Against Discrimination and the Commission issued an order for the union to "cease and desist from such discriminatory practices." The order was sustained by a state Supreme Court to which the Union had appealed the Commission's decision. This case is of particular historical significance because in 1948 the New York State Commission had ordered the New York Sheet Metal Workers Union, Local 28, to desist from "executing and/or maintaining constitution or by-law provisions which exclude Negroes." But 17 years later the Commission found that absolutely no progress had been made, although the "caucasian only" clause was removed from the Union's constitution apparently for public relations purposes only. This is indeed a very dubious example of "progress."

On August 24, 1964, the New York State Supreme Court, in a historic decision, struck down the legality of the traditional father and son membership arrangement in Local 28. (Lefkowitz v. Farrell, C-9287-63, N. Y. State Commission for Human Rights, 1964.) Justice Jacob Markowitz, in his decision, declared that the law and "the realities of today's society" require that labor unions abandon all apprentice selection plans which "could be used directly or indirectly to discriminate against any person on the basis of race, color, creed or national origin."

Because similar father and son arrangements and other forms of nepotism within labor unions have had the effect of excluding all Negroes from membership in many labor unions and from admission into union controlled apprenticeship training programs, a request was made by the NAACP national office on August 28, 1964, to Donald Slaiman, director of the AFL-CIO Civil Rights Department, requesting that the Federation endorse the decision of the New York State Supreme Court and that admission practices based upon nepotism be declared a violation of AFL-CIO policy. It was further requested that the Federation require affiliated unions to take action against these and related discriminatory practices in New York City and elsewhere. The NAACP never even received the courtesy of an answer from the AFL-CIO, nor has the Federation taken the necessary action on this matter, although the decision of the State Supreme Court provided an excellent public opportunity for doing so.

Mr. W. Willard Wirtz, United States Secretary of Labor in his address to the AFL Building and Construction Trades Department Convention in New York City on November 7, 1963, stated that the U. S. Department of Labor > conducted a survey earlier this year on federal projects in some fifty cities...On most of these projects there were no Negroes employed either as journeymen or as apprentices in a majority of the skilled trades.

In regards to New York City the Secretary of Labor stated that > there are two largebuilding trades locals in New York City with a total membership of about 4,500 - which have no Negro members. A question exists as to whether another local with a membership of 3,300 has any Negro members. There are comparable situations in many other cities. (W. Willard Wirtz, Labor and the Public Interest, Harper and Row, New York, 1964, pp. 111-112.)

On June 2, 1965, the National Labor Relations Board held that Local 2 of the Plumbers and Pipefitters Union in New York City had violated the National Labor Relations Act and invalidated the provisions in the union agreement giving job preference to union members. This case involving four Negro and Puerto Rican plumbers denied employment on the Bronx Terminal Market construction project when unionized white plumbers, members of Local 2 of the Plumbers Union, refused to work with the nonwhite plumbers and forced a work stoppage on this New York City construction project in 1964. On May 12, 1966, the United States Court of Appeals granted the Board's petition to enforce its order of June 2, 1965 which required the Plumbers Union to compensate the nonwhite workers for income losses sustained because of the refusal of union plumbers to work with them.

Among the most important of the authoritative studies of the discriminatory racial practices of building trades unions was the extensive testimony before hearings of the special sub-committee on labor, January 15, 1962 and published as Equal Employment Opportunity Hearings before the Special Subcommittee on Labor of the Committee on Education and Labor, House of Representatives, 87th Congress, 2nd Session, Part 2, Washington, D. C., Government Printing Office, 1962, pp. 718-744.

The 1961 Employment Study of the United States Commission on Civil Rights investigated the national pattern in the building trades unions and reported that:

> None of the construction unions surveyed have racially restrictive provisions in their constitutions or by-laws. Most however, require that an applicant for membership be approved by the local before acceptance. It is clear that the absence of Negro members in the 'lily white' construction locals means that few, if any, Negroes will be employed in these highly paid craft jobs on union construction projects. Obviously then to the extent that union membership practices are discriminatory, they deny employment opportunities to Negroes on racial grounds. (Employment, U. S. Commission on Civil Rights, 1961, Washington, D. C., p. 131.)

The Employment Report of the U. S. Commission on Civil Rights also noted that many building trades unions:

> Openly practice racial discrimination in their membership policies. Local union officers have been known to explain the absence of Negro members in the following terms: 'Nigras are all afraid of electricity...Jews and colored folks don't want to do plumbing work because it is too hard'. (Ibid, p. 130.

Gunnar Myrdal in his classic study, An American Dilemma makes the following comment, which has as much validity today as it did in 1944:

> The discriminatory attitude of the organized building crafts is the more significant at present, since they dominate the American Federation of Labor...a circumstance which is behind the reluctance of this organization to take any definite action against exclusionist and segregational practices. (Myrdal, An American Dilemma, Harper & Bros., New York, 1944, p. 1102.)

Myrdal also observes that:

> The fact that the American Federation of Labor as such is officially against racial discrimination does not mean much. The Federation has never done anything to check racial discrimination exercised by its member organizations. (Ibid., p. 402.)

At the present time in New York City the basic construction industry labor force consists of 255,000 workers organized into 122 local union affiliates operating in 18 jurisdictions and affiliated with the New York City Building and Construction Trades Council of the AFL-CIO. Approximately two-thirds of these may be classified as skilled, that is, requiring an apprenticeship training period of from three to five years before a worker is a fully qualified journeyman. The rest are unskilled, or at best, semi-skilled, that is, they are classified as non-apprentice trades and it is here that the great majority of Negroes are concentrated.

The incontrovertible fact is that in New York City, Negro membership in building trades unions is limited with some few recent exceptions to the unskilled and semi-skilled unions such as the common laborers, the house wreckers, the trowel trades and to the Carpenters' Union, including the segregated Harlem local of the Carpenters' Union, that is, Local 1888, which has 300 Negro members with less than ten whites.

But in the major skilled craft local unions which have established some of the highest wage rates in the city, the pattern of Negro exclusion remains intact and it is precisely in these jurisdictions that there exists exclusive union hiring hall arrangements which prevent Negro workers from securing equal job opportunities. I do not deny that there has been some small measure of progress, but a close examination of the nature of this progress indicates that it is extremely limited, that at best it might be regarded as a mere token adjustment, a strategic accommodation to the requirements of the law and to the increasing pressures of the Negro protest movement.

On July 13, 1963, The New York Times, after reporting on the Mayor's special panel investigating racial discrimination in the building trades, commented editorially that, "Negro participation in the building trades is less than two percent, concentrated in the low paying jobs. The high paying jobs including steamfitters, iron workers, metal lathers and plumbers, are trades pretty much off limits to non-whites." This pattern has not changed.

As a result of action by the NAACP during the 1962 contract negotiations between Local 3 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the Contractors Association which created an unusually large number of apprenticeship openings, Negroes for the first time were admitted into the apprenticeship training program controlled by this union. However, it would be interesting to know four years later exactly how many Negro workers currently hold membership in the "A" card division, that is, in its jurisdiction of new construction work that is rigidly controlled by Local 3 which has a membership of over 36,000. The two major Plumbers locals in New York City, with a combined membership of some 7,500, have during the past four years admitted 25 Negro journeymen between them and a small number of apprentices. Here too, I would have to raise the question of how many of the newly admitted Negroes are "A" card holders engaged in new construction work and how many are "B" card holders limited to repair and maintenance work. But as far as I can determine in many other important craft unions among them the Iron and Structural Steelworkers, the Steamfitters, the Metal Lathers, the Rodmen, the Elevator Constructors, the Operating Engineers, the Glaziers and the Asbestos Workers, in these and in most other skilled craft jurisdictions, less than a beginning has been made. Thus, after more than a decade of public demonstrations, mass picket lines, litigation in the courts, the filing of complaints with federal, state and municipal administrative agencies, "Action Panels" that led to no action, broken promises from high state and city officials, interminable studies, surveys, public hearings and investigations, a few isolated, symbolic breakthroughs have been made involving a small number of Negroes, but this does not constitute real, genuine progress and the pattern of anti-Negro practices continues.

It is the rate of progress that counts and the rate of integration of Negro workers in the skilled craft unions of the building construction industry in New York City is slower than the rate of integration of Negro children in the public schools of the South during the past decade. A major test of the rate of progress is to be discerned in the number of Negroes participating in union controlled apprenticeship training programs. In the past, Negro participation in these programs has remained consistently very low and relatively constant in relation to the growth of the Negro population in New York City.

According to the New York State Advisory Committee of the United States Commission on Civil Rights, in 1950 Negroes constituted 1.4 percent of the building trades apprentices and 13 percent of the population in New York City. In 1960, Negroes comprised two percent of the apprentices and 22 percent of the population. Based upon all of the available demographic data, we may assume that nonwhites of New York City now comprise more than 25 percent of the city's total population, but there has been no corresponding percentile increase in the number of Negroes involved in union controlled apprenticeship training programs. At the present time over 45 percent of the population of the Borough of Manhattan is nonwhite. Given the increase in the Negro population of New York City, the percentage of Negroes in apprenticeship training has actually decreased in relation to their percentage in the total population. With a very few exceptions, including Local 28 of the Sheet Metal Workers Union which admitted a small number of Negroes as a result of a court order, no significant changes have taken place in the pattern of exclusion.

On August 26, 1965, President Lyndon Johnson signed into law a 3.3 billion dollar Public Works and Economic Development Act. At the ceremony in the White House East Room where he signed the law, President Johnson warned that "the clock is ticking, time is running out." The President called attention to the fact that the law he had signed would provide funds for vast public construction projects through a program of grants and loans to many cities and towns where the President said, "too many men have been out of work too long." The President noted that long-term unemployment among Negroes has been a major factor in recent racial disturbances in Northern ghettos and called upon cities and states to assume their responsibilities to provide equality of opportunity for all American citizens.

Negro wage earners in New York City and in other metropolitan areas in urban New York State and elsewhere in the nation are denied full and equal participation in the various public and private construction programs because the "lily white" AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades craft unions retain control of job opportunities in th the construction industry. This is done by making union membership a condition of employment and then by excluding Negroes from membership and from union controlled apprenticeship training programs. Although Negro workers more than any other group in the labor force qualify for participation in public works programs, they are not permitted to share in the new employment opportunities in this expanding sector of the economy, because of the collusion between building contractors and construction labor unions which give the craft unions job control.

Given union control of the hiring process and of apprenticeship training programs in the building trades, it is no longer possible to regard racial bias by labor unions as simply a private matter involving "voluntary associations" or of a "quasi-sovereignty" as Robert M. Hutchins describes American labor unions today. Such discrimination is a fundamental social barrier to the entire Negro community and certainly no less serious than segregation in the public schools which the U. S. Supreme Court has declared to be unconstitutional. It is now clear that the intervention of the larger community through the instrumentality of law and law enforcement has become necessary to remove discriminatory practices by labor unions as well as employers.

Periodically, the public relations spokesmen for the building trades unions issue alleged statistical information in an attempt to "refute" charges of racial discrimination. This is frequently done by lumping together the membership figures of both the skilled craft unions which are almost completely white and the membership figures of the unions of unskilled workers which are predominantly Negro. Thus they equate the membership of the virtually all-Negro House Wreckers Union with that of the highly skilled all-white Iron Workers or Steamfitters locals. Using this device the New York City Building and Construction Trades Council has in the past released undifferentiated membership information that is deliberately calculated to mislead the public.

The NAACP's demand is for job equality for Negro citizens in the highly skilled well paid craft jurisdictions which have been traditionally "lily white". We are not arguing about unskilled low-paying menial dead-end jobs which have, in fact, always been open to Negroes and in which Negroes continue to be concentrated. Negroes have always been window-washers, house wreckers and common laborers. But Negroes have not been plumbers, steamfitters, electricians, sheet metal workers, operating engineers, millwrights, lathers, elevator constructors or mechanics in the other skilled craft occupations.

Representatives of organized labor have frequently stated that unemployment among unionized white workers prevents the immediate integration of the labor force and that Negro workers must wait for some far distant future when there is full employment in order to be admitted into union controlled apprenticeship training programs or as journeymen into union membership. The assumption that all the white union members must first be fully employed before Negroes can be permitted to work, the notion that white workers have a prior right to a job is an expression of the racist mentality within the craft unions and permeates a section of the leadership of the AFL-CIO in New York City and elsewhere. Unfortunately, it is also shared by too many public officials. These assumptions have no basis in law and certainly not in any concept of morality. For many long hard years Negro workers have disproportionately shared only unemployment. The time has now come for Negro workers to share in whatever employment opportunities there are at present and in the future.

While I am not unaware that there is temporary seasonal unemployment in some specific crafts (this is a characteristic of the industry), the building and construction trades industry in New York City represents an expanding part of the economy. On December 13, 1965, the United States Department of Commerce reported that outlays for new construction would reach an all time high of about 72.7 billion dollars in 1966. The F. W. Dodge Company, Inc. reported on December 12, 1965 that July contracts for future building in metropolitan New York totaled 180.3 million dollars and represents an increase of 4 percent over the previous year. Non-residential contracts of 101.7 million dollars were up 13 percent. According to the Dodge Company which maintains the most accurate data on these matters, in the seven months preceding August 1, 1966, total building contracts for the New York City metropolitan area were: 1.188 billion dollars and represented an increase over the previous year. But Negro workers do not share in this prosperous sector of the American economy because of the built-in institutionalized discriminatory practices of the building trades craft unions.

Thus, Negro workers are prevented from acquiring not only the rewards of high wages, but also of status, the status that is directly related to holding meaningful and productive jobs.

The obscene game of adopting civil rights laws to please the victims of discrimination, and then not enforcing these laws to please the politically powerful discriminators, must now stop. The building trades unions have used their vast political power to secure an immunity from the enforcement of civil rights laws and this too, must finally come to an end.

The concept of passive non-discrimination is now totally inadequate and obsolete, especially in relation to the building trades unions in New York City and elsewhere where Negro workers have been systematically and deliberately barred from membership for many generations. The burden is clearly upon these unions to accept the affirmative obligation of active large-scale recruitment among Negroes. This is a practical and realistic possibility, but it has not been carried out.

Each year thousands of Negro students are graduated from New York City high schools who qualify for admission into union controlled apprenticeship training programs.

A truly meaningful trade union civil rights program would require representatives of the AFL-CIO to actively recruit Negroes through all the institutions of the Negro community. Once the doors are really open, Negroes in significant numbers will then begin applying of their own volition, but given the tragic history of rigid racial exclusion, the burden is clearly upon the unions to engage in broad efforts to include Negroes in their membership and in their training programs. Just as Negroes have been deliberately and systematically excluded, so now unions have the obligation to deliberately and systematically include Negroes in apprenticeship training programs and as journeymen members.

When the AFL and the CIO merged in 1955 resolutions were adopted committing the merged labor federation to the rapid elimination of racial discrimination by organized labor. But now, a decade later, the reality for Negro workers is significantly different from that anticipated at the time of the merger. The status of Negroes in the skilled craft unions in New York and elsewhere is clear proof that the AFL-CIO has not kept its public commitment to eradicate racist practices within affiliated labor unions. Obviously, a policy that is not enforced is not a policy. It is worthless.

Because the quality and quantity of vocational and technical training is a basic element in fundamentally changing the Negro's economic status, effective methods must now be taken by all agencies to eliminate current racial restrictions both overt and covert that prevent the admission of qualified Negroes into apprenticeship and other training programs, public and private, concerned with effective manpower utilization in the national economy.

Although racial discrimination in apprenticeship and in other training programs has been outlawed by a significant body of state and federal civil rights laws and executive orders, all the data clearly indicates the persistence of a broad national pattern of racial discrimination in the vital area of apprenticeship and vocational training. Craft unions have the power to promote or prevent the admission of individuals of an entire class of persons into skilled occupations. By formal and informal controls, craft unions are frequently the decisive factor in the recruitment process for apprenticeship programs and often directly prevent Negro youths from becoming skilled craft workers.

On the level of the small shop and local union the traditions of racial discrimination have become deeply institutionalized, a form of caste psychology that impels many workers to regard their own positions as "white men's jobs" to which no Negro should aspire. These workers and, often, their union leaders regard jobs in their trades as a kind of private privilege to be accorded and denied by them as they see fit. Often, Negroes are not alone in being barred from such unions which attempt to maintain an artificial labor shortage. This is especially true in the building trades craft unions which do not function as modern American labor unions in an advanced technological society, but rather as narrow protective associations obsessed with job control and arbitrarily restricting the available supply of skilled labor. Thus, the building trade craft unions have much in common with medieval guilds.

The following proposals, if accepted as basic public policy by the municipal government and vigorously enforced, would have the effect of fundamentally altering the broad pattern of discrimination in the building and construction trades industry. Further token adjustments involving one or two Negroes, are totally unacceptable to the NAACP and to the entire civil rights movement. Fundamental changes in the status of Negro wage-earners are necessary and can be substantially achieved through the following Four point program:

1. OPEN HIRING

Under the law only management can determine a worker's competence for employment. Membership in a labor union especially one that discriminates against Negroes, must not be considered a condition for employment. All qualified, competent workers must be given an equal chance to obtain employment in construction projects financed by public funds. This is clearly stated in the law and the city has the responsibility to protect the rights of its citizens, especially in municipal construction. Hiring must be open to all who are qualified at the gate, not through a restrictive "lily white" union hiring hall.

2. CONTRACT COMPLIANCE

The city must refuse to award contracts to construction companies and contractors that use discriminatory union hiring halls or referral lists as the exclusive source of labor supply. The contractor must not be permitted to obtain immunity from federal, state and municipal civil rights laws and evade compliance with the anti-discrimination provisions of public contracts by turning over the hiring function to a third party who is not a signatory to the contract. Pre-award contract commitments for open hiring must be obtained from all municipal contractors and frequent compliance reviews should be made by the city. Wherever discrimination is indicated contract awards should be refused in the first instance and revoked if necessary. Although there is now a massive body of evidence that clearly proves a pattern of institutionalized discrimination in the construction industry of New York City, not a single contract has ever been cancelled. Contract cancellation is a most potent instrument in enforcing the law. It indicates that the city administration takes its civil rights commitments seriously and it should be used. The avowed policy of equal employment opportunity on projects financed by taxpayers' money will never be worth the paper its written on until there is real enforcement and that includes contract cancellation.

3. NEGRO CONTRACTORS

A special effort must be made by the municipality to award contracts to Negro owned construction companies as a way of guaranteeing the employment of Negro workers. The city should require all prime contractors to agree that subcontracts will be awarded to Negro contractors. The Office of Government Contract Compliance of the U. S. Department of Labor has now begun to do this successfully on major U.S. Government construction projects and I urge the city to follow the same procedure.

4. ELIMINATION OF DISCRIMINATION IN APPRENTICESHIP TRAINING PROGRAMS

The municipality must remove private, that is, union control of the operation of apprenticeship training programs in the skilled craft occupations. The social consequences of the operation of these programs are much too broad and pervasive to permit private interest groups to impose their restrictive controls in the operation of such programs. A system of objective standards must be established as the basis for admission into such programs and it is necessary that impartial public agencies determine eligibility for admission into apprenticeship training programs. Testing procedures are now effectively used to exclude large numbers of Negroes from union apprenticeship programs, therefore, an impartial public agency must administer uniform standardized tests. Such tests should be job related and not based upon irrelevant subjective considerations that have their basis in middle class, white social experience thus blocking off the Negro applicant whose social and cultural development takes place within the Negro ghetto. The city in conjunction with private agencies such as the NAACP, the Urban League and Negro churches must conduct intensive affirmative campaigns to recruit Negro youth for involvement in apprenticeship and other job training programs.

The time to enforce the law is now, not tomorrow or next year or at some far distant time in the future. The crisis of unemployment and underemployment in the Negro community and the growing militancy of the civil rights protest movement has created a new set of conditions for municipalities and their human rights commissions.

Outbreaks of violence in many communities must be understood within the context of a growing economic crisis in the major urban centers of Negro population concentration. The great mass of Negroes are locked in a permanent condition of poverty. This includes the long-term unemployed as well as the working poor, who know only a marginal economic existence and thus, increasingly, are forced into the ranks of the unemployed. If the traditional patterns of job discrimination are not rapidly eliminated, the growing crisis of unemployment and poverty among Negroes threatens to plunge entire Negro communities into further alienation and despair.

Civil rights commissions must now proceed boldly to the attack upon discriminatory patterns in entire industries and crafts, with new concepts of permanent affirmative compliance and above all a far greater use of mandatory measures including the frequent issuance of cease and desist orders, court enforcement of commission rulings and contract cancellation.

If northern municipalities and their civil rights commissions continue to operate with timidity and a general reluctance to broadly and rapidly enforce anti-discrimination statutes then the potential of fair employment practice laws will never be realized and the Negro mass movement will proceed to the attack against discrimination in its own way. What state and municipal anti-discrimination commissions do within the next months and how rapidly they go about doing it will determine in large measure the nature of the racial confrontation in the Northern urban center. This is now especially important as it becomes clear each passing day that the great and growing crisis in American race relations is in the urban North.

Sheriff Threatens Arrest of Reporter

Sheriff F. Quill Sammon Jr., obviously disturbed over a reporter's visit to the Gwinnett County jail last Thursday, declared he would have the newsman "locked up" if he made a return visit to the county bastile.

Mr. Sammon has denied the press access to the jail records.

The reporter went to the jail during the visiting hour of 10 and 11 a.m. Thursday when the sheriff was not present and the jailer granted the reporter's request to visit Franklin D. Brown, accused of slaying his teenaged sister-in-law (see separate story).

Brown, speaking through the bars of the cell he occupies with several other Negro prisoners, denied the slaying and asked if he could speak to the reporter in the hallway where prisoners are normally allowed to talk with visitors.

The reporter, after rattling the hallway door which is locked from the outside, summoned a jail official, asked if Brown would be permitted to talk in private and was told, "Visiting hours is over now."

Calling for a return visit the following day, the reporter was told by a desk officer, "The sheriff says you can't talk to any of the prisoners without his special permission."

The reporter called the sheriff at his home and Mr. Sammon said he would not let the newsman talk with a prisoner "unless I know what you're going to talk about."

The sheriff then said he would be down at the jail in about 10 minutes and showed up some 30 minutes later. After ignoring the reporter for some 10 minutes, the newsman asked if he would be permitted to talk to the prisoner.

The sheriff then asked if the reporter had relatives in the jail and was he (the reporter) trying to run for sheriff. "I've got a campaign to manage and people to take care of," he declared, adding that he would not let the reporter interview the prisoner.

"You're creating dissension," he said, "and I've got the evidence to prove it." Then, turning to several of his deputies, the desk officer and jail matron, he ordered: "And if he comes down here again y'all lock him up."

Franklin D. Brown Awaits Gwinnett Grand Jury Action

A 26-year-old Buford mechanic has denied the slaying of his teen-age sister-in-law despite a signed "confession" that he killed her.

This came to light in a brief interview with Franklin D. Brown, Negro who has been held on a murder charge in the Gwinnett County jail since shortly after the slaying in mid-October, 1963.

Brown, a lifelong resident of Buford, was locked up shortly after the rape-slaying of Judy Ann Randolph, 16, who according to the state crime laboratory report was five months pregnant.

He was released about two days thereafter, then picked up again by Sheriff R.L. Smith of the Sugar Hill District and GBI Agent H.B. Freeman.

While in jail the first time, Brown told a reporter, someone stole the armrest from his automobile and also a grease rag which he used during his work at O'Rouke's Gargage in Buford. The armrest is listed by state witnesses as evidence.

Asked why he signed the statement of "confession," Brown said he was frightened and he had no idea it would get him "in this kind of trouble."

The case has been made returnable to the March grand jury and Brown's trial is expected to come up in the third week of March.

Circuit Judge Charles Pittard reportedly appointed Rhodes Jordan of Lawrenceville to defend Brown and the family of the accused has retained Attorney J. Ray Merritt of Buford.

While investigating officers have been close - mouthed regarding the details of the investigation, unconfirmed reports are that Brown was taken to the scene of the slaying where he explained in detail how he inadvertently strangled Judy Ann.

"He didn't intend to kill her," one of the investigators allegedly told a Buford man. The second-hand account of the slaying was to the effect that Brown had a dispute with Judy Ann, and pressed a wire around her throat while the two were in his automobile.

The slaying reportedly took place near the Buford Rock Quarry Prison Farm.

The officers' investigation re-

Corley Files For New Term In Election

Commissioner Minor Corley, a lifelong resident of Gwinnett now serving his first full term as a county commissioner, has qualified as a candidate to succeed himself subject to the Democratic Primary April 15.

Mr. Corley, now vice-chairman of the board, was born Minor Morton Corley Oct. 22, 1911, the son of Alvin J. Corley and Mamie Morton Corley, fourth generation of Corleys in Gwinnett County. His father served on the Board of County Commissioners for a four-year term beginning in 1944.

Mr. Corley's homeplace is near Sweetwater Church in Pleasant Hill Community. He attended local schools and graduated from Duluth High School. He later attended Oglethorpe University.

Now holder of the Allis-Chalmers equipment franchise in Duluth, Mr. Corley first started in business in Duluth with an ice route in 1929. He added a drugs and sundries business in 1934 and four years later started in the equipment business.

Mr. Corley is married to the former Miss Frances Payne of Duluth, daughter of the late Lee Payne, and they have one daughter, Betsy.

He is a member of the Duluth Lodge F&AM, Woodmen of the World, the Lions Club and the Duluth Methodist Church.

Mr. Corley began his term of office as a member of the Board of Commissioners of Roads and Revenues in May, 1958, to fill the unexpired term of the late Gordon I. Frachiseur.

Dear Vernon:

Just a note to let you know how greatly I appreciate your contribution to our Seminar on Civil Rights for the youth group from Indiana this week.

The young people were deeply impressed and grateful for your willingness to take the time to speak with them.

They have now returned home with a wealth of new experience and insight.....and a mass of information which may take months to digest.

"—TO PROMOTE JUSTICE, AMITY, UNDERSTANDING AND COOPERATION AMONG PROTESTANTS, CATHOLICS AND JEWS, AND TO ANALYZE, MODERATE AND FINALLY ELIMINATE INTERGROUP PREJUDICES WHICH DISFIGURE AND DISTORT RELIGIOUS, BUSINESS, SOCIAL AND POLITICAL RELATIONS, WITH A VIEW TO THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A SOCIAL ORDER IN WHICH THE RELIGIOUS IDEALS OF BROTHERHOOD AND JUSTICE SHALL BECOME THE STANDARDS OF HUMAN RELATIONSHIPS." (NCCJ BY-LAWS)

WHAT IS THE NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF CHRISTIANS AND JEWS?

NCCJ

. . . was founded in 1928 by Charles Evans Hughes, Newton D. Baker, S. Parkes Cadman, Roger W. Straus, Carlton J. H. Hayes and other distinguished Americans.

It is a civic organization of religiously motivated people, seeking through education and discussion to promote civic cooperation and mutual understanding among men of good will of all religious and ethnic groups.

Its purpose is positive: to approach more closely the national ideal of building "one nation, under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

It is concerned with the disruptions of the public order resulting from conflict based on race, economic interest, and political belief, as well as those based on religious differences. It is dedicated to efforts encouraging the tradition of civility and achieving the consensus which enables a plural society to act on its problems.

NCCJ's program is educational and follows a multiple approach at various levels to the intergroup situation in the community. It reaches millions of Americans annually by conducting programs with and through existing institutions and organizations of society.

It is not an "interfaith" movement. It does not aim at any sort of amalgamation of religious bodies or a least common denominator of doctrine. It does not engage in common worship. It seeks in all its work to guard against the dangers of religious indifferentism.

It is neither a propaganda organization nor a pressure group. It does not lobby, it does not pass resolutions "viewing with alarm."

The education it seeks to promote is a profoundly important form of action when it influences citizens to appreciate the diversities and bear the responsibilities of human community.

NCCJ PROVIDES A MEANS FOR MEN AND WOMEN OF GOOD WILL OF DIFFERING RELIGIONS TO WORK TOGETHER ON COMMON CIVIC CONCERNS.

MAJOR NCCJ PROGRAM DEVELO

We must help our children grow into emotional maturity so they do not use prejudice and hostility as a crutch for their own personality inadequacies.

NCCJ conducts "Rearing Children of Good Will" Institutes, varied to meet local community needs, but focused upon the important role of parents in teaching children attitudes suited to democratic living.

The dissemination of accurate, objectively reported news about all religious constituencies, and of the major national and international issues and developments of concern to religiously-motivated people, has helped to create better intergroup understanding and harmony and to strengthen the public order.

The Religious News Service of the National Conference serves some 750 clients — daily newspapers and news magazines, the religious press of all faiths and radio and TV stations across the country—with daily domestic and foreign news reports, photos, and special features. It is the world's only interreligious news agency.

To achieve the maximum impact in education, we must help train teachers and community leaders to acquire new understandings and skills in religious, racial and ethnic relations.

Since 1941 NCCJ has cooperated with leading colleges and universities in all parts of the country in a summer Workshop Program. In a university setting teachers and community leaders spend two to six weeks together, sharing, exchanging and learning practical ways of meeting the problems which confront them in their communities.

Today's young people are tomorrow's leaders and America's future may very well depend upon their understanding of what it means to live in a free, democratic society.

NCCJ is increasingly emphasizing its program for youth leaders. Conferences and Institutes for high school youth provide opportunities to discuss issues of deep concern to young people in the growing complexity of our society.

It is evident that there can be no positive education for civility where peace and order are in jeopardy or where minority groups are victims of discrimination.

NCCJ'S Program in Police-Community Relations brings together law enforcement officers and community leaders to achieve communication and understanding in everyday situations. It includes an annual week-long National Institute at Michigan State University and state and local institutes.

Opportunities for labor and management to meet and talk to one another about common needs in non-crisis situations provide greater areas of understanding.

NCCJ Institutes involving Labor, Management and Community Leaders help to create an understanding of mutual responsibility in crucial human relations problems. The NCCJ Merit Promotion Program assists management organizations in their search for more just and efficient criteria for promotion.

PMENT & SIGNIFICANT PROGRESS

In matters of interreligious relations the important consideration is not that agreement be reached but that lines of communication be kept open for a frank exchange of ideas and viewpoints.

NCCJ'S Religious Freedom and Public Affairs Program provides an opportunity for Dialogue in the Community to raise the general level of public discussion and understanding among religious groups differing on issues of public concern.

The development of sound informational materials on basic human relations problems expands knowledge and understanding.

NCCJ'S extensive Publication Program produces materials for schools and colleges, churches and synagogues, civic agencies and the media of mass communications that stimulate thought and shed new light on important issues.

BROTHERHOOD WEEK, sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews, has been observed since 1934. It serves as a time of renewal and resolution to sustain Brotherhood throughout the year.

The National Conference of Christians and Jews is wholly supported by voluntary contributions from individuals, corporations, foundations, fraternal organizations and religious groups. These contributions make possible a network of 66 regional offices and their year-round programming for better human understanding.

NCCJ now starts its 37th year of increasing program to build better relationships in the community. With its already established and proven experience in reaching people in all walks of life, NCCJ is uniquely qualified to meet the challenge of building a better democracy.

Attached is the Atlanta schedule for the Hiram College Seminar for March 20-22.

Your willingness to participate in this project is greatly appreciated.

The group of fourteen students have been preparing for this for several months. They have had bi-weekly lecture sessions and considerable back-ground reading. This tour is being conducted during the spring vacation period.

In addition to the visit to Atlanta, they will also make stops in Nashville, Birmingham, and Jackson, Mississippi.

If you have any questions concerning your participation, please call me.

Dear Les:

Enclosed is a copy of an article from the Georgia Bulletin, June 10, 1965 entitled "The Archbishop's Notebook" which summarizes the activity of the Archdiocese of Atlanta in matters of race relations. I am sending it to you because it is the sort of thing which might have been overlooked by your research department but which shows significant church involvement in the whole northern half of the state of Georgia in a very courageous way.

Dear Paul:

Your participation and contributions in the meeting on the emerging problems in school desegregation held at the Airport Holiday Inn in Atlanta on October 19, 1970, were much appreciated.

We are anxious that this meeting will have served as a stimulus for further cooperation among all of the groups and agencies involved in struggle to obtain equality of educational opportunity for all of our children, as well as helping to call attention to the immediate problems related to the misuse of Federal funds in resegregation and discrimination in the public schools, the rapidly increasing uses of testing and ability grouping for resegregation in "desegregated" districts, and the continuing displacement of black teachers and principals, and to identify some sorts of organizational responses to these problems.

Information sharing where appropriate, cooperative press releases or responses, and joint ventures in various directions seem to offer some possibility for improving the effectiveness of each of us.

One suggestion was made that a representative group re-convene to consider specific strategies in the areas discussed at the meeting during the State Convention of the Mississippi State Conference of the NAACP November 5-8 in Clarksdale. If those present at that meeting can arrange to get together whenever Aaron Henry will let us, perhaps we can develop some specific plans in the directions we discussed.

We are also hoping to develop some more efficient procedures in communicating with individuals and organizations working toward our common ends. We hope you will be considering the same thing.

A list of participants with addresses is enclosed for just this purpose.

RE: Planning Meeting on Problems of Black Majority School Districts

The enclosed memorandum will help to explain the purpose of this invitation.

The NEA Center for Human Relations is deeply concerned about the problems of children and adults residing in majority black school districts whose leadership and power structure has failed to meet their educational needs.

We have been particularly impressed with the report on Majority-Black School Districts in the 11 Southern States which was recently released by the Race Relations Information Center, the Southern Regional Council, the American Friends Service Committee, and the Southern Education Foundation. We believe this report deserves a concerted response.

For the purpose of bringing together organizational representatives to plan responses in this effort, especially in relation to the feasibility of a conference as described in the enclosed memorandum, please let me invite you to a special meeting for this purpose to be held in the Captain's Room of the Air Host Inn in Atlanta on Monday, January 25, from 10:00 a.m. until 4:30 p.m.

The Air Host Inn is near the Atlanta airport and maintains a limousine service for those arriving from other cities.

This is by no means intended to be a closed meeting. If additional representatives from your organization plan to attend, or if you wish to suggest additional persons who need to be with us, please do not hesitate to contact us.

We hope to see you on the 25th.

MEMORANDUM TO: George W. Jones

FROM: Boyd Bosma Boyd

RE: Planning Session for Black Majority School District Conference

The purpose of this memorandum is to pull together some thoughts concerning the possibility of a conference of representatives (teachers and community people) from black majority school districts to look at means for modifying political structures, improving participation, and gaining improvement of educational patterns in these districts.

Since most or all of the participants would almost certainly need to be subsidized to a major extent, and because of the extensive implications of such a conference, it seems essential that at least one planning meeting be called to explore and seek consensus on specific objectives and programming for the conference itself by representatives of the organizations most directly concerned with the problems outlined in the RRIC-SED-SRC-AFSC report on Black-Majority School Districts in the 11 Southern States.

Specific objectives for this planning meeting would include achievement of consensus on the following items:

1. Feasibility of the conference.

2. Establishment of major objectives and purposes for the conference.

3. Forms of organizational cooperation

   a. Selection of delegates and districts to be represented
   b. Sponsorship of delegates.
   c. Organizational representation and sponsorship.

4. Plan of action

   a. Further planning efforts.
   b. Identification of coordinators.
   C. Date, place, time.

Although more specific objectives would be needed, initial purposes for the major conference would probably include:

1. Improvement of cooperation and relationships among teachers and community representatives.

2. Identification of problems that teachers and community organizations can work together to solve.

3. Identification of organizations and persons willing to work jointly to meet local educational needs.

4. Clarification and development of specific strategies to bring about effective change in educational conditions and power structures in black majority school districts.

Because many delegates, including both teachers and community representatives, would find difficulty in being released from their jobs, most or all of the conference would probably need to be held over a weekend or during the summer. It is our hope that it might be possible to complete the arrangements and hold the conference prior to the end of this school year.

The report on Majority-Black School Districts raises a number of pertinent questions in a paragraph in the introduction:

> . . .How can the public school system be preserved? How can the white minority be retained within the local public schools and prevented from fleeing to segregated private schools or leaving the community? Will the white power structure reduce its support of a desegregated majority-balck system? How can blacks obtain a voice and representation in the operation of the public schools?

These questions, and especially the last, are so vital that any actions taken in this direction should begin immediately.

MEMORANDUM TO: Participants in the Atlanta, January 25, 1971, Meeting on Black-Majority School Districts in the 11 Southern States

FROM: Boyd Bosma Boyd

RE: Status Report on Conference Plans

Enclosed with this memorandum is a copy of a report of the January 25, 1971, meeting of concerned organizations in Atlanta, Georgia, on the educational problems of black-majority school districts in the eleven southern states, with additional informational items.

You will recall that consensus of the meeting was that most organizations indicated interest in participating in a conference on this topic in Mississippi, with the provision that the major sponsor would be, with their agreement, the Mississippi Educational Resources Center. Two organizational representatives indicated the necessity for further reponse at other levels before any formal commitment could be made. In a meeting of the Education Resources Center in Jackson on February 1, 1971, it was agreed that the Center would sponsor such a conference and that cooperating organizations would be listed as "in cooperation with".

The purpose of this memorandum is to indicate progress to date in planning for the conference, and to call to your attention the need for formal commitments at an early date.

I hope to be able within a few days to talk with each of you by telephone to plan further steps in implementing the conference. If you have any questions or suggestions, please do not hesitate to bring them to our attention.

The initial discussion centered on the publication, Majority-Black School Districts in the 11 Southern States, published in July, 1970, by the Race Relations Information Center in cooperation with the American Friends Service Committee, the Southern Education Foundation, and the Southern Regional Council. Strategies discussed included:

possible legal attacks on all-white boards of education political strategies in changing school boards research on composition of school boards research on methods of selection of school board members techniques for accountability of superintendents and board members written personnel policies training for black school board members affecting national thought

The meeting identified need for further research on the following subjects:

1. Composition of boards

2. Methods of selection and appointment

3. Changes in law

4. Cases for contempt (civil and legal)

5. Changes in central offices

6. Formation of local coalitions

7. Abuse of children

8. Changes in county governments

9. Written personnel policies

It was agreed that training was needed for school boards, community leaders, and educational leaders in the following areas:

1. Skills and techniques in how to get the job done

2. Coordination of efforts by groups currently working

3. What resources are now available?

4. What do local leaders see as their goals?

It was agreed that a conference to consider the educational problems of black-majority school districts should concentrate on two primary objectives:

1. techniques to effect changes in local power structures

2. strategies to make school boards more responsive or for removing unresponsive boards

--

Organizational leaders present agreed that a conference in Mississippi should be conducted if the Mississippi Educational Resources Center would be willing to serve as primary sponsor with other organizations identified as "cooperating". Boyd Bosma was requested to meet with the Board of Directors of the Educational Resources Center at the earliest possible date to determine their reaction to this proposal.

MEMORANDUM TO: Hermel Johnson, Director
Educational Resources Center

FROM: Boyd Bosma Boyd

RE: Proposal for Conference of Black-Majority School Districts

This memorandum is to serve as a means of pulling together the current status of our thinking around the plans for a conference for representatives of majority-black school districts in Mississippi, and to provide a guide for future planning.

Those issues which remain unresolved or which need to be referred to the Educational Resources Center for consideration as so indicated.

Conference Name (unresolved)

Political Clinic
Community Alliance for Educational Change
Educators and Community: Partners for Change Community Political Action for Education Change

Selection of Districts

There are 52-56 black-majority school districts in Mississippi. The Educational Resources Center is requested to submit a list of 15-20 districts from which 10 will be selected on the basis of the following criteria:

1. potential for change
2. present or potential community coalitions
3. present or potential educational leadership
4. identifiable problems subject to attack at local level
5. motivation of local educational and community leaders

Districts should be variable in size, and should not necessarily be limited to counties (Hollandale, Western Line, Greenville are examples).

Districts with successful records of activity (Coahoma County, Clarksdale) should be included with those seeking to initiate active programs for change.

Selection of Participants

If 12 persons are selected to represent each of the 10 districts, there will be 120 participants, plus NEA staff and organizational representatives.

Teams should be selected according to the following formula:

4 students
4 teachers
4 community or local organizational representatives

Participants should be chosen on the basis of actual demonstrated or potential leadership, as for example:

Students--high school or college two officers of student councils or similar groups (status positions) two members of youth branch of local civil rights or community organization (activists)

Educators
two from the following group president of local teachers association president-elect of local teachers association principal two classroom teachers active in civil rights organizations

Community Representatives
two officers of NAACP or dominant civil rights organization(s) two staff representatives of governmental project, such as CAP, Head Start, OEO, Rural Legal Services, other community services program

Time and Place

The Board of Directors of the Educational Resources Center indicated preference for the weekend of April 16-18, 1971. Staff and consultants must plan to be available at the conference site by Thursday morning, April 15, for pre-conference training.

Counties with majority-black districts are mostly located west of a line drawn north to south through the center of the state. The Educational Resources Center is requested to select the conference site, preferably Jackson or Greenville. Factors to be considered in making the selection are accessibility, availability of meeting rooms, and costs.

Since conference participants will be requested to remain at the conference site through the entire conference, a motel may be a likely choice. Availability of a neutral location away from the motel might, however, be considered, such as Jackson State College or a large church.

Staff and Trainers

Aside from those few individuals who will have general responsibilities during the conference, all persons present must plan to participate as team members, consultants, or leaders. No person should plan to come for only a portion of the conference.
NEA staff will be available as group trainers, one for each of the 10 teams. Each NEA staff member should be paired with one consultant, a qualified organizational leader (for example, a member of the Board of ERC) so that two resource people will be present for each team.

Pre-Conference Publicity

Several Board members of ERC were concerned that advance publicity about the conference could possibly help to hold off some of the projected teacher dismissals later this spring, as well as assist in maintaining some conditions in the schools as the end of the year approaches. Considering the sensitivity involved in a conference of this type, as well as the concerns of possible participants, it is our feeling that pre-conference publicity should be deferred, at least until after a further planning meeting can be held, probably around the first of April, except of course, in determining local desires to participate as a team in the conference. It is also our request that pre-conference publicity be coordinated with Paul Ryan in the NEA Southeast Regional Office.

Future Planning Meetings

At least one planning meeting should be held prior to the pre-training session. A date around the weekend of April 3 seems most desirable at this point. Participants could include:

Representatives of major organizational sponsors
Three members of the Board of Directors of ERC
Two local community leaders
Two local teacher leaders
Two students (our suggestion would be Leon Hall and Butch Wright of SRC)

Since this meeting should require a full day for planning, we probably need to consider Saturday, April 3, to provide for transportation and work problems for the community and teacher participants. Advice from ERC is requested on this point. I have requested Mrs. Marie Turner of our staff to assist with arrangements for this meeting because of extensive staff commitments on my part through March.

Financial Support

Representatives of state and national organizations hopefully will be sponsored by their organizations.

It is our recommendation that transportation not be subsidized for participants, except as available through local organizations. Costs of meals and lodging for participants, and other incidentals, such as mailings, publication of a conference report, etc., should be estimated by ERC as a specific conference site is recommended.

Staff transportation and costs for NEA staff members will be underwritten by the NEA.

If you have any questions or suggestions concerning this memorandum, or as you and ERC develop responses to the questions we have raised, please call me and/or write as soon as possible.

NATIONAL URBAN LEAGUE
AMERICAN TEAMWORK WORKS

YEAR-END REPORT

TO CONTRIBUTORS

1961

The Year 1961 Saw Heartening Gains in key areas of race relations and civil rights, due in some measure to a more positive leadership exerted by the Executive Branch of the Federal Government. Courageous action by dedicated young people – Negro and white – and Federal concern that laws be enforced made a tangible improvement in the public's attitude toward the Negro's struggle for first class citizenship.

These are some of the actions that influenced the new climate in which the League worked during the year: the Interstate Commerce Commission's action against segregated bus and airport facilities; the beginning of efforts toward enforcement of the Civil Rights Act of 1957 protecting the voting rights of Negro citizens; the spread of school integration deeper into the South; the establishment of the President's Committee On Equal Employment Opportunity along with Executive Order 10925; and the Kennedy administration's appointment of qualified Negroes to some key posts in government – including one at cabinet rank. The stronger Executive Order suggested that the Government intends stiff penalties for discriminatory employment practices on Federal contracts.

During 1961 the National Urban League – with branches in 62 cities – tightened its national structure to put new muscle and imagination into the attack on racial problems across a wide front.

Negroes Are Still Boxed Out of Broad Job Fields because of discriminatory hiring as well as by hostile unions. Negro graduates are increasing faster than their absorption into job levels utilizing their skills. At the unskilled level, automation continues to extract a larger toll in the Negro work force because it is more heavily concentrated at the unskilled level. Improving the Negro's status as wage earner and consumer continues to challenge League operations across the country.

Executives from 50 major U. S. corporations and officials from ten Negro colleges came together in May in New York City under the aegis of the Commerce & Industry Council of the National Urban League. They explored ways in which more corporations could tap the reservoir of Negro manpower now enrolled in colleges and universities. This idea promises to be the most successful in a battery of techniques aimed at alerting America's corporate structure to the vast manpower potential virtually untouched because of tradition or unimaginative management.

In Washington, D. C. the Urban League was consultant to government agencies, committees and commissions. They also helped the U. S. Civil Service Commission plan a special recruiting tour of Negro colleges, and did a similar service for the Peace Corps.

On the West Coast, Lockheed Aircraft, along with 24 other major companies, accepted a "Plan For Progress in Equal Opportunity" in cooperation with the Los Angeles Urban League.

In New York City, the local League launched a major effort to widen opportunities for Negro youth in apprentice training. It spurred community groups to devise their own action programs; moved the New York City Central Labor Council to make more information available on training opportunities, and influenced the New York State Department of Labor to give active assistance to Negro youth seeking skilled craft training.

Detroit and the rest of the middle-west continued to feel the pinch of unemployment – crushing for Negro workers. Danger signals from a number of League executives prompted a League survey in 50 cities. It revealed that the percent of Negro workers unemployed is often twice to three times that of the total unemployed rate. In St. Louis 20 percent of the Negro workforce was found to be unemployed; in Detroit the figure was a hefty 39 percent.

In Richmond, the League placed 20 sales-people with large food chains, and in Washington, the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, with the League's help, subscribed to merit hiring. Two young alumni of Tomorrow's Scientists and Technicians (TST) programs were selected by Secretary of Labor Goldberg for government jobs in Washington – one as a personnel assistant, the other as a research analyst.

In Illinois, the State Legislature passed an FEPC Bill due largely to the research and community organization efforts of the Chicago League.

The hiring practices of New York's multimillion-dollar advertising business was the subject of a study by the Urban League of Greater New York. Circulated by the League to the industry's top spokesmen and policymakers, the report pointed out that "advertising agencies in the city almost never hire Negroes." Result: A promise to work with the League on new opportunities.

And in another move to set the stage for exploratory probing, the New York League organized a special committee of physicians to survey alleged discriminatory practices against Negroes in the medical profession. Heading the committee, which will recommend action by the League, is Dr. Vaughan Mason, president of the National Medical Association.

Urban League spadework helped the first Negro teacher into a school in upper Westchester County, New York. Negro teachers now number 160 in the county as compared to 34 in 1956.

The League's Role in Expanding Job Opportunities would be less effective but for the twin role of extending career horizons of Negro youth. The latter received strong emphasis in 1961. TST Career Clubs attracted a growing number of high school students as the program increasingly attracted successful people willing to guide and inspire these youth. "Back to School" and "Stay in School" campaigns were sponsored in Chicago, Grand Rapids and other League communities to help reduce a growing drop-out rate.

In Portland, Oregon, an apprenticeship program gave high-schoolers facts about breaking into the skilled trades. A program to overcome "blue collar" prejudices among young Negroes was launched in Westchester County by the League. And in Los Angeles, parents and high school students met community leaders at an Urban League first annual career night.

Early in 1961 a national TV audience numbering more than four million saw the Urban League's 28-minute film, "A Morning for Jimmy." Since then it has had numerous private showings and additional local TV exposures. "Jimmy" is a thought-provoking documentary about a Negro boy who faces the problem of growing up and meets it courageously.

These are but a few of the examples of programs aimed at raising the incentive level of Negro youth.

In a Special Effort, the New York League distributed 150,000 pieces of literature in mobilizing civic groups to support a local Board of Education's open enrollment program. More than 7,000 students are participating.

Problems of The Negro Family frequently have their roots in inadequate housing. The Urban League continues to point out that of the myriad problems, none arouses more deep, bitter frustration among Negroes as does the search for decent housing. League officials admitted that gains in the area of housing for Negroes were not numerous nor did the few that were made come easy. The need for Federal legislation and most immediately an Executive Order in housing was never greater.

The St. Paul Urban League during the past year conducted such a well-planned campaign of education that the long fight for the passage of a fair housing law in the state of Minnesota finally succeeded.

New Brunswick, Springfield, Chicago and St. Paul, tackled the problems of urban renewal. The aim – to make sure that new housing developments and slum clearance in these cities are a blessing, not an extension of segregation.

To bolster the local effort, the National Urban League sponsored in Warren, Ohio, an eight-city Urban Renewal Institute. League officials sat down with housing specialists from all levels of government and private agencies from Akron, Canton, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, Warren and Pittsburgh to develop mutual understanding and approaches to housing problems.

In Akron, Ohio, the local League's "Total Housing Market Drive" is credited with opening Real Estate Board membership to Negro realtors.

In the Queens section of New York, several hundred families were the victims of a ruthless relocation program. The Urban League of Greater New York stepped in with planning, consultation and public education to eliminate the hardships created when these families were uprooted.

Early in 1961 the Urban League, almost single-handedly, was responsible for the investigation by the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare of Louisiana's "Suitable Homes Bill." The League in New Orleans had successfully mustered help for destitute mothers and children through its "Feed The Babies Campaign" late in 1960. The League was not prepared for this kind of relief but met this emergency because of the dire need. HEW's decision: New Orleans must continue aid to dependent children without discrimination or lose the federal monies contributed to its welfare program. Again the League's position had been justified by the results!

In the health and welfare field, "Newburghism" became a synonym for discriminatory welfare programs. Through its Annual Conference in Dayton, the Urban League called on New York State for action on the Newburgh plan – and got it. The Newburgh plan was enjoined by the court. Other Leagues around the country were alerted to the dangers of "Newburghism." In Westchester for example, the League compiled data on welfare problems and other costs – ". . . so Newburghism couldn't happen here."

As recently as December 7, the Miami Urban League executive testified before a Senate sub-committee in Washington on the social and economic problems of the Negro community resulting from the great influx of Cuban refugees into Florida. His expert testimony will help guide the Committee in drafting remedial action for this League community.

In Kansas City, Missouri, an "Adoptive Home Recruitment Project" was launched by the League with the aid of the Greater Kansas City Chapter of Links, Incorporated. The city-wide committee set up by the League had representation from such organizations as the Kansas Citians Association of Colored Women, the AKA's, the Delta's and several of the large churches. The program was undertaken at the request of the United Fund and Kansas City Health and Welfare Council to help resolve the problems of finding adoptive parents for Negro children.

"What Are The Facts?" – this is the question that generally precedes Urban League programming. The League's reputation has been built on knowing the facts. A major fact-finding job was completed by the National Urban League's Research Department with the completion of a report: "A Review of the Economic and Cultural Problems of Springfield, Ohio." The study and the resulting 169-page report established a definite need for an Urban League in Springfield.

In Chicago a League study was the basis for charges that the Chicago Board of Education was budgeting 20 percent less per pupil for "Negro" schools than for "white" schools. At a hearing of the Board, the President of the Chicago Urban League pointed out "the pattern absolutely follows the color line" and urged the Board to adopt "a positive policy of integration" to achieve more economic use of existing facilities.

In 1961 the Urban League of Greater New York, with the aid of a special grant, launched a two-year study to determine the quality and quantity of education available to Negro and Puerto Rican youths in New York.

The Columbus Urban League's study, "Programming for Gifted Children" centered on the problem of helping to develop latent abilities of gifted children and explored how the Urban League could supplement the work of the public schools to meet the need of underprivileged children of that city. In a summary statement the report indicated that racial segregation is becoming more widespread in the nation's public schools and that the children of parents living in blighted, overcrowded and inadequate housing may never recover from the damage incurred. The situation, it concluded, presented a challenge not only to the school system to do a better job but also to the Urban League.

"The Economic and Social Status of the Negro in the United States," a report summarizing the most recent Census information on social and economic status of the American Negro family relative to white families, was published by the National Urban League in 1961. The data was first used at the League's 1961 Annual Conference in Dayton, Ohio. The study up-dates population growth, housing, marital status, employment, income and a number of other characteristics.

News Was Made In 1961 by these Urban League activities:

¶ The Lester B. Granger tribute luncheon in October where more than 1,000 people, including Governor Rockefeller and Mayor Wagner, hailed the Urban League's retiring chief. Of the honoree, Governor Rockefeller said, "He has done more than any other American to open the doors of opportunity."

¶ The passing of the League's leadership to Whitney M. Young, Jr., former Dean of the Atlanta University School of Social Work, who became on October 1st the League's fourth Executive Director in 51 years.

¶ "The Time Is Now," a 26-page report addressed to President Kennedy and his new administration recommending action to end discrimination in every area of American life, especially those in which Federal money is spent. Every major newpaper in the country gave attention to the report.

¶ "America's Many Faces" – from 50,000 entries the work of 133 photographers was chosen by a star jury headed by famed photographer Edward Steichen. Winners were announced in April and practically every photo magazine and editor in the country gave space to the story.

¶ Equal Opportunity Day, November 19th, was celebrated throughout the nation. A variety of observance activities were held in local League cities. More than 1,250 people filled The Waldorf-Astoria Grand Ballroom to hear Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg, and witness the presentation of the 1961 Equal Opportunity Awards to Walter H. Wheeler, Jr., Board Chairman of Pitney-Bowes, and David Sullivan, President of the Building Service Employees' International Union. A message from President Kennedy, read at the dinner, warmly lauded the League's contributions toward equal opportunity for all Americans.

¶ A survey of Negro unemployment in 50 cities. The survey, referred to earlier in this report, was released to the press in March and received exceptional broad coverage throughout the nation.

¶ The League's 51st Annual Conference in Dayton, Ohio. Approximately 700 Urban League volunteers and staff gathered to discuss "Reshaping Community Relations – Our Job in the Sixties."

The 60's Will Bring Marked Progress In Race Relations and provide the Urban League with an even greater opportunity for service. The trend has been set and the League's commitment is clear in its responsibility to eliminate "man's inhumanity to man."

THE NEWSLETTER OF THE NATIONAL URBAN LEAGUE, 14 EAST 48TH ST., NEW YORK 17, N. Y. SPRING 1962

NUL Gets $215,000 Carnegie Grant — Earmarked for Youth Service

HOSTS ON COAST—Edgar Kaiser (right) and Judge Alvin E. Weinberger (left) Bay Area UL president, greet Whitney M. Young, Jr., NUL executive director, at luncheon held in San Francisco.

The NUL has received a $215,000 foundation grant from the Carnegie Corporation of New York to be used over the next five years for strengthening the organization's youth incentives program of educational motivation and guidance for Negro youth.

In commenting on the grant, NUL Executive Director Whitney M. Young, Jr., described its far-reaching significance to the nation and termed it "of incalculable importance toward dissolving the barriers of indifference and discrimination stifling the aspirations of a myriad of young Negroes in America today."

John Gardner, Carnegie president, pointed out that the funds were given for the Urban League's new expanded program, with its emphasis on the organization's coming to grips with the challenges posed by today's changed ways of life. He noted that the corporation has in the past supported a number of programs to assist disadvantaged youth.

"Such youngsters need help," he said. "They need jobs. They need to be aided to think constructively about their own abilities and limitations, about job opportunities and about their further learning and growth."

As an urgent part of the problem, Mr. Young noted what he termed a "staggering trend" upward in school drop-out rates, particularly among Negro youth. He said the Carnegie contribution will, among other advantages, give the Urban League the means "to forge new and vital tools to reverse this devastating upsurge."

Mr. Young declared that concentrated effort must be directed toward the motivation of Negro youth to assure that they enter the labor market skilled and equipped ■

UL Officials to LBJ: 'Take Close Look'

An appeal for close scrutiny and positive action in crucial areas of manpower utilization, in which discrimination is blocking equal job opportunity for Negro citizens, was presented personally April 9 to Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson by top officials of the NUL.

The Vice President is chairman of the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity. Among responsibilities of that body is to insure that Negro citizens in every state enjoy a fair chance, in keeping with their qualifications, in the job benefits provided by Federal subsidy and law.

Representing the NUL at the Capitol conference were President Henry Steeger; Whitney M. Young, Jr., executive director; Nelson C. Jackson, associate executive director for program; Mahlon T. Puryear, associate director for job development; and Mrs. Cernoria D. Johnson, director of the NUL Washington office.

The League officials cited "bottlenecks" urgently in need of correction in USES procedure, in training and re-training programs and in the Plans for Progress and urged promp remedial action.

The delegation told Vice President Johnson that the League is prepared to cooperate with all agencies of government charged with the obligation to serve the best interests of all citizens, to the full extent of its "grassroots" facilities for community service throughout the nation.

"It would be most unfortunate," they stated in their presentation, "if at this moment in history the parallel efforts of the Committee and the Urban League are not unified in teamwork." ■

In the racial ferment of today the United States cannot afford an ill-financed, ill-equipped Urban League.

So declared Executive Director Whitney Young in addressing a luncheon meeting of Bay Area business leaders in San Francisco recently.

Host of the meeting was Edgar Kaiser, president of Kaiser Industries.

Mr. Young pointed up that the business community holds a major responsability in assuring equal opportunity for all Americans.

He said that in the mounting crises of the present, industry must provide the UL with resources adequate to apply full measure of its skill and experience to challenges of today and tomorrow.

Mr. Young accompanied his remarks with a presentation of slides delineating the structure, the resources and the needs of the UL movement in its work ■

Leaguer's Notebook . . .

Denver's 'Family Motivation' Story

DENVER—A unique and challenging approach in community organization, through strengthening of the family unit and alerting parents to expanding opportunities for their children is successfully under way in Denver under the auspices of the UL of Colorado.

Some 20 women's clubs, bolstered by the aid of individuals and parents, are involved. The job of these volunteers is to visit the parents of public school pupils whose full potentials have not been explored and utilized and urge the parents to take the children to visit places of educational and cultural interest.

In still other cases, a volunteer accompanies both the parents and children on such field trips. The basic idea of the project—entitled—"Family Motivation Project" of the UL, is to cement the family structure at its weakest link—parent-child relationship.

Key to the project technique is the parent. Many children in Negro homes lack evidence that their parents have any interest in their ambitions and school achievements. Too many Negro parents lack both the inclination and the skill to communicate with their own children concerning such basic things as their education, the Colorado UL believes.

The committee is divided into five sub-committees, each with a special area of concern. The UL Board meetings, the reports of the sub-committees are reviewed and discussed by the overall body.

Does this approach work?

The Colorado UL says it appears too early to determine its effectiveness in specifics, but there have been notable examples of its success. In one instance, after a visit to a clay foundry, a youngster wrote a paper which drew the highest mark in his class. This, though, is not the entire objective of the project. Its goal is improvement of parental cooperation and encouragement of self-inspiration of the children.

Chairman of the UL committee of Family Motivation is Mrs. Martha Radetsky.

It is the ultimate objective of the Colorado UL to provide the facts which will motivate both parents and school officials to negotiate the required achievements ■

Urban League STRIDES

NEWARK, N. J.—An important forward step by civic leaders toward solving the problems of the 160,000-odd Negroes living here, spurred by an array of facts assembled by the UL of Essex County, has been hailed as one of the "first really basic attempts to do something toward rebuilding the city."

Mayor Leo P. Carlin, to whom the League submitted a comprehensive report on community conditions several months ago, called into executive session a "pilot" group of Newark public figures.

Representing the League at the meeting were James A. Pawley, executive director of the UL of Essex County, and Whitney M. Young, Jr., NUL executive director.

Underscored in the League's confidential presentation to the Mayor were detailed findings concerning problems of the Negro community in Newark—38.9 per cent of the population, according to the 1960 census—in employment, school opportunity, housing, welfare and "integroup tensions."

These latter have drawn widespread attention to Newark problems arising in recent months through a number of highly publicized instances: Clashes between Negro and white youths at a high school; interracial discord at a housing project and an inflammatory public demonstration against a prospective Negro apartment house builder.

It was suggested to Mayor Carlin by the local League that plans for extensive civic improvement now being shaped would be seriously impaired, if not hamstrung, unless leaders of the area take decisive action.

The UL report declared that present conditions in Newark prevent the Negro citizen from assuming his fair share in plans to "rebuild the city." ■

NUL Film Document, "Jimmy", Wins Coveted NCCJ Award

NEW YORK—The NUL has been honored with an award conferred by the National Conference of Christians and Jews "for outstanding contribution to good human relations."

The award was given in recognition of the NUL-produced film, "A Morning for Jimmy", as a nontheatrical motion picture document "interpreting on a very human level the discouragement and hope for young Negroes in today's world."

The half-hour film, centering on the life of a Negro boy and his family living in a metropolitan community, was released early in 1961.

To date, it has been telecast 120 times around the nation to a viewership of 4,761,800, and has been shown on 3,955 occasions before various public gatherings, including school, social service, public and private welfare agencies and other groups, the NUL reported. Viewership of these showings thus far has totalled 280,833, of which nearly a quarter-million were boys and girls.

Candidates for the 1962 NCCJ awards covered all major categories in the field of mass communication—the written and spoken word and all the media of visual presentation.

William R. Simms

Mr. Simms, a 10-year veteran in UL service, is director of nationwide NUL financial resources activities. Previously, he headed the no - longer - existing Urban League Fund of New York.

URBAN LEAGUE FOCUS

Here in brief are two examples of League undertakings in which research and fact finding brought Northern school segregation into focus:

The implications of "de facto segregation" as a thinly comouflaged blockade to Negroes in education has boiled over in recent months into Northern communities.

The aftermaths have been as explosive as those centering on long out-moded ways of living in the South in years just passed.

Responsibilities of the nationwide machinery of the UL movement, as a keystone to efforts of other private social service agencies toward wrenching wide open the school room door, have never been etched more sharply than in the past year.

The UL role, and effectiveness of its time-tested professional techniques in ripping away the shame of "de facto" segregation sometimes becomes obscured by more sensation-provoking occurences. The UL movement has, through its techniques, quietly chalked up an array of gains for Negroes in America, which only history will take note of. These gains have been achieved without fanfare, inch-by-inch, toehold-by-toe-hold.

Notable examples accomplished in the year just passed, according to NUL President Henry Steeger, include these:

In Chicago—second in the nation not only as a metropolitan behemoth, but also in numbers of its Negro citizenry—the Chicago UL dredged-up to public view an array of community "dirty-linen" that won for the city a dubious but nationally publicized acclaim as "the most segregated big city in this country", particularly with reference to its schools.

More recently, a crucial situation in public school integration arose in Englewood, N. J., over the issue of "the ghettoed schoolhouse."

As in Chicago, the local league in Englewood applied the organization's instruments of fact finding, mobilization of community leadership and dissemination of clear-cut public information.

Here, in brief, is the Chicago story:

Spurred by mounting indignation among Negro citizens over the fact that Negro children were being denied access to better, predominantly white and less-congested school facilities and literally forced to attend inferior installations, the Chicago UL went into all-out research of still more facts.

Resulting, was a documentation of evidence that showed classroom space created by new construction arising from condemnation of old buildings was, in effect, being "reserved" for white pupils to an almost incredible degree.

At the same time, thousands of Negro pupils were required to attend double-shift classes in inferior, outworn facilities.

School officials took loud exception to the League's findings. They contended there were only some 14 surplus classrooms in white schools. The UL researchers were able to show, however, that 382 classrooms were not included in the report. A demand for explanation arose.

School administrators declared the League's figures were in error. The Chicago UL researchers stood by their guns. Then the school administration position was reversed. A recommendation was put forward that a limited transfer plan be set up for the next school year. That will apply to 1962-63. Meanwhile . . .

Occasionally, the Chicago League found "temporary" facilities for Negro children were established in decrepit structures on crowded streets. Again the League was able to come forward with records showing that in many instances the buildings had been condemned for institutional use.

Indigation of Negro parents turned to outrage. There were numerous demonstrations. But the Urban League is not in the business of picketing. To paraphrase one description of the League's approach to situations such as Chicago's classroom crisis, "facts can be pickets, too."

To further paraphrase a description of this element of the League's research technique, Mr. Steeger quoted the admonition of a famed newspaper editor of the past. It is:

"Get the facts first. But first get them right."

Here is the background on the Englewood, N. J., school situation, as developed by the Englewood UL:

While there is no official segregation in Englewood schools (it is outlawed by statute) there is a concentration of Negro pupils in one elementary school. This has resulted principally from residential patterns of living (ghettoism). Junior and senior high schools of the community, however, are completely integrated.

The UL Board, officers and members publicly urged that school authorities name an advisory committee to study ways to promote racial integration of pupils in the school involved. In addition, the UL Board resolved to hold itself and its facilities in readiness to assist the education officials in whatever way the latter might wish to accomplish the objectives sought by the League.

Considerable public resentment flared several weeks ago into threats of business boycotts and other demonstrations.

Dr. Harry L. Stearns, supertendent of Englewood schools, named by school authorities to examine and report upon racial imbalances in the school system, presented his report to the Board of Education. In it, Dr. Stearns pointed to six proposed courses of action toward ending these imbalances.

He approved of two, rejected three and had divided opinion on the other.

Coming closest of any to what the report suggests as the best remedial action would be extensive renewal plus establishment of central intermediate school facilities.

Crux of the problem, according to Dr. Stearns' findings, is population "drift" in the community. This has caused many middle and upper income families, both Negro and white, to move to more desirable neighborhoods. Their former dwellings have been remodeled for multiple occupancy by low income newcomers from nearby metropolitan areas ■

Cross Country with Urban Leagues

California Bay Area UL Gets $39,000 Youth Grant

OAKLAND—The Bay Area UL has received a $39,000 Rosenberg Foundation grant to expand its program of developing the employment potential of Negro youth.

Kenneth F. Smith, League executive director, said that "career clinics" will be established in Oakland, San Francisco, San Mateo and Marin City.

These cities requested the service after observing the success of a pilot venture in nearby Richmond, Mr. Smith said.

The Richmond project began three years ago with 35 youngsters attending clinic meetings in a Negro church. These group sessions were followed up by individual vocational counseling provided by members of the Urban League staff.

For the past two years, the clinics have been held in the Richmond junior high schools with the school department serving as an official sponsor of the program. (See editorial, page 7).

CLEVELAND—Shelton B. Granger, executive director of the Cleveland UL since 1958 has been appointed consultant to the President's Committeee on Juvenile Delinquency and Youth Crime.

Mr. Granger, now stationed in Washington, is on a one-year leave of absence from his league duties to serve on the President's Committee.

PORTLAND—Two Clinics for parents, sponsored jointly by the UL of Portland and Delta Sigma Theta Sorority were held recently.

The clinics are designed to provide parents with guidance to motivate their children.

PEORIA—Arthur J. Holst, administrator of the Forest Park Foundation, spoke on "Community Service" at the first of four meetings sponsored by the Peoria committee for UL. Following meetings will be on education, housing and equal job opportunity. The committee seeks support for establishing a UL in Peoria.

CANTON—Clay E. Hunter, former Canton UL President, and long active in civic affairs of the community, has been named Judge of the Municipal Court by Governor Michael V. DiSalle. Judge Hunter, who assumed the bench on March 4, is the first Negro in Canton history to don judicial robes and the fifth to serve on Ohio court benches. He was named to fill an unexpired term created by a resignation and will serve through January 2, 1964.

SAN FRANCISCO—Arthur Bradford, industrial relations secretary of the Bay Area UL is co-chairman of a state-wide committee on Equal Opportunity in apprenticeship training.

Th committee is comprised of representatives from labor, management, minority groups and governmental agencies. Its purposes are to inform minorities of opportunities in apprenticeship training and to increase industry to expand these opportunities.

TULSA—Mrs. Moise S. Cahn, chairman of NUL's Leadership Development and former Trustee, who has long been active in League affairs in her home city of New Orleans, was speaker at the Seventh Annual Meeting of the Tulsa UL. Her subject was "The Time Is Now".

Mrs. Cahn

Mrs. Cahn is past-president of the Greater New Orleans UL and past president of the National Council of Jewish Women. She is also an honorary past president of both the national and international council of Jewish Women.

SAN DIEGO—A series of workshop sessions designed to aid the schools in discovering and encouraging talent in minority groups is under way for 1962. Workshops are sponsored by the San Diego UL and Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, in cooperation with the Memorial Junior High School PTA.

GRAND RAPIDS—Grand Rapids UL executive director, Paul Phillips, has been elected to the Board of Education. Mr. Phillips is the first Negro to serve on the school body. He has headed the Grand Rapids UL since 1947 and has been active in civic service agencies.

NEWARK—More than 1,000 persons attended an international program featuring foreign ambassadors and representatives to the United Nations, sponsored by the UL Guild of Essex County.

The program, held at Seton Hall University, in Orange, N. J., culminated in a two-day interracial project which drew representatives from Twenty-two foreign countries and all of the continents.

PHOENIX—The Phoenix UL has formed a church youth guidance council, designed to coordinate youth motivation services by the congregations. Members of the council include representatives from church groups of the area.

DETROIT—John C. Dancy, retired director of the Detroit UL, was awarded the 15th Annual Amity Award conferred for outstanding achievement in the improvement of intergroup relations through bringing to public attention careers of those who contribute to social justice and equality in the community. Mr. Dancy retired in 1960 after 42 years of League service.

DAYTON—Harold I. Newsome, Dayton UL Board member and personnel director of Inland Manufacturing Division, General Motors Corporation, has been named general chairman of the 1962 Community Red Cross Fund campaign.

DENVER—Sebastian C. Owens, executive director of the UL of Colorado, is attending a special 16-week study course at Brandeis University, Brookline, Mass., as a Florina Lasker Fellow.

Mr. Owens

Mr. Owens was one of five from throughout the country whose professional careers have been directly or indirectly connected with preservation of civil liberties and rights, chosen for Florina Lasker Fellows in Civil Liberties, and Civil Rights.

Mr. Owens is on leave from his duties in Denver to attend the Brandeis study course.

ANDERSON, IND.—A "professions" career club sponsored by the Anderson UL, has been established as the latest among six such clubs organized by the League as part of its Youth Incentives Program. The clubs are designed to develop career consciousness and to provide student members information and counsel in a wide variety of fields.

LOUISVILLE—The International Harvester Company drew plaudits as an example of industrial foresight in spearheading non-discriminatory hiring policies here.

Sparked by the UL in the early 1950s, the IHC has since increased the number of Negro employes in one of its major plants alone from fewer than 450 in 1954 to more than 3,000 today.

Of its total work force of approximately 2,500 in this Louisville plant, 15 per cent are Negroes. The entire population of Louisville is in almost exactly that percentage, racewise. Further, statistics show the firm now employes twice as many semi-skilled Negro workers as there are laborers.

UL—USA...

Cross Country with Urban Leagues

St. Louis Is Host To Three-Fold Trustees' Meeting

ST. LOUIS—For the first time—except for its Annual Conference session each year—the NUL Board of Trustees convened a regular meeting in outside New York City.

Host of the Spring gathering, held here April 5-6, was the UL of St. Louis. Present were Trustees from various League cities across the country.

One highlight of the meeting was announced of the $215,000 Carnegie grant for youth service programs (See story, Page 1).

At a special press conference President Steeger and Executive Director Whitney Young discussed other current League developments. In interviews with reporters, they drew attention to two new League publications, "Talent Bank, USA," a three-year illustrated report on TST and other youth incentive programs, and "A Fair Chance."

A third high spot of the meeting was a luncheon honoring the Trustees, given by the St. Louis League at the Statler-Hilton Hotel. Presiding was Judge Theodore McMillian of the 8th Circuit Court of Missouri, UL of St. Louis president. Eugene H. Buder, retiring president, was master of ceremonies.

Mayor Raymond R. Tucker headed a roster of distinguished community leaders attending. Dr. Werner Z. Hirsch, director of regional studies at Washington University, was principal speaker. He emphasized the important role played by education in developing the opportunity potential of the city.

NUL staffers attending the Spring meeeting were Alexander J. Allen; Nelson C. Jackson; Enid Baird and Guichard Parris.

The proceedings concluded with the afternoon business sessions of the Trustees. (Other pictures on Pages 3, 7 and 8).

HAILED AT LUNCHEON—Among those honored at St. Louis Board affair were (bottom, l. to r.) Whitney M. Young, Jr., Mayor Tucker and Judge McMillan. Top: M. Leo Bohanon and Henry Steeger.

CLEVELAND—Although the United States has hurtled a man into orbit around the earth, "we still can't send a next busload of white and Negro students into Mississippi."

This paradox was expressed by Carl Rowan, Deputy Assistant U. S. Secretary of State, in an address to the 44th Annual Meeting of the Cleveland UL.

Mr. Rowan told a turn-away crowd that he is particularly appalled by a feeling popularly expressed by white people, that Negroes are the principal beneficiaries as racism is reduced.

PHILADELPHIA—The UL of Philadelphia launched its annual membership drive with a luncheon at the Sheraton Hotel. Alexander J. Allen, NUL associate executive director, was speaker. He stressed that "any community service agency that might seek to soft-pedal urgency of problems it faces would be traitor to its constituency and to its basic reason for being."

NEW YORK—The New York World's Fair Corporation came under attack recently for what some construed to be "a calculated indifference" to racial bias in hiring practices in the current phases of the 1964-65 exposition.

The UL of Greater New York publicized the fact that no Negroes had been employed in technical or professional capacities in the Fair's initial cadre of 100 workers.

Almost simultaneously with the disclosures by the ULGNY, UN diplomat Ralph Bunche was appointed to the executive committee of the Fair corporation, headed by Robert Moses, fabled leader of civic enterprises in the nation's greatest metropolis.

The ULGNY has urged that Mr. Moses act swiftly to "resolve an apparent pattern of discrimination in employment.

New Jersey UL Is Leader In Housing Plans

ELIZABETH, N. J.—A recommendation that the UL of Eastern Union County take the lead in establishment of a city-wide housing committee to assist municipal officials in reaching decisions on local issues related to that field as they heartily endorsed at a recent meeting of welfare and redevelopment officials.

Two of the more crucial issues, concerning which the UL of Eastern Union County has been particularly active, are a proposed new housing code as a bulwark against civic flight and a recommendation that community leaders urge that FHA modify policies that now preclude its ensuring mortgage loans on homes in areas zoned for business and commercial use, or adjacent to them.

A questionnaire distributed by the UL produced some interesting results in both issues. Among the more important statistics developed were these:

It was noted that about 46 percent of the households contracted had some knowledge of the urban relocation program; 30 percent heard about it, but did not understand it; and 24 percent knew nothing of it.

Eighty-four percent of the persons contracted wanted to live in Elizabeth and slightly more than 50 percent indicated they wanted to move back to the area if they had to move; 43 percent of the heads of households expressed an interest in buying new homes and the same percentage wanted to rent, but only 5 percent wanted to buy in nearby communities.

The study showed the largest number (41 percent of persons paid between 50-75 dollars a month for rent (not including heat and electricity).

The largest percentage of households with school-age children (23 percent) had two children in school; 34 percent had no children in school. However, in this group it was found that some of the older children had dropped out of school ■

'Let's adopt a baby . . .'

Two Cities Tackle The 'Hapless Tot' Problem

In Kansas City:

KANSAS CITY—A project launched by the UL of Kansas City a year ago at request of the United Fund and the city's Health and Welfare Counsel to find adoptive parents for Negro babies is producing gratifying results, local UL officials report.

Originally the program—titled Adoptive Home Recruitment Project—centered on children from Florence Home, a voluntary agency. Soon, however, a more extensive problem was unearthed—finding foster homes and adoptive parents for Negro children born out of wedlock at General Hospital.

This is a city institution where the volume of illegitimate births is high and there are no services for them available through either the Juvenile Court (the adoption agency) or Family Service (the foster home agency).

Advised of the scope and the vital implications of the project, the Greater Kansas City chapter of Links, Inc., made a substantial contribution toward production of brochures and other literature.

The general chairman of a city-wide adoption committee set up to spearhead the AHRP is a member of the Links, and two other members are on the committee. Also represented on the body, functioning under auspices of the League, are Alpha Kappa Alpha, Deltas, Kansas Citians, Association of Colored Women, church and other groups.

The UL of Kansas City has set up machinery whereby prospective foster parents, reluctant to adopt because they are unacquainted with the facts, and "seared away from it" because of misinformation, may get answers to some of the principal questions that arise. Among questions most frequently posed are these:

Q—How do we apply?

A—Call the Urban League, where staff will help you make your application and inform you on the next steps to take.

Q—What investigations are involved?

A—The adoption agency makes home study in order to get to know you and your home and thus be able to place the most suitable child with you.

Q—How long does it take?

A—This depends largely on your own promptness in having your physical examination and presenting your application. The adoption agency acts as promptly as possible.

Q—How much does it cost?

A—No child will be deprived of a home, nor a family of a child, due to lack of money. Every effort is made to set court costs according to ability to pay.

Q—Are there risks involved?

A—If you get a child through a professional child-placing agency, you have the protection of knowing the child has had complete medical and phychological study.

League officials are gratified at progress of the AHRP and the response accorded it by the community. For example, in the first few months of its operation twenty couples found and adopted infants through the League-sponsored project ■

In Winston-Salem:

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.—There is probably no more tragic future for a human being today than to be without a family.

In the much-publicized statistics of the so-called "population explosion" of the 1960s, a child is born every 10.5 seconds. This means that every hour 300 children come into our way of life under every concievable prospect of tomorrow.

There can be no statistics, of course, as to how many of this staggering total — Negro and white — will have to face life with only public assistance their parent; with no encouragement of a family unit to guide and inspire them to worthwhile years ahead.

There is nothing new in the situation. It is more crucial than ever before though, because there are so many.

With this in mind, the Winston-Salem UL Guild has this year shaped a drive designed to seek out adoptive parents who for one reason or another are reluctant to adopt a child.

Biggest stumbling block to the problem, the UL leaders have determined, is the erroneous belief that adoption hinges on economic status.

The Winston-Salem UL, through dilligent effort by the Guild, set forth early in 1962 to dissolve these assumptions and, at the same time, "introduce" an adoptive Negro child to a family.

They found that the church is a vital part of making this part of American teamwork workable. They discovered, too, that both sides of the adoptive problem—the natural mother and the prospective parents—are woefully ill-informed.

John McDowell, superintendent of the Forsyth County (Winston-Salem) Welfare Department, told the UL Guild:

"There are more white couples wanting to adopt children than there are babies to fill the demand. On the other and, there are more Negro babies available for adoption than there are prospective parents."

This set the Guild to work.

They were advised by R. Winfred Tyndall, executive director of the Associated Family and Child Service Agency, that:

"There is a difference percentagewise between use by Negro and white couples of social agencies for adoptive purposes and work with unwed mothers. As a result of these differences, very few children placed for adoption are Negro."

The Winston-Salem Guild has turned its facilities all-out to assist not only the agencies headed by Mr. Tyndall and Mr. McDowell to inform both the mother who must relinquish her child and the parents who yearn for a child, but also they have enlisted support of the local clergy.

Mrs. Martha Young, retiring president of the Winston-Salem Guild, is chairman of the adoption committee. Through this group, clubs, organizations and individuals have been mobilized to participate in the program. Working in close concert, the public and private agencies of the community have mapped an extensive project of counseling and allied services to prospective parents and Negro mothers required to give up their babies ■

WHAT THEY SAY ABOUT US

Excerpts from editorial comment in leading newspapers concerning the Urban League:

OKLAHOMA CITY TIMES

In Demand

The fact that the local Urban League is having difficulties in obtaining a new director reflects an interesting trend in American life.

Officials of the local organization explain that the usual sources of supply of Negro directors are being dried up by the increased demands by private industry and government for trained and talented Negroes.

In some cases the trend has come because of industry's own initiative; in others because of the Kennedy administration's policy of bringing more Negroes into government; and in still others because of the administration's insistence that industries

WASHINGTON POST AND TIMES-HERALD

Foundation for Progress

The program to promote job opportunities for Negroes worked out by The Washington Urban League and the Merchants and Manufacturers Association lays an indispensable foundation stone for the healthy development of this community's economy. The League has undertaken to maintain a roster of specialized skills of Negro job applicants; and the Association, on its side, has urged its 385 member firms to work for the establishment of specialized job-training courses in Washington area high schools and colleges and to adhere faithfully to the principle of merit hiring, without regard to race, creed or color.

In this period of changing racial patterns, a useful and necessary role has been played by organizations which staged protest demonstrations and carried test cases into court. But the quiet, unsensational work of the Washington Urban League in fostering understanding and opening opportunities has been no less vital.

SAN FRANCISCO NEWS-CALL BULLETIN

Job Aid for Negroes

As pointed out in the News-Call Bulletin's recent series, "The Negro in San Francisco," a constantly recurring roadblock against improvement of the Negro's lot is limited job opportunity.

It is encouraging news then that the Urban League has received a $39,000 Rosenberg Foundation grant to set up a program of career clinics. It is hoped that professional counseling will help the Negro overcome the social and historical forces which have kept him from realizing his full employment potential.

The results of the League's efforts will be carefully watched. If as rewarding as expected, they should be extended. (See story, page 4).

PEORIA JOURNAL-STAR

Urban League Would Be Asset

We are always admirers of something that "works," something that produces results, something that accomplishes predetermined end.

Thus it is that we are looking hopefully toward the efforts of a group of Peorians to bring to our town an office of the National Urban League. The sponsoring committee is facing a critical year in this endeavor. It is a year when it must not only prove the worth of having an Urban League to the National Urban League itself but to Peorians in general and the board of the United Fund in particular.

To bring it here, its Peoria sponsoring committee must follow a definite pattern set up by the Urban League itself.

WASHINGTON AFRO-AMERICAN

Welcome, Mrs. Johnson

A charming and very able lady has "invaded" our town and we hope she will be here for a long, long time.

We have reference to Mrs. Cernoria Johnson, newly appointed Washington representative of the National Urban League.

Mrs. Johnson's appointment is an overdue recognition by the National Urban League that somebody has to devote full time to the relationship of the National Urban League to Congress, the White House, and to legislation which vitally concerns colored people.

NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

It Ain't Funny, Louisiana

Barely concealing their chuckles, Louisiana segregationists are predicting that the Louis Boyds soon will find how bad things are for Negroes in the North, and realize how heavenly everything really was back in Dixie.

We wish Boyd and his family the best of fortune. But in the meantime there is no espaping the fact that such episodes as this are simply, as termed by N. Y. Urban League director Dr. Edward S. Lewis, "a vicious publicity stunt designed to embarrass the North."

DAYTON JOURNAL-HERALD

A More Sophicticated Negro Vote

One of the significant, though infrequently-discussed, strengths of the Dayton area is its ability to work on some of the fundamental problems of human relations without setting off citizen against citizen, group against group.

This strength would be impaired, we believe, if one of the ideas mentioned at the Urban League's 14th annual Human Relations Institute this week were taken seriously. This idea is that "a more sophisticated Negro vote" is influential in breaking down the barriers that tend to restrict the homes of Negroes to certain sections of the city.

This newspaper has long advocated the full participation of Negroes (and of all citizens) in the affairs of the city. It called for Negro representation in the city commission two years ago and supported the successful candidacy of Don L. Crawford for a seat on the city commission last year. It believes strongly in equal opportunity for all ■

RESEARCHER UPPED TO NEW POST

ATLANTA — Herman M. Sweatt, former research director of the Cleveland UL, has taken over as associate director of the NUL Southern Regional Office here.

Mr. Sweatt became known internationally when he, as the test plaintiff, won the U. S. Supreme Court case against race segregation in "separate but equal" schools.

In 1950 he became the first Negro to enter the University of Texas Law School. He then went on to earn a master's degree in social work at Atlanta University and did field work in the UL industrial relations program here.

'STRANDED DOMESTICS' PLIGHT REVIEWED AT ULGNY MEETING

NEW YORK—The Urban League of Greater New York was sponsor of an emergency conference called to air the pros and cons of long-smoldering issues arising from the plight of the "stranded domestic."

Under scrutiny, in addition to the morals question raised, were existing and proposed legislation drawn to protect maids, waitresses and other young women, who are being lured daily to New York and other Metropolitan centers by advertisements in various Southern publications.

It has been asserted, with mounting frequency, that young women have been cruelly victimized by unscrupulous employment tactics reminiscent of the "shanghai" practices of the 19th century. In some of these cases, it has been publicly alleged, the victims recruited from remote sections of the country, have been forced into a life of ill repute in order to survive.

Representatives of the UL and other private and public agencies attended the meeting.

Discussion centered not only on the moral but the economic implications of a situation. There have been charges, increasing in intensity in recent years, that "bait" ads have been placed in Southern and Carribean newspapers offering exaggerated opportunities for domestic employees in the cities of the Northern United States.

Bernard J. O'Connell, New York City Commissioner of Licenses, denied that conditions were as deplorable as some of the conferees had charged.

Robert F. Wrisley, Deputy Industrial Commissioner of the New York State Department of Labor, acknowledged that in practice the state laws are enforced in a "patchwork" degree by local officials who "do not even know the law, let alone implement it."

Jerome Lefkowitz, State Labor Department Counsel, said he had received reports that "shocking circumstances" have been disclosed in some suburban communities. These included seizure of the prospective employee's luggage; billing illegally for food, lodging and other services required by law, to be provided by the employing agency and improper supervision of the recruited worker between her arrival in the city and her acceptance of the job she has paid for. State legislation is now pending which would correct some aspects of the situation outside the City of New York.

Conferees called into the meeting by the ULGNY took the legislative proposals under advisement and agreed to supply their proponents with all possible objective information concerning this explosive situation ■

DOBBS HOUSE STRIKE IS YOUR CONCERN!

Nearly 300 workers at the Dobbs House at the Atlanta Municipal Airport organized into the Hotel & Restaurant Workers Union, and voted for it in a National Labor Relations Board secret election. When they could not get an agreement they began a strike on April 16th. Nearly every one of the strikers is a Negro. The Company is recruiting strikebreakers from the greater Atlanta Community, and nearly everyone of them is a Negro.

The strike is legal - it is being supported by the National Union - the 94 Unions in the Atlanta Labor Council, AFL-CIO, and the thousands of Union workers in the Georgia State AFL-CIO have endorsed and are supporting the strike.

These workers were being paid as little as 75 cents an hour in the Airport Terminal. Waitresses are paid as little as $2.00. a day. In the catering division they are paid the wage-and-hour minimum of $1.15 an hour. Is this decent pay? Or sweat shop wages?

IS THIS WHAT YOU WANT IN YOUR CITY OF ATLANTA?

Do you want a Dobbs Company at your City Airport which hires 70 strikebreakers without Food Handlers Health Certificates?

Do you want a Dobbs Company at your City Airport which has private gunmen roaming over the airport and the town and pulling guns on Negro strikers?

Do you want a Dobbs Company at your City Airport which sells liquor to minors, and to persons who are obviously drunk?

Do you want a Dobbs Company at your City Airport that uses strikebreakers who run Dobbs trucks into a plane, gas truck, and baggage tug at the airport?

Do you want a Dobbs Company at your City Airport which is charged with violation of the National Labor Relations Act, and discrimination against its employees?

HERE IS WHAT YOU CAN DO-

Tell your congregation - your friends - everyone - that Negro workers should not scab on Negro strikers.

Join with the thousands of labor union members and their families in supporting this strike.

Let the Mayor and Aldermen and City Airport Manager know that you do not like what is going on at the City Airport.

Let the Mayor and Alderman know that you do not support the Dobbs House monopoly at the airport which means that you have to eat scab prepared and served food at your City Airport.

Let the airlines know you won't eat scab food--and you want a credit on your plane ticket for the meal you do not eat.

Urge the Mayor to get the parties to settle the strike fairly and honorably.

THE DOBBS HOUSE STRIKE

The workers at Dobbs House, Inc., organized into the Hotel and Restaurant and Bartenders Employees Union. In a Labor Board election in November, 1962, they voted for the Union by a two to one vote, and the Union was certified as the bargaining agency for these workers. These nearly 300 employees at the Atlanta Municipal Airport work in the restaurants, at the counters, and in the catering divisions which furnish food which is put on board Eastern, United, Piedmont, Southern, and Delta planes in Atlanta.

After being certified as the bargaining agency, the Union undertook to reach an agreement with Dobbs Houses, Inc. It was unable to reach an agreement and the workers voted to strike beginning April 16th. The strikers ranks have held firm and only a handful have deserted the strike.

The Company even while negotiations were going on began making preparations for the strike by hiring Southern Detectives, and worked out plans to bring in personnel from other towns to train strikebreakers, according to National Labor Relations Board charges filed by the Union.

SWEAT SHOP WAGES AND CONDITIONS

Dobbs employees in the Atlanta Airport Terminal are paid as little as 75 cents an hour. Waitresses are paid as little as $2.00 per day, and get no overtime pay. The catering employees who work in preparing food for the Eastern, United, Piedmont, Southern, and Delta planes are paid the $1.15 minimum required by the Wage Hour Law.

However, employees in the airport restaurant operations must furnish their own uniforms at their cost. In the catering division employees are charged 50 cents a meal whether they eat them or not, and this is taken out of their pay whether they authorize it or not. These meals may be stale meals which are not sold because of bad weather, or left-overs - or hot dogs. Right after the Union won the NLRB election the Company tried to feed these workers ox-tails, neck bones, pig ears, and pig tails for six days.

There is no shift premium whether you work at day time or on the evening shift. If you come to work and there is no work for you, you wait around on your own time, and get no reporting pay or even car fare for having come to work. There is no job security, and workers are fired without notice, regardless of whether they have worked for many years and given loyal and faithful service.

HERE IS HOW DOBBS IS OPERATING NOW
GUN-TOTING SOUTHERN DETECTIVES

Since the strike began Dobbs House has hired scabs and strikebreakers to break the strike. It is paying hundreds of dollars each week to Southern Detectives. This Company is notorious for its strikebreaking and anti-union activities.

These gun-toting private detectives have pulled guns on strikers and threatened to shoot these unarmed workers. One of these hired gunmen is presently under $2000 bond for pointing a gun at four strikers and threatening to use it on them.

In another instance a Southern Detective stopped a striker coming out of a telephone booth, pulled a gun on him, and made him hold his hands in the air for sometime, because he claimed the Hapeville police had a warrant for him.

These private gun-toting detectives have harassed and sought to interfere with the peaceful picketing, and have repeatedly interfered with the efforts of the pickets to carry on their picketing in a peaceful and orderly manner cussing and abusing them and seeking to intimidate them, and thereby break the strike.

70 STRIKEBREAKERS CAUGHT WITHOUT HEALTH CARDS

Although the law requires that all persons handling food have health cards, the Dobbs House in its diabolical haste to break the strike has completely ignored the law in hiring strikebreakers without health cards.

As a result of the complaint made by the Atlanta Labor Council, AFL-CIO to Dr. James F. Hackney, Fulton County Health Commissioner, an agent from this Department found 70 persons working, who for weeks had been preparing and serving food at Dobbs House and who did not have Health Certificates.

When this County Health Agent found these people at work without Health Cards, the Dobbs House people sent these scabs to have health examinations which included X-Ray for Tuberculosis, and Wasserman Test for Venereal Disease. IN THE MEANTIME, HOWEVER, THESE STRIKEBREAKERS WERE PERMITTED TO CONTINUE WORKING AT DOBBS HOUSE PREPARING FOOD WHICH IS BEING SOLD TO THE PUBLIC, AND WHICH IS BEING PLACED ON PLANES LEAVING THIS AIRPORT.

Not one case was made against this Dobbs Company for hiring and permitting these 70 people to go to work handling food without Food Handlers Health Certificates, even though this is a clear violation of existing laws and regulations.

DOBBS HOUSE SELLING LIQUOR TO MINORS

Municipal Court Judge Ed Brock has bound over William Paul Porter, Liquor Store Manager for Dobbs House for selling liquor to three minors, after a hearing involving one negro and two white soldiers.

The evidence showed that these soldiers, one of whom was already badly intoxicated, spent several hours at the airport, and had no difficulty in buying bottles of liquor from the Dobbs House Liquor Store, at various times during the afternoon although one of them was 18 years old and the other two were 17.

The three soldiers had previously pled guilty to being drunk in a public place, and to violation of the Wine and Beer Ordinance. One of the soldiers involved in the arrest testified that one of the three soldiers was so sick that he kept pleading for them to help him.

In another incident in the Passport Lounge where poured drinks are served, when the age of a soldier was questioned as being a minor, the waitress involved in serving the drink quickly removed it from in front of the soldier, and claimed that it was a coca-cola.

It was only ninety days ago that Police Chief Herbert Jenkins warned all liquor dealers that selling liquor to minors would result in loss of licenses, and that these dealers would be held strictly accountable for violation.

PLANES AND TRUCKS DAMAGED BY SCABS

A strike-breaker who had been working for Dobbs only a few days backed a Dobbs Food truck into the tail section of a Delta DC-6 plane. The plane's tail cone and elevator were so badly damaged that the passengers were transferred to another flight, and the plane was taken out of service for repairs. Normally, such trucks carrying food to Delta and Eastern planes are manned by two workers, one of whom directs the driver how to handle the truck around the plane.

Another Dobbs truck also hit one of the gas trucks which supply gas to planes on the field. It is well known that these gas trucks are highly inflammable, and any accident involving them might well result in a catastrophic fire or explosion.

In another accident one of the Dobbs House trucks ran into a tug which carries airplane passengers baggage. This occurred on City of Atlanta Airport property.

DOBBS HAS EXCLUSIVE LEASES AT CITY OWNED AIRPORT

All concession and business leases at the Airport are made with the City of Atlanta. These leases require Dobbs to "conduct a first class business of high quality".

These leases require Dobbs to "comply with all federal, state, and local laws, ordinances of the City of Atlanta, and rules and regulations" applicable to their business.

The City of Atlanta can cancel any Dobbs lease upon its failure to comply with any of its obligations. The City of Atlanta can require Dobbs to set reasonable prices on food sold by it.

In return Dobbs House has a monopoly, and the exclusive right to sell food, liquor, gifts, put food on planes, operate vending machines at the airport.

IS THIS WHAT THE CITY OF ATLANTA WANTS?

Does the City of Atlanta want a Dobbs Company at its airport which hires 70 people without Food Handlers Health Certificates?

Does the City of Atlanta want a Dobbs Company at its airport which has private gunmen roaming over the airport and on the City property and pulling guns on people?

Does the City of Atlanta want a Dobbs Company at its airport which sells liquor to minors, and to persons who are obviously drunk?

Does the City of Atlanta want a Dobbs Company at its airport that uses strikebreakers who run into planes, gas trucks, and baggage tugs on the airport field?

Does the City of Atlanta want a Dobbs Company at its airport which operates a low sweat shop pay establishment?

Does the City of Atlanta want a Dobbs Company at its airport which is charged with numerous violations of the National Labor Relations Act, and with discrimination against its employees?

WAKE UP ATLANTA -

DOBBS HOUSE IS RUINING YOUR GOOD NAME!

The Hotel and Restaurant Workers strike is being supported not only by its National Union, but also by the 94 unions in the Atlanta Labor Council, AFL-CIO, and the thousands of other labor union workers in the Georgia State AFL-CIO.

The nearly 300 workers of Dobbs House who are on strike ask the support of the citizens of Atlanta. Let the Mayor and City Aldermen know that you do not like what is going on at the City's Airport. Let the Airport Manager - and the City Officials know that you do not like the monopoly of the Dobbs House in serving scab prepared and served food at the City Airport. Get the Delta, Southern, United, Piedmont, and Eastern airlines to give you credit on your plane ticket for your meal that you do not eat.

PART I

POPULATION

Atlanta, with its million people, is presently one of the twenty-five largest cities in the United States, and some authorities estimate that this metropolitan city will have over two million citizens by 1980. The addition of one million citizens in a twenty year period (1960-1980) will tax greatly the ingenuity of Atlanta's financial, educational and business, leaders and the heads of government. In the main, Atlanta's people in 1980 will, constitute, based upon reliable estimates, about forty percent of the population of the State of Georgia.

The Standard Metropolitan Atlanta area has 232,169 nonwhite citizens who live in the five counties of Clayton, Cobb, DeKalb, Fulton and Gwinnett. Of the total number of nonwhite, 186,820 or 80.5 percent live inside the city limits of Atlanta as compared to 300,635 or 38.3 percent of the white residents as shown in Tables 1 and 2.

Atlanta's attraction, as a good city for work and decent, safe, and sanitary homes, can be maintained and enhanced only in so far as positive and bold steps are taken to protect the neighborhoods and improve the living conditions of the 232,000 nonwhite citizens, in Metropolitan Atlanta. The nonwhite citizens, constituting 22 percent of the total in the Metropolitan Area, and representing 38.3 percent (187,000) of the City's population, live on approximately one-sixth of the residential land.(1) The housing conditions and the general neighborhood characteristics of the nonwhite population still leave much to be desired in terms of Atlanta's capabilities to abolish present and prevent future slums.

The number of Atlanta's nonwhite residents is increasing. The Metropolitan Planning Commission estimated that 246,545 nonwhites lived in Metropolitan area in 1962, and that "as is the case in most metropolitan centers, a large proportion of the nonwhite population lives in the Central City."

(1) Hearings Before the United States Commission On Civil Rights, Housing, Testimony of Robert C. Stuart, Metropolitan Planning Commission, Atlanta, Georgia, April 10, 1959, p. 480.

Mr. Stuart testified that "Negroes who comprise 32 percent of the population are compressed into 16 percent of the developed residential area."

The Metropolitan Planning Commission's growth-estimate and observation mean that the nonwhite population constantly faces an artificial shortage of land for residential use; a fact which requires that great care in planning and developing decent, safe, and sanitary housing for present and future citizens.

PART II

HOUSING

The confinement of the nonwhite citizens to limited land areas, coupled with the population increase of this minority, tends to affect adversely the housing and living conditions of nonwhites which, in turn, adversely affects the social and economic progress of the entire city. Thirty-four (34) percent or 19,679 of the total 57,879 dwelling units occupied by nonwhites had more than one person per room while only nine (9) percent of the white occupied dwelling units had more than one person per room in 1960. Not only is the nonwhite dwelling unit over-crowded than the white dwelling unit, but it is also true that the average nonwhite (about 4.1) family is larger.

The over-crowding of families in dwelling units, the limited access to decent housing and land in all geographic areas and low income of nonwhites are some contributing factors to substandard housing, family disorganization and slum neighborhoods. Over four out of every ten nonwhite dwelling units were sub-standard in 1960. The Table 3 shows the total number and percent of substandard structures for nonwhite occupants.

a - Amount of Rent

The average (median) gross rent paid by nonwhite renters in 1960 was $52.00 as compared to $23.72 paid in 1950. The Census showed that the greatest number of nonwhites (15,457) paid between $40 and $59.00 per month rent; the Modal Group. Please see Tables 5 and 6.

The average rent paid by nonwhite renters varied from $30.00 in Gwinnett County, $37.00 in Cobb, $39.00 in Clayton County to $53.00 in the City of Atlanta. Please see Table 5.

The nonwhite dwelling unit has an average of 3.7 room, but the nonwhite families of Clayton, Cobb, and Gwinnett Counties have 4.1 rooms per dwelling unit as indicated in Table 5.

(1) "Gross Rent" - The computed rent termed "gross rent" is the contract rent plus the average monthly cost of utilities (water, electricity, gas) and fuels such as wood, coal, and oil if these items are paid for by the renter in addition to contract rent. Thus, gross rent eliminates rent differentials which result from varying practices with respect to the inclusion of heat and utilities as part of the rental payment. In rural territory, rent data exclude rent for farm units.

(b) - Ability To Pay For Shelter

The ability to own or rent decent, safe and sanitary housing is dependent upon income. The Housing and Home Finance Agency reported in the bulletin the "Potential Housing Demands of Nonwhite Population In Selected Metropolitan Areas" that there have been substantial increases in the earnings of nonwhite Atlantans between 1950 and 1960 as shown in Tables 7 and 8.

The median income for all families was $5,758 and $4,901 for families and unrelated individuals. The average income for nonwhite families was $3,033 or 89.9 percent less than the average for all families. For nonwhite families and unrelated individuals, the average income of $2,503 was 95.8 percent less than the average of $4,901 for all Atlantans in this group. Please see Table 8.

Although the nonwhite family income is about half of the average for all citizens, the nonwhite family pays only $15.00 less than the $67.00 average rent paid by all citizens. The nonwhite family pays, in other words, pays proportionately more rent than does the white Atlantan; a fact that may be attributed to the inability of nonwhite Atlantans to have access to the total housing market but instead limited land areas.

c. - Some Recently Constructed Dwelling Units

Table 9 lists 1,180, the relatively new apartment-units occupied by nonwhites. These units, in addition to those under construction throughout the city, rent from $62.50 for a one bedroom unit to $100.00 for a three bedroom unit per month. These units have conventional loans and the roster does not by any means account for all of the apartments that have been built for nonwhites in Metropolitan Atlanta.

With one or two exceptions, these dwelling units are duplicates of each other. For the most part, these units exhibit little or no imagination in design, and they have been crowded on relatively small tracts of land. Practically every bit of useable land has been devoted to the dwelling unit and parking. Unless the better housing code is enforced quickly and serious attention given to planning nonwhite neighborhoods in addition to the urban renewal programs - there will be created bigger and worse slums than those now being torn down.

For example, the apartments on the northside of Simpson Street near West Lake Avenue, would not have been built in quantity in the ravine if the new housing code had been in effect several years ago; this development represents a fancier slum.

d. - Rental Units Under Construction

There are three types of rental units - type in terms of method of financing under construction for nonwhite residents, and they are typed as conventional, F. H. A., and public housing.

(1) Conventional Financed Units

The exact number is not available at the present, but such units are being constructed on the westside of the city, along Simpson, Gordon, Delmar Roads and Anderson Avenue.

These units, eventhough compacted on relatively small plots of ground have all of the modern conveniences which will improve the over-all housing conditions of nonwhites. Many of these projects have hard-wood floors, kitchen cabinets, ceramic tile baths with full tub and showers and adequate off-street parking.

One developer of 84 units on Simpson Road advertises:

10-one bedroom units will rent for -------	$59.50 per month
10-three bedroom units will rent for------	82.50 per month
62-two bedroom units will rent for ------	69.50 per month

Only a few of the conventionally financed units provide stoves and refrigerators.

(2) F. H. A. Financed Units

The Church Homes Project (now Wheat Street Gardens and sponsored by Wheat Street Baptist Church) of 520 units is the only F. H. A. rental project being constructed in the city.

The first section of 280 units, with 156 apartments renting for $69.50 per month and 124 units renting for $75.50 per month, is financed under Section 221-d-3 (below market interest rate of 3 1/8 percent). The F. H. A., issued a commitment of $2,975,000 and established a low density of 24 apartments per acre for the entire 22 acre tract. The application for the second section of 240 apartments is in process of being prepared for submission to F. H. A., under Section 221-d-3, which now requires a 3 3/8 interest rate and the rents will be comparable to those of the first section. By the end of 1964, a majority of the first units of section one of Wheat Street Gardens will be ready for occupancy.

The Atlanta Urban League initiated the idea and served as the coordinator of the project. The Atlanta Life loaned $450,000 to the Church to buy the land, Citizens Trust Company handled the acquisition, the Trust Company of Georgia made the construction loan, and the firm of Wise, Simpson & Aiken drew the plans.

(3) Public Housing

The Atlanta Housing Authority has 850 public housing units under construction. Six hundred and fifty units, to be known as the J. W. E. Bowen Homes, is now ready for occupancy on Field Road - north of Bankhead Highway and west of Hightower Road and tenants are moving into the project. Two hundred and fifty units of public housing for the elderly are in process of being built adjacent to the Grady Homes on Decatur Street. Construction began on this project during the last of April.

A total of 8,144 public housing units have been built in Atlanta as of February 1964, and 1390 units are scheduled to be built by about 1966; at which time Atlanta will have a total of 9,534 publicly owned units for low income families.

The three accompanying tables show the racial occupancy of Atlanta's publicly owned units, the number of units in each project and the geographic location of the projects.

e. - Other Housing

(1) Used - Aside from and over and above the rental units now being developed, several significant developments are worth noting, and they are:

1. Peyton Road Area - This area, south of Gordon Road and between Willis Mill Road on the east and Lynhurst on the west - was formerly occupied by all white residents. It is estimated that abou 150 - 200 homes, ranging from $10,000 to $50,000 will be eventual ly sold to nonwhites; at the present, the area is mixed racially.
2. Grove Park - The area roughly between Chapel Road on the east, Simpson on the south, Hightower on the west and the Bankhead High way on the north, contains about 300-500 homes that have been gradually purchased by nonwhites. The estimated selling price range from $10,000 to $20,000.
3. North Bankhead - The white residents between Bankhead and Perry Boulevard have started to sell their homes to nonwhites. On a recent trip through the section, it was observed that nonwhite home owners have bought and are refurbishing the newly acquired houses. It is estimated that about 300 homes ranging from $9,000 to $20,000 will be bought by nonwhites over a period of two or three years.

4. East Atlanta - Large numbers of homes in the Moreland Avenue Area have been sold to nonwhites. The estimated price range is between $10,000 and $15,000.

(2) New

1. The Area bound by Gordon Road on the north, the proposed Perimeter Road on the east, Cascade on the south and the Industrial Boulevard on the west, contains a small number of used housing and about 200 acres of vacant land, to be developed for new single family homes.

   The entire area is presently being studied by the Metropolitan Planning Commission, The Atlanta Urban League and the residents, with the idea of developing a community-plan for the orderly growth and development of the area. The plan, similar to the Collier Heights Plan, may provide for about three hundred (300) single family new homes, ranging from $10,000 to $40,000, and it should be available by July 1, 1964.

2. Willis Mill - Peyton Road Area - Plans for the development of about 300 acres of vacant land are being drawn by the City Planning Department at the instigation of Mayor Ivan Allen. The exact number of owner and rental units that will be built in the area has not been determined.

3. Urban Renewal Areas

   a. The Atlanta Urban League has two groups organized for the purpose of buying thirty acres of land in the University Urban Renewal project area and building a total of 580 units. It is hoped that all of these units will be rental units in the $60-$70 class with F. H. A. assistance.

b. Rockdale Park - After this depressed area will have been cleared by the Atlanta Housing Authority, the land will be sold to developers who will construct 168 single family units and 1,498 multi-family units. It is estimated that these units will be completed in 1966.

c. Thomasville - A total of 150 single family homes (221 units) have been built in this area. Some public housing units could be built in this area.

f. - Proposed Rental Units

1. Simpson Woods Apartments - The Piedmont Development Company proposes to build 336 apartments at 2125 Simpson Road, northwest. There will be 80 one-bedroom units to rent for $63.50 each, 192 two-bedroom units to rent for $74.50 monthly, and 64 three-bedroom apartments to rent for $87.50. The Life of Georgia advanced $1,500,000 of the total $2,150,000 to develop the project which is scheduled for completion in or about December, 1965.

2. The Bankhead Highway Project - The City Planning Department, recently recommended approval of 450 rental units to be built on 32 acres of land in the Maddox Park area. Details relative to monthly rent and size of apartments were not available to the Atlanta Urban League.

g. - The Atlanta Urban League and Urban Renewal

On June 3, 1955, the Atlanta Urban League issued a report entitled, "A Suggested Proposal for the Redevelopment of the Atlanta University Area" to the President's Council of the University Center. The report suggested that the area, now known as the University Urban Renewal Project, be considered by the Presidents of Atlanta University, Clark, Morehouse, Morris Brown and Spelman Colleges and the Interdenominational Theological Seminary in order to accomplish the following objectives:

1. Obtain additional land for the expansion of the campuses;
2. Curb the spread of blight and slums surrounding the institutions;
3. Provide space for decent housing for faculty and staff members; and
4. Affect a street pattern which would at least connect the campuses of Atlanta University, Morehouse, Spelman and Clark Colleges.

Acceptance of the Atlanta Urban League's proposal by the Presidents, who in turn submitted the proposal to the Aldermanic Board of Atlanta for approval, resulted in the City of Atlanta, through the Atlanta Housing Authority, acquiring 26.24 acres of land adjacent to the various campuses for expansion. The Atlanta Housing Authority acquired the twenty-six acres, as shown in Table 13 at a cost of $1,900,170 and re-sold the land to the colleges for $1,049,600 on a negotiated and agreed basis.

In short, the Atlanta Urban League's suggestion saved the local colleges $850,570, the difference between the acquisition cost and the negotiated sale price. In other words, the Atlanta Housing Authority purchased the land for $72,415 per acre and re-sold the land to the colleges for $40,000 per acre on a negotiated basis. The League's proposal saved the colleges $32,415 on each acre of land purchased from the City of Atlanta.

The Thomasville and Rockdale Park Urban Renewal Projects were also recommended to the City of Atlanta for acceptance and implementation.

The Atlanta Urban League is directly responsible for three of the five original urban renewal projects currently programmed in Atlanta.

In addition to the on-going urban renewal projects, Atlanta proposes to have four more such projects, Ga. Tech, David T. Howard, Buttermilk Bottom, and the West End developments. It is estimated that these developments will displace 651 Negro families.

1.	Ga. Tech project will displace about ---------	200 families
2.	David T. Howard project will displace about---	86 families
3.	Auditorium Site will displace about ----------	140 families
4.	West End project will displace about ---------	25 families
	Sub-total ----------	451 families
5.	Stadium project will displace about ----------	100 families
6.	Nash Area project will displace about -------- (New High School)	100 families
	Grand Total ----------	651 families

The Buttermilk Bottom project, in Census Tract F-18, will contain the proposed new auditorium, and it contains some of the worse housing in Atlanta. The area had 3,357 dwelling units in 1960, 1252 were classed as "sound", 2,105 classified as "deteriorating-dilapidated," and the area contained 10,071 people. The clearance and rehabilitation of the housing in this area alone will demand that considerably more housing be made available to Negroes in Atlanta.

PART III

OUR SENIOR CITIZENS

The total number of elderly citizens sixty-five years of age and over increased from 27,426 in 1940 to 66,429 or 142.2 percent. It can be observed in Tables 14 and 15 that the greatest increase in the number of citizens sixty-five years of age and over occurred in DeKalb County. The location of homes for the aged in DeKalb County accounts for some of the great increase.

The nonwhite aged population amounted to 5,941 in 1940 and 13,016 in 1960. The greatest increase in the number of the nonwhite aged took place in Fulton County where the majority of the nonwhite citizens live, as was noted in Table 14.

Table 16 indicated that in 1940 the number of nonwhite females sixty-five years of age and over accounted for 55.7 percent or 3,309 of the total 5,491 nonwhite senior citizens. In 1960, the females accounted for 58.5 percent or 7,610 of the total 13,016 nonwhite senior citizens.

Over fifty percent of the nonwhite persons sixty-five years of age and over have incomes of less than $1,000 per year. Table 17 shows the distribution of the nonwhite persons 65 years of age and over according to income. It can also be observed that the median income for the nonwhite aged is about $741.00 per year, $901.00 for nonwhite males and $632.00 for females.

There are only two licensed homes for the nonwhite aged in Atlanta and they are: Happy Haven Home, with 150 patients and the Camilla Street Home with 28 patients. Happy Haven Home was recently awarded $500,000 by H. E. W. to build accommodations for 150 additional patients.

The Lena Hall Homes cares for 41 patients and the nursing home at 732 Crew Street, has about 20 patients.

It is believed that the majority of the patients in the forementioned facilities receive nursing care.

The Director of the Happy Haven Home estimates that approximately 1500 homes for senior citizens are needed in Metropolitan Atlanta.

PART IV

THREE SCORE AND TEN - 1970

By 1970, it is conservatively estimated that 7,250 new and used dwelling units will become available to nonwhite in the City of Atlanta. Of the estimated total 6,400 or 88.0 percent will be New and 850 or 12 percent will be Used housing; of the 1,868 owner occupied units, 1,018 will be New and 850 Used; and there will be 5,382 New rental units constructed primarily for nonwhite residents. See Table 18.

The New and Used housing that will become available to nonwhites will be in the City Limits of Atlanta. White home owners are selling their properties to nonwhites in the Grove Park and area north of Bankhead. Moreover, 4,192 rental units are planned for nonwhites in Urban Renewal Areas. These facts suggest that the percentage of nonwhites residing in the city will rise to about 45 percent by 1970; hence, the "white - noose" to paraphrase Mayor Dillworth of Philadelphia grows tighter around the neck of Atlanta.(1)

The 1,868 owner-occupied units will constitute 25.8 percent of the estimated 7,250 dwelling units. Over eight out of ten (86.6 percent or 1,618) will be on the westside of Atlanta in the Peyton Road, Grove Park, North Bankhead, Rockdale and Adamsville Areas. Please see Table 18.

(1) It is believed that the 3,923 acres of farm land owned by nonwhites in Metropolitan Atlanta can afford suburban living for nonwhites in the years to come. Appendix Tables 2 and 3 show the amount of land farmed by nonwhites who may hold the "key" to breaking the ever growing "White noose" around Atlanta's neck. Peter Marris, a sociologist at the Institute of Community Studies in London, wrote in the Journal of the American Institute of Planners for August, 1962 that "if the suburbs continue to balk the entry of Negro households, there could grow up a farm of political and residential apartheid" in Atlanta.

On the other hand, the majority of the rental units, with the exception of the 650 units of public housing on Field Road and the 240 units in Southeast Atlanta, are being constructed in urban renewal project areas. The rental units will account for 74.2 percent of the total 7,250 units.

The estimated growth compares most favorably with the indicated need projected by the Housing and Home Finance Agency. The December 1962 report entitled, "Potential Housing Demands of Nonwhite Population in Selected Metropolitan Areas" indicated that 458 nonwhtie families, with incomes of $7,000-$10,000, could purchase homes valued at $15,000 or more. It is estimated that 700 such homes will be constructed in the Peyton Road and Adamsville Areas.

The forementioned report stated that:

1. There were 3,119 nonwhite families with incomes between $7,000-$10,000 in Atlanta;
2. That 42 percent of the nonwhite families were renters and 58 percent owners;
3. That 353 nonwhite families or 11 percent had homes valued at $15,000 or more; and
4. That 458 additional families (nonwhite) needed homes valued at $15,000 or more to reach the white percentage.

In the main, it is possible for Atlanta to meet and exceed the estimate of the Housing and Home Finance Agency by 242 units by 1970.

Atlanta has made great progress with its five urban renewal projects. Three of the five were suggested by the Atlanta Urban League, and they were the Rockdale, Thomasville and University Projects. Because of the interest of the Atlanta Urban League, Atlanta has not experienced too much delay in disposing of its proposed residential sites. The Urban League has already assisted the Atlanta Housing Authority in directly disposing of 22 acres for 520 apartments and 4.7 acres for commercial purposes in the Butler Street Urban Renewal area. Moreover, this social agency has preliminary plans drawn for 30 acres or 580 units in the University Urban Renewal area, and groups waiting to purchase and develop the land.

The Urban League's initiative in planning and developing better housing, has enabled the Atlanta Housing Authority and developers to develop land valued at $800,100. To date, the League, upon completion of Church Homes or Wheat Street Gardens and the commercial project, will have generated about 10 million dollars worth of new construction in urban renewal areas on an annual budget of less than $40,000.00.

In addition to the League's interest in generating new construction, this agency has begun working in the Nash Area. The League works with the local neighborhood groups in developing a comprehensive plan for rehabilitating the area. The new approach of the League is to get the people themselves involved in planning and implementing their own ideas relative to rehabilitating property and people. Please see Exhibit A.

The Atlanta Urban League will continue to play its vital role in developing future urban renewal projects. The agency is presently insisting that the Buttermilk Bottom area be included among the second group of urban renewal projects. The redevelopment of this area will greatly tax Atlanta's leadership to provide more low cost housing for the nonwhite population who constitute ninety percent of the population in the Buttermilk Bottom Area. A portion of the Buttermilk Bottom area will be used for the new auditorium.

The growing concern of the Federal and State governments relative to providing medical care, and the rise in the incomes of nonwhites indicate that private enterprise should become interested in housing for the aged. The construction of such facilities on inexpensive land, outside of the City Limits of Atlanta, would tend to assure the economic success of the venture. The church leadership is being apprised of this situation by the Atlanta Urban League.

PART V

RECOMMENDATIONS

In view of the foregoing appraisal of the housing situation of nonwhites and the growth and development of Atlanta, it is suggested and hoped that:

1. The Atlanta Urban League be allocated additional funds by the Community Chest to employ two additional staff members to work in rehabilitating the property and people who live in the area bound by Northside Drive, Ashby Street, Simpson and Hunter Streets (The Nash Area), and in other areas.

   a. An additional $10,000 allocation from the Community Chest would enable the Atlanta Urban League to play an even greater role in re-planning neighborhoods and providing more decent housing and neighborhoods for Atlantans.

2. The proposed Industrial site along McDaniel Street in the Rawson-Washington Street Urban Renewal area, particularly since the land has not been sold, be rezoned and developed for residential purposes by private enterprise in order to take care of relocatees.

3. The owners of privately owned multi-family units for nonwhites might seriously consider employing four or more "Management-Aides" who would be responsible for working with tenants in cutting down on maintenance costs and helping families who may have problems relative to education, employment, etc.

   Briefly, the "Management-Aides Plan" involves:

   a. The leading banks and mortgage investment companies convene the owners of large rental projects for an exploration of the proposal;

   b. That the owners agree to pay into the "Management-Aide Plan" one dollar per month per family for staff and office operation;

   c. The "Management-Aides" check each apartment at least twice per month, and talking with the tenants relative to maintenance and other problems confronting the tenants;

   d. The "Management-Aides" report all findings to the real estate broker for appropriate action.

4. Atlanta's nonwhite aged population has been considered because of the dearth of housing for this group of citizens. Both Happy Haven and Camilla Street Homes, with a total of 178 patients, are for the most part convalescing homes. The Fulton County Alms house is nothing more than a convalescing home that caters mostly to charity patients. Therefore, it appears that housing for the elderly is needed to accommodate a large number of the 13,016 nonwhite residents in Metropolitan Atlanta.

The Atlanta Housing Authority will build and complete 240 units for the elderly by the end of 1965, and these units will be adjacent to the Henry Grady Homes. These units, in addition to the units presently occupied by nonwhite families in existing public housing projects, may partially meet the housing situation of the aged.

5. Most cities are generating new slums faster than they can salvage and rebuild their old slums. This is bound to happen as long as our urban tax system subsidizes slums by under-taxation and discourages improvements by over-taxation. Over use of land is easy to stop by zoning, but in a free enterprise economy like ours the only way to stop under use is to put the profit motive to work and make it more profitable to improve a property than to let it decay.

   The power to tax need not be only the power to destroy. It can be a power to build, to create, to improve. If the real estate structure were changed, blight and deterioration could be penalized and property improvement rewarded. Our tax structure encourages the very thing citizens are trying to prevent - the deterioration of neighborhoods and the spread of blight.

   The Atlanta Journal's editorial of February 21, 1961, entitled, "Nailing Down Renewal" stated that:

   > "The current method of assessing taxes on slum property is all but an encouragement to slum owners to keep their property in as poor condition as possible. The worse the property, the lower the taxes, and therefore, the higher the profit."
   > The forementioned editorial further stated that:
   > "This system of rewarding deterioration could be replaced with a system of basing the tax assessment on the actual income of the property - its real value."

6. A Tax Abatement/to the State Constitution that would permit and encourage property owners and developers to improve residential property is needed. Tax Abatement is simply a law whereby property owners who improve their property are not immediately taxed on the improvements made to the property, but are given up to ten or more years before the increased tax assessment becomes effective.

   Tax Abatement, in conjunction with revising the current method of assessing taxes on slum property, would, as is the case in New York State, go far in eliminating slums in Atlanta.

7. The majority of the public housing units are located on the Westside of Atlanta. It is recommended that:

   a. No more public housing units should be built on the Westside of Atlanta.

   / amendment

b. Every possible effort be made to build some of the additional public housing units in the Northeast area of Atlanta;

c. The Atlanta Housing Authority's decision to build a high-rise building of 250 units for the aged adjacent to Grady Homes is a progressive step. Therefore, it is suggested that one or more high-rise apartments be built in the Buttermilk Bottom Urban Renewal Project area for low-income families;

d. Scattered sites and existing housing units which could be rehabilitated in accordance with Federal regulations should be considered as a part of the 1,000 unit request;

e. The Poole Creek area should also be considered for some public housing; and

f. The Thomasville Urban Renewal area be considered for some of the proposed public housing units, not entirely instead of but in addition to the McDaniel Street area which is in the Rawson-Washington Street Urban Renewal Project.

8. By all criteria, land - living space - is the hard core issue facing the nonwhite citizens in developing housing both inside and outside of urban renewal areas. It is now known that restrictions on living space and accommodations of nonwhites involves all Atlantans immediately and unequivocally in issues of civil rights which could doom the metropolitan area to increasing trouble.

First, voluntary acceptance and implementation of positive housing programs for eliminating restrictions should enable Atlanta to move forward. Secondly, the development of realistic disposal prices of land by our local public agency to cooperatives, non-profit institutions and limited dividend corporations at the same price land would sell for in other sections of the city would go a long way in enhancing the Urban Renewal Program.

'We'd Rather Do It Ourselves, Thanks'

It is often said that local government is the most effective government, but rarely is it explained why.

One reason, of course, is that locally designed programs can more nearly fit local needs and conditions. Even more important, direct participation in planning and execution gives a program more meaning to those who take part. Education cannot be "given" to people; it must be seized and developed by the individual. Likewise with community improvement.

That is why it will be exciting to watch a grassroots improvement program now starting in Atlanta. The NASH (Northside-Ashby-Simpson-Hunter) Community, with the assistance of the Atlanta Urban League, has launched a broad-gauge self-help program involving improvement of housing, streets and sidewalks; tutoring services and other attacks on school drop-outs; night classes for adults; and counseling in health, employment and personal problems.

This program deserves the cooperation of all involved, and the admiration of the whole city. This is self-government at its best.

A Community Plans

NEIGHBORHOOD associations have become common in Atlanta, but the latest is unusual. It has been undertaken by Negro residents with plans more ambitious than any ever put forward by an Atlanta community.

The community is the one bounded by Northside Drive, Ashby Street, Simpson Street and Hunter Street. Using the first letters of each of these street names, it has organized the name of NASH Redevelopment Corporation.

NASH, encouraged and aided by the Atlanta Urban League, will work on the physical nature of the community. Its goals include elimination of bad housing, cleaner streets, better preservation of good housing and better application of zoning laws.

But the corporation also wants to go to the roots of some of the area's difficulties. It will stress education. There are plans for tutoring services for elementary and high school students, night classes for adults and attention to school dropouts.

Improved health services and better dispersal of employment also will be sought.

This neighborhood will work with a number of public agencies; and the solid experience of the Atlanta Urban League, under Executive Director Robert Thompson, will be at its disposal.

Other parts of the Negro community are interested in this undertaking, and if it succeeds it may be a model for several more.

This will not be just another of those achievements by the wealthier, more comfortable members of the Atlanta Negro community. This is grass-roots.

All of Atlanta should be glad that a community's concern and pride have resulted in such a worthwhile endeavor.

Mr. Paul Anthony, Executive Director
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

Dear Mr. Anthony:

A meeting was held on November 9th with representatives from various statenand local organizations and agencies. The puppose of this meeting was to discuss and consider plans for a cooperative effort to provide adequate health and welfare services for children in Georgia.

The representatives' responses to the proposed program were most enthusiastic, and agreement was shared for the necessity of this program, its purposes and its aims. The enclosed statement answers those questions raised at the meeting and outlines further details of the program.

In the statement you will notice that the program has evolved since it was originally conceived. Participation in all phases of the program--for the Advisory Committee, Sponsorship, and the Assembly--now focuses on citizens groups and local community involvement.

I have also enclosed a form which requests that you authorize a representative of SRC to be a member of the Advisory Committee, as described in the statement. A note will be sent later this week with information on the date and time of the Advisory Committee Meeting.

If you have any suggestions or questions, please do not hesitate calling me. I would appreciate hearing from you at your earliest convenience.

Most sincerely,

A PROPOSAL FOR A CONFERENCE ON HEALTH AND WELFARE SERVICES FOR GEORGIA'S CHILDREN

Background Information

Responding to the War on Poverty's Economic Opportunity Act, the Southern Regional Office of the National Urban League sponsored a series of Southern Workshops on Poverty during the Spring of 1965. Community leaders were provided with pertinent information and were encouraged to develop resources for expanding services to low-income families by participating in the anti-poverty programs. These Workshops were followed by consultative and advisorial servicing to individual communities and to Urban League Affiliates in the thirteen Southern States.

During the course of this activity, community leaders expressed extreme concern not only towards the job-training and skill development aspect of the economic opportunity programs, but also for the related area of health and welfare services to children--the economic potential of tomorrow.

We became aware of the severe hunger that community leaders have for information and technical and consultative help from social welfare and health agencies. However, besides the over-all need for referral services and information centers, specific problems were brought to the forefront of our attention in the areas of mental retardation, unwed parenthood, and day care services.

Realizing the serious extent of these problems, this office determined to initiate action to improve and provide adequate health and welfare services to children. First, it was decided to initiate such action in a pilot project in the State of Georgia and to manifest action and concern from our Atlanta-based office. Not only is Atlanta the regional headquarters for most of the national organizations and agencies concerned with child health and welfare; but also, Georgia, specifically, has been experiencing a growing awareness of the need to improve such services. This awareness has been reflected in the reorganization of the State Departments of Public Health and Family and Children's Services, and has been seen in the passage of legislation applying to higher standards of operation for agencies serving children.

Secondly, a number of exploratory meetings were sponsored to consider methods which would initiate action towards improving services to children. These meetings, on an individual and/or group basis, were with directors and representatives of national, state, and local organizations, whose programming are relevant to children's services--Division of the Children's Bureau, Department of Health, Education and Welfare; Divisions of Georgia State Departments of Public Health, Education, and Family and Children's Services; Office of Economic Opportunity officials; the Child Welfare League of America; National and Georgia Chapt of the Association for Retarded Children; the National Council on Illegitimacy; Florence Crittenton Association; the National Association of Day Car Services; the Metropolitan Atlanta Citizens Committee on Day Care; State a local voters' leagues; the National and Georgia Council of Churches; the National Council of Christians and Jews; the Salvation Army; the American Friends Service Committee and other human relations agencies; and the Comm ity Council of Greater Atlanta, Inc.

The cumulative consensus of these meetings, which began last August at the National Urban League Annual Conference in Miami Beach, clarified and delineated the following aspects of program action and were presented to a group of potential advisors and co-sponsors in a meeting on November 9th:

A. Goals
B. Participation
C. Methods
D. Advisory Committee
   1. Action Assembly
      a. Purposes
      b. Sponsorship
      c. Budget
      d. Date and time
      e. Program
   2. Citizens Committee
E. Role of the Southern Regional Office of the National Urban League.

Goals

The goal of the Child Health and Welfare Program shall be to set in motion those forces which will work towards developing and providing adequate--quantitatively and qualitatively--specialized services for all children, and particularly those from low-income families, in the State of Georgia, with emphasis on the following interrelated areas:

1. State-wide maternal care and well- and sich-child clinics.

2. State-wide mental retardation testing, evaluation, and follow-up services, and publicly supported day care for retarded children.

3. State-wide licensed day care centers for children from low-income families.

Participants

Because a lack of adequate referral and information services is one of the greatest problems confronted by the public and those offering services in the above-mentioned areas, the focal point of attention shall be on reaching leading citizens from communities throughout the State of Georgia.

Hence, for the most effective fulfillment of the goals and purposes of this program, participation shall include not only responsive governmental agencies (at all levels) and private agencies having interests and responsibilities in these fields of services, but emphatic emphasis will be placed on the participation of leading responsible citizenry--leadership from citizen groups such as PTA's, teachers' organizations, fraternal orders, women's auxiliaries, professional organizations, civic clubs, church leaders (such as ministers, priests, and rabbis and leadership from their congregations), voter's leagues, etc., and other leading citizens with interest and concern in health and welfare services.

Methods

As an effective method for setting appropriate forces, or machinery into motion, a State-wide Action Assembly shall be held and a State-wide Citizen Committee shall be developed.

Advisory Committee

Following the goals and purposes of the Action Assembly--providing adequate health and welfare services to children by bringing pertinent information and guidelines for community action to leaders throughout Georgia--the Advisory Committee shall be composed of representatives and/or volunteer workers (non-salaried positions) of agencies, organizations, and associations with interest in the noted areas of concern. These "citizen-representatives" might include chairmen, presidents, board members, heads of organizational committees, etc.; in any case, the representative should hold a position of responsibility and decision-making within his organization.

The future position and purpose of the Advisory Committee would be dependent upon the accumulative decision of the Committee and the establishing of a State-wide Citizens Committee.

ACTION ASSEMBLY ON SERVICES FOR CHILDREN

Purposes:

1. Inform about current and proposed health and welfare programs.
2. Spotlight and define problem areas and establish public concern.
3. Consider the role of agencies of the federal government in interpreting its services and responsibilities under the law and in delineating standards.
4. Propose the forming of a State-wide Citizens Committee to implement resolutions passed by the Assembly.

Sponsorship

Sponsorship of the Assembly will be a cooperative effort provided by responsible governmental and private agencies and organizations having interest and responsibilities in services for children. However, based on the aims of the Assembly, sponsorship should especially represent state, regional, and local agencies and organizations with interest in Georgia and are designated as citizens groups.

Budget

Financing of the Assembly will be kept at a minimum. Anticipated major it of expenditure will include printing costs, postage, public relations, records and reports, telephone calls, supplies, staff for Assembly, and staf expenses related to the Assembly. Sponsoring agencies, organizations, and associations might be expected to participate with contributions, staff ti and/or other services as their resources permit.

Proposed Location

It is proposed that the Assembly be held in Atlanta because of its relativ central location in the State; it is the headquarters of most of the invol ved groups; and it is favorable in keeping staff and expenses at a minimum

Proposed Time and Date

An exact length of time and the specific date will be decided upon by the consensus of the Advisory Committee. It has already been suggested that t Assembly take place towards the end of January, and, in terms of the propo ed program, that it last for a day and a half.

Proposed Program

The program should allot time for a public forum, or "town hall" meeting, which would include keynote speakers and panel members, and which would pr vide information on programs, problem areas, and governmental policies and responsibilities. Keynote speakers and panel members would represent national and state figures who are well-known in the areas of concern.

The second part of the program would consist of workshops moderated by sta and local agencies and organizations with responsibilities in the areas of concern. In these workshops, resolutions would be passed and plans propos for local action.

STATE-WIDE CITIZENS COMMITTEE

This Committee will coordinate the services of the associations and agenci towards reaching throughout the communities in Georgia, and it will function to implement the resolutions passed at the Assembly by developing programs at the State and/or local levels. Such programs may include the following:

1. Planning of local, or regional state health and welfare workshops--perhaps throughout the State.

2. Providing information acquired at the Assembly to members of communiti such as (1) women's groups and civic clubs establishing information centers in low-income communities, or distributing such information; (2) church leaders acting as referral and information sources for thei congregations and communities.

3. Requesting and encouraging public support for needed health and welfar programs in the State, county, and/or local community.

4. Investigating and monitoring health and welfare services.

5. Establishing needed day care centers for low-income families.

6. Encouraging legislative changes that may be necessary in obtaining adequate health and welfare services.

Role of the Southern Regional Office of the National Urban League.

The Southern Regional Office, as a professionally staffed social service agency, would be one of the sponsoring agencies. Having acquired an additional staff person to work specifically on developing this program in the State of Georgia and the finances to cover direct program promotion a the minimal expenses of the Assembly, the Southern Regional Office is already in a position to coordinate the Action Assembly.

FACT SHEET FOR CHILD SERVICE PROGRAMMING

I. General Information

As we are aware at this time, specialized services to children are insufficient and inadequate throughout the State of Georgia. Infant mortality is a reflection of the general health of a community and a measure of its education and social progress. Georgia is one of the five most backward states.

The infant mortality rate per 1,000 live births in 1960 in the U.S. was 26.0, in Georgia it was 33.0.

Georgia's death rate for non-white babies is double that for whites; 45.4 out of every 1,000 live births, as against 23.6 for whites.

In the early days of a baby's life, where natural health factors are most important, the death rate differences between white and non-white babies, although considerable, are relatively moderate. As babies grow older, the racial differences in death rates increase steadily and start from a 50% difference nationally and 25% racial difference in Georgia, and rise to a near tripling nationally and an almost quadrupling in Georgia.

Although many counties are lacking services because of their inability to finance special programs, the State Departments of Public Health, Education, and Family and Children's Services see several causes for this lack of coverage:

1. A lack of trained and professional manpower for special services, such as social workers.

2. Limiting legislation for providing adequate welfare coverage: Aid to Families with Dependent Children, maximum grant is $134; ~~and Aid to Dependent Children.~~

3. Legislation limiting State intervention in district and county programs, and distinguishing functions and responsibilities at each level.

4. Lack of referral and information services.

II. Child Welfare

15,000 children received child welfare benefits last year. But, there is an inadequate number of counties having Child Welfare Programs (57). At the end of 1964, there were 36 Child Welfare Unit Counties, counties with one or more full-time Child Welfare Workers. Budgetary provisions have been made for 12 Multi- County Units, 2 or more counties combining child welfare services and having worker's travel and salary paid by State.

The number of physicians per family decreases as population or salary scale decreases. 48% of Georgia children under 17 live in rural settings. 36% of Georgia families earn less than $3,000; 23% earn less than $2,000; 10%, less than $1,000. Georgia has one physician per 1400 people; U.S. rate is one per 700.

3. 48,000 children in families in Georgia derive total income from welfare.

4. Total number of recipients receiving welfare -- 187,602
% of Negroes receiving welfare -- 49.6%
& of Whites receiving welfare -- 50.4%

However, 40% of Georgia's 4,000,000 is non-white, with 67% falling within the poverty range.

5. The average number of children in poverty families is 2.9; 22% of these families have a female head.

III. Mental Retardation figures for 1965:

--9,300 preschool age retardates in Georgia
--3,450 children and adults with pre-school mental age and are trainable
-12,750 retardates ineliegible for assistance from public school special services.
--1800 retarded children are at Gracewood; 1700 await admission.

There are no publicly sponsored day care facilities for retarded children. Most of them receive some assistance from the State and/or United Fund. Altogether, there are 23 day care centers for retarded children of pre-school age.

IV. Maternal and Child Care

Local Health Centers in Georgia service only 16% of all mothers in the State; 22% of the child care.

There are only two maternity homes in Georgia. Last year they serviced approximately 197 applicants; 5 of these were Negro.

V. Day Care Services for Children of Working Mothers.

There will be almost 100,000 children born in Georgia this year. However, there are only 497 day care centers which have applied for a license; 25 of these have regular licenses. There are approximately 8 centers in Georgia that are specifically for children from low-income families, and that have applied for licenses. These centers are receiving EOA and/or United Appeal funds, but, in several instances, facilities are segregated. There are approximately 25 to 30 day care centers for Negroes.

Dear Mrs. Mason:

This will acknowledge receipt of the proposal submitted by the NCIE, requesting a grant to enable NCIE to operate until funds are forthcoming from Washington.

You may expect to hear from us within a fortnight. The picture, however, is not very promising at this particular time, so we would not want you to be overly optimistic or dependent upon funds from the Southern Regional Council. We think that we have put just as much as we possibly can in the NCIE program.

Yet, we are thoroughly convinced of its value to the Norfolk Community. It has been one of the best projects to receive our support in the last year, and we would like very much to continue, and, it is on the point of continuance of funds to NCIE that you will hear from us.

We are pleased that you are seeking funds from the Office of Economic Opportunity. If we can be of any assistance with OEO, please let us know.

December 19, 1964

Mr. Vernon E. Jordan, Jr.
Assistant to the Executive Director
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Jordan:

Attached please find an abbreviated copy of the report "Project Tutoring Centers" from the Norfolk Committee for the Improvement of Education.

The new Tutoring Center program will be iniated January 8th, 11th, 12th, and 13th, 1965 in four junior high schools and one elementary school. One center at Madison Junior High School has been opened.

Moving on faith, we have engaged an administrator who will coordinate the entire program including recruitment and training of volunteer instructors, affiliation with teachers and principals where centers have been established, develop cultural programs in concert with volunteers and perform such other tasks as are necessary to insure the success of the program.

We have already applied for a grant from the Office of Economic Opportunity but doubt that it will be acted upon before spring or possibly summer.

Nothing has really been done here to organize a Community Action Council or Committee. NCIE held a public meeting and forum on Saturday, December 4, at Norfolk Division of Virginia State College on the anti-poverty program. Three officers from OEO, Washington D. C. were the principal speakers. In addition to a capacity audience, five City Councilmen attended and announced that this was the first time they had heard the facts although Norfolk, with three other cities, joined in hiring a research firm to ascertain the prospects for a program possible in the Tidewater area. The report has not been publicized but I understand it will be available soon.

A second meeting was held with several other organizations on December 17. A resolution was passed to have a committee consult with the Mayor about the formation of a Community Action Committee. As you might know, there is some question about the concern for such a committee among persons in the "power structure."

NICE sent a project to OEO in May but as you know, all projects must come through the Community Action Council. Now we are trying to secure such a council.

In the meantime our work goes on—the tutoring, cultural information and public relations program.

We hope that the Southern Regional Council can give us a grant to enable the work to continue until funds come from Washington, although there are hurdles to overcome before that will occur.

Some sources in Norfolk are not so willing to assist this year because NCIE along with 40 other civic and welfare organizations are engaged in a serious contest with the Board of Education to prevent the expenditure of two million, two hundred thousand dollars ($2,200,000.00) to remodel a completely inadequate high school in a deteriorating section while a new high school near the edge of town is being built for more than that amount.

Our leading Negro and some white citizens are in this contest for an adequate high school. While the tension remains, it is not possible to reasonably solicit funds. Later in the spring or summer, the climate will be more favorable.

Attached also is the budget for 1964-1965. Your solicitous regard for our program has been a bulwark. Many, many thanks for all your support and help.

A happy Christmas and good New Year.

Sincerely yours,

(Mrs.) W. T. Mason, Chairman

PROJECT - TUTORING CENTERS

Brief History

Published reports in 1959 by the Virginia State Board of Education compared intelligence, achievement and aptitude of white and Negro students by state-wide tests in rural and urban areas. The report indicated that Negro students fell below national norms and norms recorded for white students in all but a few categories. No explanations were offered despite the fact that the levels of achievement seemed incongruous and as such demanded exploratory analysis. Objections were made pointing up the patent ommissions which would explain to some extent reasons for discrepancies.

These objections were voiced in an article, "Some Interpretations and Implications of the Virginia Testing Program" by Dr. William F. Brazziel, Jr.:*

> "A cause of some concern in many quarters recently has been the summary of the results of the standarized testing program of the Virginia public schools which were released in late September. Of particular concern to Negro teachers, parents and communities is the relatively low positions achieved by the Negro children in practically all batteries in the program. And so the concerns involve the questions of what the test truly revealed, what they did not reveal and what underlying factors they reflected. It is also quite properly a matter of concern that the test performances of the children have rather grave implications for their continuing development as a member of the greater American society and it is perhaps further a matter of some urgency that Virginia parents, teachers and communities search diligently for ways and means to assure a fuller development of this one-fourth of its school population."

Inferior facilities, lack of libraries or inadequate ones, mediocre performance unrelieved by incentives; poverty stricken populations, segregated schools essentially inadequate, inflexible courses of study, lack of competent, trained counselors, indifferent vocational programs, overcrowded classes; combined in a conspiracy to render almost impossible the best efforts of many dedicated Negro educators to lift the quality of individual classroom scholarship.

*Director of General Education, Norfolk Division, Virginia State College

The threat of integration nudged reluctant school officials--the result, building of many new schools for Negroes. These buildings, often imposing, were paramount—equipment and quality teaching were byproducts not always regarded as imperative.

Meanwhile, no statement was offered by the State Department of Education to mitigate the bald condemnatory picture of the scholastic performance of Negro youth in Virginia. They were forthwith condemned by inference to permanent inferiority. *Dr. Brazziel states further:

> "The greatest single lack in the testing program was perhaps in the summary report of the results which were made available to the public. By failing to include variances in the report and stating only averages for the groups, the report fails to reveal to all concerned the great range in abilities and achievement found from school to school, from county to county, from city to city, and most importantly from social class to social class within the school. Such a lack of revelation could understandably contribute to the drawing of honest but erroneous conclusions by some persons and invidious conclusions by others concerning the abilities and achievements of these children."

Norfolk Committee for the Improvement of Education

Spurred by the danger of casual acceptance of the testing report, three persons interested in improving achievement and cultural levels of Negro youth, organized the Norfolk Committee for the Improvement of Education, Inc. in January 1960. They were: Dr. William Brazziel - Professor and Coordinator of General Education; Dr. Marian Capps - Director of the Testing Bureau and Professor of Education-Psychology—both on the faculty of the Norfolk Division of Virginia State College and Vivian Mason - former National President of the National Council of Negro Women, Inc., a community and civic worker.

The Purpose

Purposes incorporated in the Charter were succinctly stated:

(1) "To inform and educate the public of the requirements necessary for excellence in public education....."
(2) "To establish, operate and conduct an educational Center"
(3) "To establish, build or purchase, operate and conduct one or more non-sectarian school or institutions of learning."
(4) "To receive gifts, legacies and donations from any sources whatsoever"
(5) "To make gifts and appropriations from any or all of its resources from time to time to carry out the objects and purposes of the corporation"
(6) "To exercise all such power and authority as may be necessary to carry out the objects and purposes above specified....."

Parents Drawn Into Lecture Series

Clinics were conducted by Dr. Capps to provide better understanding of commonly used terms as intelligence quotient, reading scores, achievement levels, grade levels, the significance of testing programs, parent responsibility for providing regularized study facilities and other matters relating to educational values. Films were freely used and ample time allowed for questions.

Helping the Community to Understand

A series of lectures by eminent persons in the field of education has been programmed each year. Included in the educational series were the following: Dan Schreiber, originator of the "Higher Horizon" project; Otis Finley, Vocational Secretary of the National Urban League; Mrs. Carla Eyster of Kensington, Maryland and a telephone hookup lecture and discussion by Superintendent of Schools of Washington, D. C., Carl F. Hansen.

Many other speakers were invited, projecting hard engrossing facts. Bernard Kaplan of the National Education Association of Washington, D. C.- Project "School Dropouts" brought a message of significance. The audience included members of the Norfolk School Board who noted with very evident interest, a cross-country review of the problems and the remedial measures advanced. His luminous description of the army of youthful school deserters, roaming the streets seeking employment or idling, a prologue to real trouble, inspired the Norfolk Committee for the Improvement of Education to seek to do something about the Norfolk situation.

A number of other speakers brought challenging ideas to the citizens of this community.

East Ghent Project

During the summers of 1960 and 1962, a small project was carried out with children and adults in a blighted, uncohesive neighborhool known as East Ghent.

Most of the residents rented houses or converted apartments formerly occupied by white persons no longer desirous of living in the aura of slums. Deterioration had set in years before Negroes moved in the area. Unsavory dwellings, high percentage of indigents and hazardous street conditions were characteristics underwritten by the complete absence of social agency area programs.

Summer classes for children in academic subjects, art, music, and library practices were successfully conducted. In 1962, an experimental project with preschool age children whose achievement levels after six weeks schooling were considered excellent in comparison with readiness tests six weeks prior, confirmed the need for pre-kindergarten and pre-school institutions.

Results of East Ghent Project

A comprehensive report and recommendations based upon two years experiences in East Ghent was submitted to the Health, Recreation and Welfare Council. An analysis of the programs promoted an interpretation of the complexity of problems and the dangerous consequences of continued neglect were set forth with complete candor.

The findings of the Welfare Council were detailed and agreement in practically every recommendation sustained. One statement is gratifying - "The Norfolk Committee has been largely responsible for arousing community concern over East Ghent. There is no doubt that this is an area in desperate need of concerted action. Clearly, physical rebuilding and property improvement represent an important aspect in the future of East Ghent, but human rehabilitation is also basic to the ultimate realization of improved living conditions in that area." (Exhibit 3-Report "Study on The Norfolk Committee for the Improvement of Education by The Health, Recreation, and Welfare Council, 1963.)

Finances - East Ghent Project

Both projects were underwritten by the Norfolk Foundation, whose deep concern for the people and the area had been made manifest. Without their financial and moral support, the programs could not have been carried out.

Project - Tutoring Centers

In the fall of 1963, the Norfolk Committee for the Improvement of Education decided the time was propituous to organize and to operate at least two tutoring Centers. Preparations went forth for two months; securing suitable centers, head teachers, volunteer staff, finances for expenses, supplies, development of policies inclusive of curricula, hours of schooling, requirements for instructors, supplementary cultural, learning programs and public relations.

Reasons for Tutoring Centers

All the reasons documented by the Federal Government, education officials, private groups across the nation could be applied to Norfolk; specifically:

1. This city had the highest number of dropouts in the state in Booker T. Washington High School and Ruffner Junior High School,
2. There were no known facilities for helping students other than the supplementary instructions teachers offered after school hours, or in study halls,
3. Young people were absent from school a great deal,
4. Hundreds attended school reluctantly and were not interested in the curricula or setup,
5. Many students wanted to quit school and work but age limitations barred them at least until they reached 17. Part-time employment or referral projects were not functioning adequately,
6. Many youthful marriages proceeded school desertion—a sure path to failure and probable family desertion by the husband when the situation became difficult,
7. Pregnancies among high and junior high school girls were mounting and regarded as commonplace,
8. Hundreds of students in high school were reading on fifth (5th) grade levels,
9. The Booker T. Washington High School—old, outmoded, wholly inadequate, dangerously overcrowded—was an effective deterrent to normal high school development,
10. Nothing was being done in the way of providing regularized tutoring services, and little in programmed incentive and motivation projects for those in extreme need of such services.

Curricula

The Curricula Committee devoted long hours to defining major objectives of the Tutoring Centers. Two eminent educators at the Norfolk Division of Virginia State College, Dr. Thelma Curl, Head of the English Department and Mrs. Julia Morris, Head of the Reading Clinic served as co-consultants.

The Curricula Committee stressed exploratory trips, discussions, broad associations leading to emphasis in the language Arts. Reading was a particular focal point of weakness. Understanding and translating the English language was found to be a formidable barrier to acceptable achievement in other subjects. Since the ability to read fluently and with understanding is a primary requisite, pointed attention was directed to instructors to try and correct weaknesses in articulation and writing. Accent on verbal skills was stressed for serious gaps existed in communication skills.

Operation of Project Tutoring Centers

Instructions were given in English, Mathematics, French, Geometry, History and Reading. Many individual sessions were held for this was the bedrock of the whole idea of helping and stimulating the students to better performance. Students admitted they could do better but exerting the effort was difficult. As improvement in grades occured, students became very enthusiastic. Some carried the enthusiasm too high. Pressed for time, one ambitious student, not wishing to fall down on grades for the month, asked the instructor to help him out and write his composition. It is not sure whether chagrin or shame won the victory after a conversation with the instructor in question.

Cultural Activities

In conformity with recommendations of the Cultural Committee ten (10) programs were successfully projected. These were:

1. All day visit to Hampton Institute
2. Don Cossack Chorus Concert at Center Theatre
3. Piano Recital at Norfolk State College
4. Norfolk Museum Exhibit
5. Moving picture "Lilies of the Field"
6. Botannical Gardens and Luncheon at the Tea Room
7. Norfolk Naval Supply Center
8. Azalea Festival Concert
9. A Hootenany Concert
10. Closing Exercises

Variety with specific purposes seemed logical if the horizons of the mind and senses were to be accelerated and stimulated. Some students were enormously interested in one event and indifferent to others.

Making all of them equally attractive was not possible but the purpose was accomplished in that choice was offered. Those who preferred visits to the Art Museum in preference to a visit to the Botanical Gardens were encouraged to select the one they liked best if they couldn't manage both.

Visits to interesting places were not made simply for aesthetic appreciation or to provide new experiences but conscious emphasis was placed on future employment opportunities, career-wise information and most of all encouragement and the will to strive for whatever jobs tied in with the visit, that were found desirable and seemingly within the scope of their abilities.

An illustration is afforded in the visit to the Naval Supply Center. Prizes were offered by the Committee for the best essay describing the visit. The winning essay stressed the possibility of the author returning some day as an employee.

"....In our Business Class, we have previously talked about time clocks and cards. Many of us have heard about them and hadn't really seen one. We were given a chance to see time cards and clocks at the Naval Supply Center. I was actually shocked to see the many clerks, bookkeepers, secretaries, and etc., employed for the Federal Government at the Naval Supply Center. My ambition after I have finished my education is to become a secretary and I had only thought of secretaries working in a large office for a private firm. But now my whole view point is changed because of my trip to the Naval Supply Center. I really envied those secretaries and it gave the idea that some day I may be sitting behind a desk working for the Federal Government. My tour also gave me an opportunity to see exactly what type of work my mother does. She is a packer at the Naval Supply Center.....One would think it is almost entirely impossible to spend an entire day enjoyably in one building, but it isn't.

A total of 134 students had in some measure been reached in areas they felt were important justification for the endeavors of the organization and its supporters in the community. A staff of some 30 persons worked at the Center despite inconveniences which could not be overcome.

Cooperation with School Officials in Norfolk

Close contact has been maintained with principals of junior and Booker T. Washington High School although only Madison Junior and Booker T. Washinton High School have been involved in the Tutoring Centers. Mrs. Hortense Wells, Coordinator of Elementary Education, contributed her services in an advisory capacity as did others in the school system.

Principals have loaned books for teachers, the School Board, through the Supervisor of Curricula, also loaned books as well as concerned citizens who donated magazines and other materials.

Community Interests

Friends in the community under the chairmanship of Mrs. Erma F. Hill, Committee on Transportation, provided care for all but the visit to the Naval Base. Bus service was arranged for the group although four (4) cars had to be pressed into service. Luncheon for half price at the Japanese Tea Room helped the flagging budget.

Parents, Board members and friends attended the lively closing exercises. The most gratifying question was, "When does the Center open for the summer?" Through the support and kindness of the Southern Regional Council it did, but that sequel is told in the supplementary report.

Student Evaluation of Project - Tutoring Centers

Students evaluated the program frankly. The total group asked for its continuance expressing by and large these sentiments:

"We learned a lot"
"My teacher was extremely interested in my progress"
"The program is very worthwhile"

In the section reserved for criticisms, they were equally frank:
"Children make too much noise coming in and going out"
"The Centers should be for learning and study, some children always want to play"
"There should always be a teacher to take the place of the absent one"

(Exhibit 8 - Student's Evaluation of Tutoring)

Instructors' Evaluation of Project - Tutoring Centers

Instructors were seriously concerned with helping to fullfill the purposes and hopes of the sponsoring agency.

Discussion of problems, needs and purposes was expressed at two instructors' meetings chaired by Dr. Marian Capps, Administrator of Curricula. Every teacher was a very busy person, time of the essence so that regular weekly meetings were not possible.

Mature, experienced teachers used personalized methods to reach students. They were free to innovate whatever techniques and devices seemed desirable.

In order to gauge the extent of situations encountered and experiences gained, instructors were asked to evaluate work of the Centers. The reactions were similar in many respects to the question:

Strong points of the program:

"Students are being given badly needed supplementary material"
"It gives help to some who need it"
"Broadens their knowledge"
"The individual assistance given to students which they are often unable to receive in school"
"The students are interested in obtaining a preview of their next course. This means they will be better prepared next year."

Weak points:

"My class was too large"
"Each class should be composed of students on the same achievement level"
"Greater sense of responsibility on the part of students needed"
"Better organization of classes"
"Full information needed concerning strengths and weaknesses of each student"
Greater control of absentees" (Exhibit 9 - Instructors' Evaluation of Tutoring Activities)

The problems indicated by students and instructors were recognized from the beginning and efforts made to correct them. The short time the project was in operation allowed for some remedial action, but the main result was useful experience for future projects.

Basic Problems

Criticisms by students and instructors were wrestled with all winter by the Committee and the Center supervisors to find sufficient instructors, make regular provisions for absent instructors, visit the homeroom teacher and the parents, provide new materials for reading geared to the interests of the students. For example, there is a dearth of reading materials geared to the interests of Negro youth in the early teens. The stories and books developed for that age group are concerned with activities, ideas, problems, amusements and life in general of middleclass, upper and lower of the majority group.

There is a crushing need for books, stories, articles of an inspirational nature, peopled with characters the Negro boy and girl recognize as real persons in his world.

In great many instances, there is absolutely no identification with the life and times of non-white adolescents. This is another reason why comprehensive cultural programs are a paramount necessity.

Absences

The attendance of students at times became a problem. Special activities at school mainly in athletics, duties at home, care of younger children, household responsibilities and illness accounted for periodic absences.

Instructors at times were unable to meet their classes—in such instances, doubling up or study sessions in classrooms assigned were not the best solutions but the best to be found at that particular time.

One member of the Committee had the responsibility of visiting homes to ascertain why some students attended irregularly; how parents felt about the Center and if they would like to support its aims by joining the Norfolk Committee for the Improvement of Education. Of 40 such visits:

(1) Every parent was pleased at the idea of having their children helped with school work,
(2) Twenty-two parents knew nothing about the Center or Committee although they had supposedly signed consent on the registration forms,
(3) Ten parents had large families and wanted older children to take care of the smaller children, wash clothes, run errands and help cook. No regular time or place was provided for quiet study hours,
(4) Twenty-four (24) parents left it up to the children whether or not "they wanted to attend the Tutoring Center." No persuasion or visible encouragement was given although they insisted that they wanted their children to do better in their school work,
(5) The majority of parents had less than 9th grade education,
(6) The majority of parents had very dim concepts of the grade levels performance-wise their children maintained unless they had been summoned to school for a conference concerning school or some other problem of their offspring.

The visitor stressed the meaning of education today as the forerunner of better employment, greater economic security, fuller and more meaningful enjoyment of life.

Finances - Project Tutoring Center

Contributions were received from public spirited citizens and a national organization renown for its great work in building a climate of human worth where every man regardless of color, religion or any other label shares with other men the same opportunity for success.

Closing Program

The Centers held a joint closing exercise on Friday night, June 5, 1964 at Mt. Pleasant Baptist Church Educational Center. The auditorium was filled with students, parents, teachers, and members of the Board of Directors and interested friends.

Enthusiasm was plainly evident as students carried out volunteer program assignments. Certificates of Merit were presented to instructors, the students and other outstanding participants.

There was a small note of sadness at the realization of closing. Faces brightened perceptibly when the Summer Pilot Program was announced.

The 134 students who had in some measure been reached were justification for the endeavors of the organization and its supporters in the community. (Exhibit 10 - Program for End of the Term Exercises)

Continuance of Project - Tutoring Centers

In August, 1964 a group of mothers asked to have a Tutoring Center established in Tidewater Park (a low cost housing project). Serious concerns were expressed by this group to the levels of achievement attained by their children.

To secure information on how widespread the anxieties of this group were in the project, a questionnaire was formulated and distributed by the mothers. They were able to discuss the problem of educational values very ably with other parents who questioned the purpose of the questionnaire. A recapitulation of the information is attached herewith.

In addition to tutoring help for children, many parents asked for instructions for themselves in reading, writing, modern arithmetic and other subjects. The desire for intensified cultural programs was expressed repeatedly by the Mothers Club.

The Board of Directors of the Committee for the Improvement of Education voted to continue the Project Tutoring Centers, to increase the number of centers in 1964-1965 and to conduct an experimental center for elementary grade students based upon the findings of the study conducted by the Mothers Club of Tidewater Park.

New Locations

Following several discussions, the idea was advanced that Project Tutoring Centers should be located in public schools. The advantages were numerous and obvious. The support of school officials and principals was to be solicited for the new program to be started in the fall after the report of the first semesters work.

Respectfully submitted,

Vernon - can't you do a little lobbying for them over the phone with Washington?

Mr. Vernon Jordan, Jr.
Assistant to the Executive Director
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Jordan:

Thank you for your letter of recent date and your kind words of encouragement as to the worth of Project-Tutoring Centers. We have opened the third Center, an experimental project for students in the 4th, 5th, and 6th grades. You will recall this Center came about through the concern and interest of mothers in the Tidewater Park housing project. Over a hundred students are registered. During the past few days junior and senior high school students have applied for admission, straining present capacities.

This is the only enterprise of its kind in the city and there is a very great desire to make this endeavor an outstanding success.

The other Centers are located in junior high schools; at least two more such Centers are contemplated opening in February if we can secure the necessary financial support. As mentioned in a previous letter, we have applied to the Office of Economic Opportunity for a grant. Undoubtedly it will not be acted upon for sometime due to the fact that we don't have a Community Action Committee in Norfolk.

In cooperation with Adult Services of Norfolk Division of Virginia State College and the Norfolk Health-Welfare-Recreation Planning Council, public meetings are being held to build up sufficient interest so that the city fathers will be moved to act quickly in establishing an Economic Opportunity Authority. This is necessary, as you know, in the establishment of a Community Action Program.

not necessary

The Board of Directors is gratefully aware of the support and concern manifested by the Southern Regional Council for the Tutoring Centers Project in Norfolk. Financial contributions are being sought from the community as was done last year. However, such contributions must be allotted to new Centers in the late planning stage.

Do you think the Taconic Foundation would be interested in this project? Perhaps you could suggest some other sources that might be interested.

We still hope that the Southern Regional Council will underwrite some part of the current expenses so that we can stay in business until such time as new money is found for this endeavor.

Sincerely yours,

Vivian C. Mason/gb

Dear Courtney:

Fret no longer! My full name will be at the bottom of this letter. It does seem that our busy-ness here at SRC often tends to encourage the loss of our identity while we are in the process of getting some jobs done. It is nevertheless a fame well lost!

I think it would be wonderful if we can, within the financial resources of the Council, cooperate with the Greenville Council in an employment survey; but before we proceed further in this direction, why don't we await a reply from Father Krahe?

I would guess that you, as a member of our Board, have already received a copy of the Houston study; if not, a word from you will bring it in short order. Thank you for your comments about the Houston study release.

Dear Doctor Moss:

I am sorry to have to address you without your full name, but you people at SRC are so anonymous and self-effacing that we are unable to locate your name on any of the materials that are close at hand!

As you will note from the enclosed letter, I have written to Father Krahe, president of the Greenville Council, to determine their interest in the research project we discussed at the Council meeting in Atlanta. I would appreciate your sending him information on the project, and including the report of the Houston survey when it has been completed.

It would certainly be a fine thing if such a survey could be conducted in South Carolina. It might be even more interesting due to the fact that I understand the labor organizations are concentrating regional efforts in this area.

Sincerely yours,

Courtney Siceloff

P.S. Saw the AP release of the Houston study — very good write-up!

Dear Father Krahe:

At the Southern Regional Council meeting in Atlanta last week, it was mentioned that there are studies to be conducted in four southern cities concerning employment opportunities for Negroes. I understand the report on Houston should be finished soon. Three cities have already designated, but the fourth has not been finally decided. In speaking with Dr. Moss, Director of Research for the Southern Regional Council, I understand that there would be a possibility of the Greenville or Greenville-Spartanburg area being included. I understand that what is required is a citizens' group willing to undertake or assist this project.

I understand that the Greenville Council on Human Relations has had merit employment as a project, and I am wondering if they would be interested in this proposal. Probably the chances would be better of getting the project in case Furman University would indicate a willingness to cooperate.

At present, Penn Center and Claflin College, along with an advisory committee, are seeking funds for a state-wide research project. A survey in the Greenville area would contribute not only to the residents of that area, but to this state project as well.

I am sending a copy of this letter to Dr. Moss, with the request that he write you directly concerning the responsibility of the Greenville Council on Human Relations if this project were to be undertaken there. With that information in hand, you could then take it up with your group.

It was certainly good to see you at the SCCHR meeting in Columbia recently, and to know of your participation in the Greenville Council.

Best regards,

Sincerely yours,

I liked very much the brochure on Hanston & employment situation. I do hope also that the Greenville Council will try to undertake a study there.

I am wondering if you know the cost of printing the Hanston pamphlet. We are contemplating publishing such a pamphlet & would like to have an idea of its cost. I'm enclosing a card so you can jot it down.

Thank you very much for the article "Southern Exposure," from the Spring issue of the IUD Digest. I haven't yet had a chance to read it but am looking forward to getting to it this week. I am sorry we haven't been able to include South Carolina in our employment surveys.

In answer to your request for information in past files pertinent to Negroes in social work, the only reference we were able to find is in The Negro Yearbook, 11th edition, pp. 198 to 200. I wish we could be of more help.

Thank you for your kind words about the cover of the Chattanooga study. I, too, am sorry that we have not been able to include a textile community in the series.

Dear James Morse:

I have been asked to speak at the Mather School, a Negro High School and Junior College, sponsored by the Baptist Church, on Social Work Career under their Career Day. The senior classes of the surrounding Negro high schools will be present as well.

I plan to write the director of Public Welfare in South Carolina to find out how many Negroes now work in this field, requirements and other pertinent material. However, I am wondering if in past files you have any information pertinent to Negroes in social work in the South?

Your bulletin on Chattanooga arrived this morning and I am very impressed with the cover. I assume the material is equal to it and will soon delve into it.

Dear Paul:

Many thanks for the excellent letter you wrote Courtney with reference to the proposal which Penn has for a statewide research project. I am quite hopeful that the door is not closed on that project and feel that your letter may help to widen the crack.

Best regards.

Dear Paul:

Thank you so much for the supporting letter for the research project proposal. Yes, it should certainly help - if anything will! Thus I echo the frustration you voice, and I'm not sure I'm as good-natured about it as you are. We'll keep our fingers crossed anyway.

Now I'm afraid we have another request to make. Material is being collected for an article in the Whetstone, magazine of the N. C, Mutual Life Insurance Company, on Penn in connection with our centennial. Mrs. Wade, the editor and director of public relations, has requested a picture and biographical sketch of Marion Wright. We wrote him about this, and he telephoned in reply that we could get this material from you. We will appreciate your sending this directly to Mrs. Wade, at the following address:

Dear Courtney:

You have a real problem with the audit, for which I have no ready answer.

Our accountant (Daniel E. Harrison, 868 York Street, S.W., Atlanta 10) does not have an office or association in Beaufort. I doubt that it would be a desirable arrangement though believe he would be willing to fly over to do the audit. His fee is $50 per day (plus any travel expenses).

Since our financial records are so varied we have developed a rather unique procedure. Our Secretary-Treasurer, Ruth Alexander, actually does most of the work for the audit. We do a six-month, and a full year, audit, separate audits in effect for general operations and special projects, will henceforth do an entirely separate audit for the Voter Education Project, and on occasion, such as the changing of directors, do special audits. All of these requirements, plus having to meet the various stipulations of foundations and others, are so far removed from the world of business and normal auditing procedures that it is virtually necessary that Ruth do the initial work. Our auditor then checks the work done, makes very certain that all income and expenditures are properly accounted for, and otherwise determines that the finished product conforms with normal and accepted auditing procedures.

It is in this last step that the difficulty usually arises. You may recall that Alice Spearman had similar difficulty with a firm in Columbia last year. Some auditors are so accustomed to the business world of profit and loss that they find it difficult to work with other types of accounts. Others, frankly, are somewhat concerned about the purposes and programs of some of our agencies and this concern may show in the highly conditioned product they produce.

For many years we used an auditor from the staff of Emory University. At his death a young man in his firm asked for and received his business. He is a Registered Public Accountant instead of a CPA but the head of the firm is a CPA and available as needed. We use him primarily though because he is very thorough and a stickler for detail (and sometimes maddeningly slow) but he is not afraid of the unorthodox stipulations of agency and foundation requirements so long as the final test of "acceptable audition procedures" can be met.

This you will have to find in any auditor you use. In seeking a new auditor it would be best to explore fully your needs beforehand - both as to accounting and the extent to which the auditor will certify the finished product. Frankly, within reason I think cost is secondary. For your program needs you need a workable audit that will reflect your operation as it is conducted. For the protection of you, your staff , and board, you need a firm certification that all is in complete and proper order. Anything less that this is not worth the paper it is written on. There are plenty of auditors who meet both requirements and I think you should look until you find one. And, personally, I think those who do not either are inexperienced in agency audit procedure - no matter how qualified and experienced otherwise - or show a serious discomfort at having any official and responsible connection with the agency and programs concerned.

Hope this quick response will be of some help. Will be happy to explore tha matter in more detail if needed.

The matter of the material to McIver will be treated separately.

Sincerely,

PA:bp

Dear Paul;

We have had difficulty finding an auditor to handle our books here. Previously there was a CPA in Beaufort who did the work for $300. However he left and his successor delayed so that we had to take up the books and at the last minute give them to the Arthur Andersen firm in Charlotte which makes monthly visits to Beaufort for various firms here.

The Arthur Andersen firm, I understand, is one of the largest and possibly the most expensive. The charge was $500. but rather than giving a certified audit they merely examined the books and so qualified their audit that the Penn Trustees felt that it was practically useless.

I have noticed that the SRC audit has cost between five and six hundred dollars and yet your operations are much more extensive than Penn's, to say the least. I would be interested in knowing what arrangements you have made, what type of audit you are paying for and (whether you know of any firm operating outside of Atlanta with business in Beaufort that would handle our audit on a similar basis.)* I gather, likewise, that your audit must be sufficient for satisfying many of the foundations. It is quite possible that should we not find a local auditor that we will again return the auditing to the Philadelphia area where it was done prior to five years ago.

Our finance Committee will be meeting next week in Philadelphia to consider the matter of the audit and I will be leaving before I have an opportunity to hear from you. I wonder if you wouldn't mind writing me, Care of Paul Brown, Jr., Philadelphia National Bank, Broad and Chestnut Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

On another matter the chairman of the Advisory Committee of South Carolina, Mr. Rick McIver, Box 255, Conway, S. C. indicated great interest in the Greenville Survey that was made. I know copies must be very scarce, but if you do have an extra, I know he would appreciate it very much.

With best regards and many thanks,

Sincerely,

Dear Mrs. Brown:

In reply to your letter of yesterday, I understand that a list of executive secretaries in the state councils was mailed to Mr. Siceloff last week. As for the other data requested in your letter, I guess that you were unaware of the fact that the information in the typescript you forwarded came from this office. It was prepared at the request of Mr. Marion Wright, and it contains virtually all the information we have on the subject of state parks.

All in all, I guess this is just a case of the right hand not knowing what the left is doing. But if we can help you in other areas, please feel free to call on us.

Dear Mr. Dunbar :

I am a "temporary worker" at Penn Community, and have been asked by Mr. Siceloff to write to you concerning some information he needs, and which I believe he discussed with you by telephone on Aug. 14. It isn't easy to come into a situation as a newcomer and understand all the details, so I hope I am writing for the right things !

First, I believe he would like to have a list of Executive Secretaries in the Council of Human Relations as soon as possible. We need to write to them for some information on various state parks.

As you know, Judge Martin has ordered desegregation of all state parks (was it on July 10?) ; the question now is : will the parks be closed after the 60-day intervening period ? We are working up a paper that will show the experience of other state parks, and this is where we need some help.

Enclosed is a rough typescript of integration activities , both legal and voluntary, in some other states. Have you any data at your office that can be added to this ?

Of state parks in states other than South Carolina, have any of them closed after desegregation ? Entire system or otherwise ? Have any been challenged ?

Thank you very much for any help you can give us in this matter. We'll appreciate hearing from you at your earliest convenience.

Sincerely,

Thank you for your letter of September 17, suggesting names and cities for distribution of the Morland pamphlet. We did not use several of the suggestions, especially the radio and TV stations. We did, however, take full advantage of the Legislators and the printed news media. In addition to the Morland pamphlet, we also included the Coles study.

Your initiative in helping us to effect distribution in South Carolina is most appreciative. Distribution being the problem for us that it is, we would be very grateful for any help or suggestions that you can give.

Dear Vernon:

This is in reply to your letter of about a month ago concerning the distribution of the Morland Study. I was glad to see the distribution you had already made in South Carolina.

For additional groups I have checked names in red on pages of the South Carolina Legislative Manual for 1963. This handbook is being sent separately to you. The checked names in the handbook can be found on the following pages:
36, 38, 131, 132, 133, 134, 194, 200, 202, 203, 260.

I am also enclosing a list of South Carolinian towns. It seems to me that a copy might be sent to the chairman of the school board in those communities of 10,000 and over and perhaps to the Chamberof Commerce in those towns likewise. I ~~don't~~ think you have sent copies to the presidents of the Chamber of Commerce, ~~but~~ this might already have been done.

I am also enclosing a list of newspaper and television stations that are the largest in the state and it would be helpful to send a copy to each of these. Perhaps to both newspapers and stations, it could be addressed to News Director and Station Director.

With best regards,

Sincerely,

Dear Vernon:

NY State

Several years ago we were tapped by the Department of Social Welfare to file a financial report on fund-raising. This was required of agencies raising money in that state. They have just published a directory of organizations registered with the Department of Social Welfare in 1962 and I have not seen Southern Regional Council listed out of some 4500 agencies. While it is a considerable nuisance to work up such a report, yet I thought I would bring it to your attention and am inclosing instructions on preparing the annual report, so as to give you an idea of what is required. Incidently, we have also been asked by Washington, D. C. to file an annual report to them.

Sincerely,

Courtney Siceloff

Item D. Enter here the net amount as determined in Schedule #2.

Item E. Any special income should be entered here. For example, the net gain from the sale of an investment would be entered here, as would an allotment from a governmental agency. Explain in Schedule #3.

Dear Les:

We are not only attempting to recruit additional members but also a chairman for the Mississippi Advisory Committee to the Commission on Civil Rights. Obviously, there are not many prospects in the state for membership, so we are seeking all those with whom we have contact to make suggestions.

In this connection, I talked with Colonel Muse by 'phone concerning his visits in the state. He indicated that in his reports to SRC, he had mentioned a number of persons that might be approached either for membership themselves or for suggestions as to who might serve. The reports he felt most pertinent were those of October 14, 1961, April 30, 1962 and Mississippi, January 1964.

It would be very helpful if I were to be able to see the reports. Would there be a possibility of thermofaxing them if they are not too long? Otherwise, if you prefer for them to remain in the office, I could perhaps stop by and look at them.

I am enclosing a thermofax of some of the publicity concerning the SCLC conference here. It was helpful talking with you. I did decide not to issue a statement or release a letter.

Best regards.

Dear Vernon:

In response to your letter of June 16, there are a half-dozen or so speeches enclosed. I have the originals of these, and it isn't absolutely necessary that I get them back. I wouldn't mind having them back, however, or mimeographs.

Under separate cover, I enclose a small book THE ROOTS, which contains two of my speeches. Since this book isn't copyrighted, you can use these if you wish. PLEASE RETURN the book at your convenience; this is my only copy.

You will find another recent speech of mine printed in Tuskegee's "Conference on Disadvantage.." You probably have a copy of the booklet in the office. It is, however, copyrighted. Doubtless Tuskegee would give you permission to reprint, if you wanted to. You have my permission.

There are some fifteen more from the last several years which I hesitate to send through the mail, as I have no copies. These include my last two: "####dRaid across the Ohio," where I went after George Wallace, and "The Commonwealth of Kentucky," which I delivered just a week ago today at Frankfort, for which I received proper payment AND a commission as a Kentucky Colonel, signed by the Governor. Unfortunately no bourbon came along with it. In the present market he'd better kept the commission and given me the bourbon, though I can hang the commission on the wall, and I couldn't do that to the bourbon. In fact, a gallon of Bourbon, which would be for Kentucky officialdom a normal gift, might hang me on the wall!

Maybe I can bring these speeches down to you when I come to Atlanta again.

~~Sincerely,~~

Dear Barbara:

Filing the last of the material used for the municipal report, I came across the enclosed, which must belong to SRC. So far as I know, this, along with the material returned a month or so ago, is all we had from SRC. But, if some stray piece turns up I'll return it promptly.

Once again, and somewhat belatedly, I want to thank you for your help. I know how time consuming it is to wade through file folders and then have to re-file it all again later.

The report is now out of our hands, I hope, and will be coming out the middle of next month.

Please tell Staige we send along our thanks to him, too, for his help.

Sincerely,

Dear Margaret:

Just as a start on providing you with some information about the economic cost, consequences, etc., of resistance to integration, I am enclosing a section from a forthcoming SRC publication on tokenism.

The author, Kenneth Morland, has pulled together some good stuff, I think, about the high cost the South is paying in its resistance to the law of the land. We will be sending you additional material in the weeks to come.

Dear Margaret:

I am enclosing a selection of recent newpapaer articles (mostly from the Wall Street Journal, the Business Week piece mentioned in our phone chat today, and The High Cost of Conflict pamphlet. In case you've overlooked them, I am also enclosing a few recent L-Reports, which discuss the southern economic situation.

You will note that three of these clips do not discuss the economic costs of resistance directly. They are respectively: 1) the interview with Malcolm X, 2) the Jim Montgomery article on school drop-outs, and 3) the Journal story about aid for the impacted areas. The first reflects, to some extent, another aspect of the price of the South is paying -- and will pay even more -- for denying Negroes their rights -- the price of increasing racial hatred. I assume you saw the Newsweek ta takeout about the militant Negro mood in the May 6 issue (but a copy is enclosed in case you didn't). The second discusses a growing southern problem which is surely aggravated by our separate - but unequal school systems. The third points up how much the South stands to lose if Uncle Sugar cuts off Federal funds to impacted areas which refuse to desegregate.

I hope these materials will be useful to you. We will try to feed you more as we come across it. Sorry

Dear Staige:

I've been waiting for the time to write you a proper thank-you for sending all the economic material recently. At the rate we've been going lately, however, we seem a little short of time. So, this quickie. But, I did want you to know we appreciate your efforts and the material you sent was most helpful--the Wall Street Journal articles, particularly, were invaluable.

You may have seen the result, which we hope went to several sources who could use it effectively. But, in case you missed it, I'm sending along a copy.

Again, thanks.

Dear Margaret:

If possible, we would like to get 25 additional copies of your recent report on the "Economic Impact of Racial Unrest." We have had several requests for the sort of information contained in the report and undoubtedly will receive more. If there is a charge for these copies, please bill us accordingly.

A good example of the economic impact of racial unrest was discussed in a piece by Neil Maxwell in yesterday's Wall Street Journal, i.e., its impact on summer tourism in the South. If you can't get a copy in D. C. and would like one, please let me know and I'll send you one.

As you know, we are hoping to do something similar to your report later this year, possibly in conjunction with ADL. I hope, if this project materializes, our report will be as informative as yours.

Incidentally, as a monetime "Black Knight of the Potomac," I enjoyed your husband's recent piece on the cold war warriors of CIA.

Dear Staige:

A slight delay in answering your letter, as I have been gone for a week's vacation.

I had 25 copies of the economic report mailed to you yesterday. No charge.

I would very much like to have a copy of the Wall Street Journal article you mentioned--the one by Neil Maxwell on summer tourism in the South. Could you send a copy? I would appreciate it. Once I dig out from this stack of copy that has accumulated, perhaps Potomac will subscribe to the paper; judging from all the good clips you have sent, it really does seem we should.

Thanks for the kind words about Bem's spy piece.

Enclosed is a copy of a pamphlet titled The Price is High. It was prepared by Randolph T. I thought you might be interested in seeing the material he has assembled about the high cost of resistance. I might point out that much, if not most, of it came from our files and from the material assembled by Potomac, in its recent report on the same subject.

Dear Art:

I am returning the copy of your first draft of a "housing memorandum," which you so kindly sent us for our consideration. Paul Anthony, Les, and Vernon Jordan have all read it over, as well as myself. And we have no criticisms or suggestions for change.

Speaking for myself, I'd just like to say that this memorandum would be a godsend to our research department since it covers clearly and comprehensively, an area about which we are getting an increasing number of requests for information. So I hope you can spare us some extra copies when the final draft is completed.

So far as distribution is concerned, I assume you are planning to circulate it among the interagency groups. I imagine, too, that you are planning some distribution to the press. It seems to me that the memorandum would be particularly useful to such periodicals as the Wall St. Journal, Fortune, Forbes, Barron's and Business Week. I also think it would be advisable to send copies to Architectural Forum and House & Home.

While a great deal is being said these days about equal housing opportunity, I can't see that much is actually being done about it, Metropolitan Life's recent action to the contrary not withstanding. Bob Baker's recent series in the D. C. Post certainly shows how little is being done and how much must be done in the nation's capitol. The value of your memo, in my opinion is that it shows what can and should be done throughout the nation.

Advance for release
MONDAY, MARCH 9, 1964

The Potomac Institute
1501 18th St., N.W.
Washington, D.C.

332 - 5566

Federal agencies now have the authority and responsibility to promote desegregation in all types of housing built with Federal assistance.

This is the theme of a Potomac Institute study, The Federal Role In Equal Housing Opportunity, released today. The Institute is a private, non-profit research and consulting agency in the field of race relations.

Under President Kennedy's executive order on housing, backed by the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments, Federal agencies can promote open occupancy by persuasion, regulation, and litigation wherever Federal funds are involved, the study says.

(The recent Supreme Court refusal to review a lower court decision that bars racial segregation in hospitals receiving Federal funds under the Hill-Burton Act supports the Potomac contention.)

The 1962 Executive Order outlaws discrimination in housing aided directly or indirectly by Federal loans, grants, guarantees, or insurance. It also established the President's Committee on Equal Opportunity in Housing.

The Potomac Institute study outlines methods -- and cites legal precedents -- for achieving open occupancy in both new and existing urban renewal programs, middle income metropolitan rental housing, and public housing projects.

However, builders of large, single-family developments can avoid non-discrimination requirements by seeking private financing and insurance. Only a broadened order reaching Federally regulated lending institutions can close this loophole. In the meantime, the study suggests that notice be served on builders that future Federal assistance will be refused to those who now continue to discriminate in their housing operations.

The Potomac study recommends positive steps by which Federal agencies can go beyond the prohibition of discrimination and assure that housing is actually open to Negroes and other minorities.

Among such steps are retraining of agency field staff for their new obligation to desegregate Federally-assisted housing, a reporting system to assess progress, and technical assistance to the housing industry to help it benefit from successful desegregation patterns.

Public opposition to desegregation, the study says, can be dealt with by studying successful examples of open occupancy and popularizing them so as to dispel unfounded fears and myths.

FOR YOUR INFORMATION

Here is a summary we assembled from published sources of the evidence of economic costs of racial unrest since the 1957 disorders in Little Rock. You may find this useful background for any story you prepare on current civil rights developments.

THE ECONOMIC IMPACT OF RACIAL UNREST

There is now clear evidence that wherever racial unrest has occurred in the South the local economy has suffered.

The following resumé of evidence, with the source, available to the business community includes examples of cities and states which have suffered or prospered as the result of the way they have met the challenge of racial change. It includes the statements of some newspapers, businessmen, industrialists, and bankers of the South who have considered the evidence.

THE SOUTH

Martin R. Gainsbrough, Chief Economist, National Industrial Conference Board, said problems raised by public school integration issues in the South had a bad effect on new plant sites in the area. "I know this because I sit in on meetings of various companies where these matters are discussed. I have heard them eliminate from further consideration areas which have this school problem, because of the friction involved in them and the difficulty of getting top personnel to move to such places with their children." (Atlanta Constitution 2-27-59)

Malcolm Bryan, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, in a speech before the Rotary Club of Atlanta, Jan. 23, 1961, said, "In my judgment foreign nations or foreigners seeking plant locations or opportunities to invest their capital--and there is much off-shore capital invested in the South--or other Americans from outside our area seeking the same opportunities are not much concerned with our social opinions. But they are concerned with our ability to govern ourselves and to maintain law and order.... A failure in the South to maintain law and order can cost bitterly in the job opportunities and the wealth that we so much need to increase if our citizens are to be well served. If we behave like a banana republic we shall get and deserve the economic rewards characteristic of a banana republic." (Southern Regional Council Report L-24)

New York Times report on the sit-in pressures across the South in 1961: "Almost without exception desegregation of lunch counters has been accomplished peacefully and without any significant loss of white customers. This has led business leaders in some of the holdout areas to reconsider their position." (5-6-61)

The Wall Street Journal, in 1961: "Precision is impossible in any attempt to measure the pocketbook impact of racial problems. But several economic indicators show that the South, too busy building and booming to notice the recessions of 1953-54 and 1957-58, definitely felt the recent downturn--perhaps, in the view of some economists, even more than the rest of the nation. And many Southerners are inclined to attribute this situation at least partly to racial unrest." One yardstick is new construction. The article cited figures from officials of the Atlanta Federal Reserve Bank: "...in the first quarter, these contracts ran 11 percent below the level of the like quarter of 1960 in the six Southern states served by the Atlanta Federal Reserve while nationally there was an 0.2 percent rise. Similarly, non-residential construction contracts, which include new plants, fell 7.5 percent in the first quarter in the six-state area from the like period of 1960, as compared with a nationwide gain of 9.4 percent." (5-26-61)

Reed Sarratt, executive director of the Southern Education Reporting Service in Nashville: "There's a direct relationship between an area's handling of its racial problems and its business success." (AP, 4-63)

ALABAMA

The racial tensions which have seethed in Birmingham for years and erupted in new violence this spring have had a corroding effect on the economic well-being of the city, as shown by a number of sources:

The population of metropolitan Birmingham increased about 14 percent between 1950 and 1960, while the population grew an average of 26.4 percent in other metropolitan areas of the United States. Birmingham's old rival, Atlanta (which long ago outstripped the Alabama city, judging by any number of economic yardsticks) grew about 40 percent and Memphis 30 percent. In the past five years, while jobs increased in the nation as a whole, the number of jobs available in Birmingham dropped 10 percent. Experts say that if Birmingham just holds its own it must create 8,000 to 12,000 new jobs a year. A typical example of how the city is losing new industries is the company which planned a new plant to make products out of steel. Birmingham was negotiating for the plant when the riot over Freedom Riders erupted in 1961. The company decided Birmingham was out of the question and eventually built its plant in Tennessee, although it has to ship its steel in from Birmingham. (Saturday Evening Post, 3-2-63)

In 1957, the Birmingham metropolitan area had its highest employment, 246,000. Today, the total is estimated at 228,000. Some leading citizens say that in recent years large numbers of the best educated young men and women have been deserting the city to find jobs elsewhere. (Wall Street Journal, 5-15-63)

Retail sales in Birmingham were reported off 30 percent or more this spring. One local businessman said several retailers had told him their books had shown a net loss for the first time in a generation. Another businessman of 35 years' experience said there were more stores for rent in Birmingham last fall than there had been during the Depression. Last month one downtown block had eight of its 20 stores empty, with "For Rent" signs in the windows. (New York Times, 5-10-63)

One newspaper account said that downtown stores privately report that business currently is off 40 to 50 percent, hit first by a Negro boycott and then by a tense atmosphere that keeps customers at home or in suburban shops. A story in the back pages of the Birmingham newspapers in May noted that a chain store was closing its downtown branch in two weeks because of a lack of business. (Washington Post, 5-20-63)

The Federal Reserve Bank in Atlanta reported that in the four-week period ended May 18, 1963, department store sales in Birmingham were down 15 percent below the same period in 1962. Since Jan. 1, 1963, the city's department stores dropped five percent from 1962. During the same four and one half months, department store sales were up seven percent in Atlanta, up 10 percent in New Orleans and up 15 percent in Jacksonville, Fla.

A Birmingham restaurant owner commented recently, "We're hurt and hurt bad because our business community refused to exercise leadership when it could have saved the situation." The restaurant owner said his business had fallen 25 percent since the outbreak of racial violence in April, 1963. John Williamson, head of a sales consultant firm, stated, "We've become known as a city of reaction, rebellion and riot, and because of that we're not gaining industry as fast as we should." (Wall Street Journal, 5-16-63)

The University of Alabama Medical Center in Birmingham is the city's second biggest industry, ranking only behind Tennessee Coal and Iron, a subsidiary of U. S. Steel. The 15-block complex, which represents a $100 million investment has plans for an additional $30 million of construction in the next few years. Despite an outstanding, and growing reputation, Birmingham's adverse publicity sometimes has posed problems for the Center in attracting additional top-flight scientists. The Center has been able to solve the problems--so far--by inviting the scientists to visit for a week to look at the facilities of the Center. (Washington Post, 4-11-63)

Two leading Birmingham executives warned in 1957 that industry was by-passing the city and state in setting up branch plants, sales offices, and warehouses. William P. Engel, former chairman of the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce Committee of 100, said industry was looking elsewhere because of the publicity resulting from racial troubles in Birmingham and Montgomery. He mentioned one major plant and several smaller installations which were being located outside the state, as a result. Cooper Green, vice president of the Alabama Power Company, said the publicity over their racial difficulties had hurt both Birmingham and Montgomery, because responsible industry simply does not want to move into a troubled area. He said he had personal knowledge of two major plants and two minor installations that shelved plans to move into the state. (Birmingham Post-Herald, 2-6-57)

Two years ago a top official of one of Birmingham's leading banks declared, "We've been hurt and hurt bad. In the last few days, I bet I've spent $50 in telephone calls trying to convince a big Ohio company that it should locate a pilot plant in Alabama. But I'm afraid we've lost it to New England and lost it strictly because of the unrest down here. The pilot plant in its first stage was scheduled to cost about $3 million and if it had worked out, the company was thinking in terms of a further investment of $40 million to $50 million. Well, we asked for it, and now we're getting it." (Wall Street Journal, 5-26-61)

Sidney W. Smyer, Sr., a lawyer, real estate dealer, and a regional vice president of the Council of State Governments, was chairman of the white committee that met this spring to hammer out a desegregation agreement with Birmingham Negroes. Smyer, who has seen the importance of Birmingham solving its racial problems in order to create a good atmosphere for business, has observed: "I'm still a segregationist, but I hope I'm not a damn fool." (AP, 5-17-63)

After racial violence in Birmingham and Montgomery in 1961, the Anniston (Ala.) Star said that "unless we can get more protection from our constituted officers of the law in our cities and counties, we might as well close up our Chambers of Commerce and similar institutions; for no thoughtful person wants to come to a place where both human and property rights are held in such low repute."

About the same time, the Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser observed, "The most obvious injury is to the cause of those who seek to entice new industry to Alabama to create payrolls and provide the material blessings so long denied by the Civil War and its aftermath. The police dereliction in Birmingham probably shrank business in every firm in the city. There are a lot of fundamental reasons why a city and state cannot tolerate violence in any circumstance. But the most obvious reason is that riotous conditions blight profits and payrolls--and, politically, make the South's plight worse than before." (5-18-61)

Last year, the Washington Post suggested, "The day of reckoning is approaching in Alabama. Vast Federal installations there will be affected by the Federal Government's nondiscrimination policies." (6-17-62)

Last year, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare announced that local, segregated schools no longer would be considered suitable for children of military personnel. This spring, it was announced in Washington that on-base desegregated schools would be built for children of military personnel in three Alabama communities: Maxwell and Gunter Air Force bases in Montgomery; Fort Rucker, near Ozark, and Fort McClellan at Anniston. Montgomery alone will lose an estimated annual $104,345 in impacted-areas assistance, as a result.

ARKANSAS

In the two years before the school crisis erupted into violence in Little Rock in September, 1957, industrial investments totaled $248 million in Arkansas. During the period, Little Rock alone gained 10 new plants, worth $3.4 million, which added 1,072 jobs in the city. In the two years after the turbulence which brought Federal troops to the city, not a single company employing more than 15 workers moved into the Little Rock area. Industrial investments in the state dropped to $190 million. (Newsweek, 10-22-62)

Five years later, in the fall of 1962, an official in the Little Rock industrial development program commented, "We still don't like to talk about the school row. But everyone knows it knocked us in the head for four years and we're not out of it yet." (Wall Street Journal, 10-1-62)

The lingering effect of racial violence on the state's economic growth can be shown by yet other figures. Arkansas started an industrial development program in 1955. In its first full year of operation, 1956, 95 new plants with a total capital investment of $130.1 million were brought in. In 1961, 63 new plants, costing $44 million, opened in the state. (Wall Street Journal, 10-1-62)

After the school troubles, Everett Tucker, industrial director of the Little Rock Chamber of Commerce, commented, "Now, and for the predictable future, whenever a company is planning a new factory, it will immediately think of Little Rock as a 'hot-bed' of segregation--which is not true at all. This is going to set our industrial program back considerably." Leonard C. Yaseen, senior partner of the Fatus Factory Locating Service, said that a large metal products manufacturer who had been considering Little Rock for a new plant changed his mind after the school disturbances. Yaseen said several other clients also removed Little Rock from the list of possible sites, adding, "Mob action and civic irresponsibility place a community on industry's blacklist." (Accent on the South, Benjamin D. Segal, reprint from Labor's Daily.)

Dr. Charles H. Carpenter, Industrial Engineering Consultant to the Arkansas Development Commission, stated that Governor Orval Faubus' actions in the desegregation controversy had cost the state thousands of jobs. He said also there had been a "loss of large, substantial industries which might otherwise have come to Arkansas. (Arkansas Gazette, 10-3-57)

Dr. F. Douglas Lawrason, provost for medical affairs, University of Arkansas said, "The University Medical Center, being within the community of Little Rock, could not help but be affected by the public school problem there. I think it would be only fair to say that because of this complicating social change, the Medical Center has had its faculty recruitment program brought to a virtual standstill. So many of the persons we approach and invite to join the faculty are diverted by the events that have been taking place in the community." (Arkansas Gazette 1-16-59)

In 1959, after two years of turmoil over the schools and a full year of closure of the public high schools, the Women's Emergency Committee to Open Our Schools, an organization of Little Rock citizens, made a study of the effects of the crisis on the business and professional life of the city. Among the findings: based on the first six months of the year, an estimated one-third fewer Arkansas families moved into the city than in 1957; there was an estimated 50 percent drop in newcomers from outside the state. The owner of one of the leading real estate companies in the city said the sale of homes dropped between 20 and 25 percent in 1959 from the previous year; vacancies in rental properties were up 20 percent. Elsewhere on the economic front: employment in the building industry was running 10 percent below the previous year; the value of building permits in the Little Rock area was down 12 percent from 1958. Effective buying income per household declined seven percent between 1956-58, a decline sharper than in all but one of 25 other Arkansas cities and sharper than in all but one of 26 leading midwest and southwest cities surveyed. While department store sales were up four percent in Little Rock in 1958, compared to the previous year, they jumped 23 percent in Memphis. (Little Rock Report-The City, Its People, Its Business)

In a survey in January, 1959, the American Association of University Women surveyed Little Rock businessmen. A president of a real estate and insurance firm said the school situation "has very definitely hurt the real estate business--just about killed it, as a matter of fact." A salesman for another large real estate firm commented, "Real estate is slow now--roughest I have ever seen." A merchandise executive observed, "If any man does not recognize that the current situation has hurt local business, he has rocks in his head!" One citizen, however, indicated his business had improved after the school crisis--an executive of a long distance moving company, who said, "We are moving families away from Little Rock faster than ever before. Incoming moves are predominantly government personnel rather than large corporations." (The High Cost of Conflict, Anti-Defamation League.)

FLORIDA

When the South was in the midst of violent demonstrations over school desegregation one big midwestern firm decided to open a new plant in Florida because it considered Leroy Collins, then governor, a moderate on the race issue. In a wire to the governor the firm said it considered Collins' leadership would help provide "a type of industrial climate which is essential for business stability and confidence." (Accent on the South.)

However, racial and other factors are costing Miami millions of dollars a year in direct business from the Caribbean, the Miami Herald said in a 1957 article from Kingston, Jamaica. Jamaican Trade Minister Wills Isaacs said that "wealthy Jamaican Negro businessmen are steering away from Miami to do their business because of color barriers at hotels and restaurants. Without such barriers, Miami's business with Jamaica would increase 400 to 500 percent and that amounts to millions." The article quoted Miami Mayor Randall N. Christmas, who commented, "Miami is becoming more cosmopolitan and our area is the least discriminatory in all the South. I think you will find Miami lowering barriers which are detrimental to inter-American trade and goodwill."

In the past two or three years Miami, and Florida, have lowered a good many barriers, more often than not quietly. And last year, Florida claimed 715 new plants and expansions. The state is considering a multi-million-dollar program to build several new universities, most of them geared to engineering and space.

GEORGIA

At the time Georgia was facing its school segregation controversy in 1957, State Auditor B. E. Thrasher told of the damaging effect on the state's efforts to sell $12 million worth of bonds for the state university system building program. Thrasher said investment officers of insurance companies are "afraid of controversial issues" and added that "investors have been scared by rumors that segregation troubles might force closing of buildings." The Atlanta Constitution reported that the University System Building Authority had withdrawn a $12 million bond offer after experts advised there might not be any bidders. (New South, Southern Regional Council, 7-8-57)

Georgia experienced the impact of public school desegregation in 1961, with the first Negroes scheduled to enter formerly all-white schools in Atlanta. Many citizens expressed their opinions in hopes that it would help the state avoid conflict and economic damage. Nearly 1,000 businessmen in Georgia signed a petition for enactment of whatever legislation might be necessary to continue uninterrupted operation of public schools.

H. McKinley Conway, Jr., publisher of "Industrial and Development Manufacturers Record," which helps select sites for new industry in the South, told why the whole state had a stake in Atlanta's reaction to a Federal order to desegregate schools: "As the center of the Southeastern market, Atlanta will attract a certain number of facilities which could not logically be situated elsewhere. But many plants which need only find a suitable site in a small community . . . can and will ignore the offers of small Georgia communities in preference for similar locations in other states where the school problem is being handled more smoothly." (Atlanta Journal, 1-17-61)

James V. Carmichael, President of Scripto, Inc., told the Governor's Conference on Trade and Commerce, March 16, 1961, "If it had not been for the courageous action of the governor and the legislature in clarifying the school situation (i.e., passage of 'open-school' legislation) Lockheed (Marietta, Ga., plant) would not have received the contract ($1 billion federal contract for construction of a military transport plane)." (Atlanta Journal-Constitution, 3-16-61)

General Lucius D. Clay, Chairman of the Board, Continental Can Company, Inc., speaking before the Governor's Conference on Trade and Commerce in Atlanta, May 22, 1961, observed: "Employees being transferred to Georgia worry about the school conditions for their children. Manufacturers worry about the conditions which could develop within their plants. Today, almost every major manufacturing company is engaged to some extent in contract operations for the government subject to the anti-discrimination laws. Most of us like to feel that we are a part of the community where we are located and that accordingly we must respect and accept local customs and traditions. None of us want to locate in areas where there is serious risk of conflict between local custom and Federal law. We need the good will of the community, and yet we must obey the law."

General Clay also said that, "so far, the desegregation issue has not affected our operations. We find much understanding of the problem in our plants and an enlightened approach to the problem from our own employees. Nevertheless, we cannot dismiss it as non-existent. Whatever and whenever the solution, until it is solved, it does create some disquiet, some apprehension in the minds of those who otherwise look favorably on Georgia for industrial expansion."

After several months of intermittent demonstrations in 1960-61 in Atlanta, and a boycott sparked by student groups to remove racial barriers in lunch counters and department store restaurants, merchants agreed that the Negro boycott of the downtown area was almost 100 percent effective. Department store sales for a one week period in February, 1961, were down 12 percent from the previous year, the Federal Reserve bank reported. Receipts of some variety stores showed a far greater drop. During the demonstrations, early in 1961, one store executive said, "The most important thing that can be done is to convince the power structure that this situation can ruin the downtown area. The effect is not going to be confined to the retail stores. It will hit the banks, the office supply concerns, the insurance firms, the real estate interests and all the rest." (New York Times, 2-18-61)

In Savannah, Ga., a citizens' negotiating committee announced the end of lunch counter discrimination in downtown stores in July, 1961. The action followed a 15-month boycott of the stores by Negroes. Apparently the Negro refusal to buy hurt merchants. One store manager commented to a reporter, "There wouldn't have been an agreement to desegregate the lunch counters if it hadn't." (Washington Post 7-10-61)

In Macon, Ga., Mayor Edgar Wilson commented last year, "We've been watching these freedom rides and boycotts in other cities and we're getting the picture. Even Robert E. Lee finally had to surrender, didn't he?" At the time, Macon had taken down the segregation signs at the public golf course and the library; 19 lunch counters had been opened to Negroes and five Negro women, formerly employed as cleaning women in local department stores, had been upgraded to sales jobs. A white member of a secret Macon businessmen's committee which worked with a Negro group on desegregation solutions, observed: "Most of us didn't want any part of the trouble that cities around us have been experiencing. We contacted cities like Atlanta and Savannah which have had trouble in the past, and we found out quickly what it could mean. In Savannah we learned a Negro boycott cut retail sales as much as 50 percent in some places. Stores weren't the only ones hurt, either. Bankers, insurance men, small loan companies--all of them felt it." (Wall Street Journal, 1-16-62)

At present Macon has a new airport terminal, opened without any segregation. After a three week boycott and a court suit, the city bus line dropped segregation. Racial signs have been removed on restrooms and water fountains. At least 150 Negroes have been employed as clerks, cashiers or office help in stores of all types. Some merchants have reported unofficially that their new Negro clerks are selling more than any of the other clerks. City parks and playgrounds are now open to both races. (New South 4-63)

W. Cameron Mitchell of the Georgia Chamber of Commerce said this year, "Since Georgia has handled its racial problems in most instances on a very high plane, this matter seldom comes up in discussions with prospective industries." In the past four years, nearly 1,000 new plants or expansions have benefitted Georgia, increasing jobs by 36,000, payrolls by $122 million, and capital investments by $370 million. Georgia gained 101 new industries in 1962. (AP, 1963)

LOUISIANA

In 1960, after several days of street demonstrations following the first desegregation of New Orleans schools, two of the city's leading department stores reported a business drop-off of up to 30 percent. (Washington Post, 11-27-60)

In November, 1960, the Wall Street Journal found that in New Orleans: "Demonstrations and downtown street skirmishes have left many stores practically deserted." An official in the drapery section of one store reported his department's sales were running 50 percent under the $3,000 a day business usual at that time of year. Other findings: "At Maison Blanche, New Orleans' largest department store, merchandise manager E. Jones says: 'Our sales were running about 10 percent below a year ago until last Monday, but they dropped this week 20 percent to 30 percent.' . . Advertising outlays this coming weekend have been slashed 50 percent... plans for hiring extra sales personnel for the usual Christmas rush are being reconsidered.

"A partner in one advertising agency here reports: 'Many of my clients don't think it's wise to spend lots of money now. They're very pessimistic over sales prospects for the coming months . . .'

"'Business has stopped cold,' reports H. B. Lawrence, manager of Home Finance Service. 'This time last month we were lending $800 to $1,000 more each day than we were taking in, which is a good sign of better potential earnings for us. Yesterday the difference was down to $397. The day before that we took in $381 more than we loaned, which is really bad.'" (11-18-60)

Four years earlier, Opie L. Shelton, executive vice president of the Baton Rouge Chamber of Commerce had warned: "Boycotts, economic reprisals, the possibility of abandoning our public schools, incidents of violence, irresponsible statements--these are new factors which will now be given consideration by industry and business when they consider a Southern location." (New South 5-56)

New Orleans Councilman Fred J. Cassibry said in a speech December 29, 1960, "Our abundance of natural resources should be like a beacon toward which all the great industrial concerns of the nation should pilot their ships. We won't attain this goal, however, by being listed with Little Rock, Ark., as the most bigoted and hate filled community in the nation. We can hardly expect the industrial giants of the nation to risk capital in a state which handles its problems (regardless of our personal feelings) as ineptly and inexpertly as we have handled the school problem.

"But there is yet time. No lasting damage has been done. No charge of communism or integrator should deter those political, business, civic and labor heads of our community from leading us through this trying crisis. Demagogues have been the spokesmen of our people. It is high time their destructive and irresponsible mouthings are replaced by voices of responsibility and decency." (Southern Regional Council-Report L24)

The Charlotte (N.C.) Observer commented in 1958 on another way in which a state which fights change can suffer: "Louisiana is getting ready to parade before the country the sorry spectacle of an inquisition inside a university. Its segregationist legislature is alarmed that 66 members of the faculty of Louisiana State University would dare to sign a petition opposing the closing of public schools ordered to admit Negroes. A committee of representatives and senators has come storming onto the scene like volunteer firemen, sending out questionnaires and talking darkly of 'Communist connections' and 'subversive tendencies'." It added that a university could not survive "with vigilantes roaming the campus" and then pointed out: "The president of Dartmouth College was heard to say recently that now, for the first time, the rich Northern schools can come South and hire almost any good professor they want. They could not formerly do this, their money notwithstanding. And the reason they can do it now is the police state atmosphere in much of the South, where academic freedom is drowned in the racial turmoil and where such things can occur as are now occurring in Baton Rouge. Louisiana can drive out its thinkers because they happen to be thinking unpopular thoughts. But other regions will be the richer, and the South much the poorer, for their going."

MISSISSIPPI

After the riots at the University of Mississippi last fall and the ensuing violence, threats and reprisals, William B. Selah, Jr., director of the Southwest Mississippi Area Development Commission, expressed what may well have been the reaction of a good number of the state's businessmen: "Violence hurts."

To improve its lagging economy, Mississippi has been trying for 25 years to entice industries to the state, and with some good results. However, after the University riots over the admission of one Negro student, one state industrial salesman heard from eight Northern industrialists who had been considering opening new plants in the state--four of them had dropped their plans. One Midwest furniture manufacturer said frankly, "It looks like you people are being led by the wrong element." Not long after the violence at Oxford, a Jackson banker commented, "I don't think we're going to have much industry running our way for a while." The Mississippi Agricultural and Industrial Board had to cancel a long-planned luncheon in Chicago, where Governor Barnett was to address several hundred industrialists. Several manufacturers had written they wouldn't be interested, and one state official indicated it was feared the governor would get a cold reception. (Newsweek, 10-22-62)

One result of the University crisis: the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools put "Ole Miss" and six other state-supported universities on "extraordinary status". This move, which in effect placed the schools on probation, found the governor guilty of political interference. It accepted the governor's and the board of trustees' assurances there was present interference but warned that the university system was under observation and warned that any additional submission to political interference, any legislative punitive action or riots could bring quick loss of accreditation. (UPI 11-28-62)

By May, 1963, Chancellor J. D. Williams said 16 professors had resigned from the University of Mississippi faculty, four more than the average year-end turnover, Williams added. The University has a professional force--those above the rank of instructor--of about 100. However, an Associated Press survey indicated that 35 professors either had quit or had their resignations pending. One professor told the AP that of the 35, he thought 21 were leaving because of the integration problems, although undoubtedly some would have left in a year or two anyhow for better paying jobs. Three of the resignations officially acknowledged came from department chairmen; all had joined the Mississippi faculty in 1946. (AP 5-17-63)

The executive committee of the Association of American Law Schools recommended unanimously in December, 1962, that the University of Mississippi Law School be suspended from membership if "a suitable educational atmosphere is not quickly created." The recommendation was presented to the full association but did not require any action.

NORTH CAROLINA

In the fall of 1962, businessmen in Charlotte, N.C., hit by drives for desegregation, estimated their business was cut by 20 to 40 percent. (Newsweek 10-22-62)

In the state as a whole, North Carolina, which began compliance with the Supreme Court school decisions with less social upheaval than its sister Southern states, had new plant investments in 1958 of $253 million, while Virginia stood still. (Harvard Business Review, July-August 1960)

TENNESSEE

In Memphis, Bry's Department Store went out of business after a boycott and sit-in. (Newsweek 10-22-62)

In Nashville, where Negro students led a boycott of all downtown stores in 1960, business leaders felt a definite slump. It was not until businessmen agreed to carry out a quiet desegregation program that the customers who had been supporting the boycott began returning. (Newsweek, 10-22-62)

Nashville's boycott was maintained for approximately seven weeks at what has been estimated at about 98 percent efficiency, a figure downtown merchants generally agreed on. Negroes in Nashville spend an estimated $7 million annually downtown and their absence had varying results. In one department store, Harvey's, they represented 12 to 15 percent of the business, in another department store, Cain-Sloan, five percent. The transit company found its revenues dwindling seriously; the two newspapers found advertising lineage figures falling.

In addition to the boycott supporters, other shoppers stayed away from the downtown area--those who live in a 75-mile shopping radius of Nashville. While conditions remained unsettled downtown as a result of sit-ins, they could either stay home or shop in suburban areas. This, too, hurt business in the central city, for these out-of-towners represent 20 percent of the shopping totals. Another factor, unseasonably cold weather, added to the merchants' troubles.

Variety stores were hit particularly hard. With their lunch counters a sit-in target, even those who did venture downtown avoided the food counters, which sometimes account for as much as 50 percent of the gross profit. Even businesses not involved in the sit-ins and which had reputations of good service to Negroes found business dropping. (Settling a Sit-in, Wallace Westfeld; a report prepared for the Nashville Community Relations Conference.)

Nashville did, however, work for a solution, with some give and take on both sides, although many Negroes considered there was only a "token" integration settlement in 1960. Subsequently, department store restaurants and downtown theaters were opened to Negroes. Hotels, motels and most restaurants remained segregated. Public swimming pools were closed. This spring, after no new gains were being made, Negro students once again demonstrated, this time against two segregated downtown restaurants. The mayor has announced the formation of a permanent Human Relations Committee of distinguished whites and Negroes to work out full desegregation plans for the city. (New York Times, 5-17-63)

One assessment of how a state which initially refuses to come to terms with realities of impending change came from George L. Benedict, Jr., a member of the Tennessee Industrial and Agricultural Development Commission. Benedict told the Chattanooga Times in 1958, "This violence hurts us more than the people here realize. You try to sell a man on moving an industrial plant to Tennessee. But he knows about these acts of violence, and he doesn't want to move into that kind of thing."

State Budget Director E. J. Boling said violence in Tennessee threatened the state's credit ratings: "We go up to New York to talk to investment bankers . . . They start off talking about such things as these dynamitings. Sometimes that's all they talk about . . . they only want to know about all the acts of violence." State Comptroller William Snodgrass concurred. Violence of the threat of violence can add a small fraction to interest rates and it adds up to millions eventually. (The Atlanta Journal-Constitution 3-30-58)

George Benedict, now executive aide to Governor Frank Clement of Tennessee, told this year of a prospective industry which was being wooed by two other Southern States. At a dinner in one of the states, industrialists were told, "You don't have to worry about any damn Niggers here." Benedict said that state lost out and Tennessee gained the new industry. (AP, 1963)

TEXAS

Leading citizens of Dallas were determined their city should not become another Little Rock or New Orleans. By the time they faced desegregation of their schools in 1961, white and Negro civic leaders had been working for 16 months to smooth the way. Confronted with the Little Rock picture early in 1960, the Dallas Citizens Council, an unofficial body of the chief executives of 250 of the largest businesses, appointed a seven-man committee to collaborate with a counterpart committee of Negroes. The white committee was headed by C. A. Tatum, president of the Dallas Power and Light Company. The Negro committee represented 125 Negro organizations and was under the chairmanship of C. Maceo Smith, regional intergroup relations director for the Federal Housing Administration. Both groups hammered at the theme of law and order and disseminated their message--that a good citizen obeys the law--through civic clubs, religious bodies, labor unions, medical, and bar associations. Personal contacts, printed and film material were used. By the time the first school desegregation went into effect, Dallas already had opened 40 restaurants to Negroes, manuals had been distributed to store clerks to aid them in handling complaints about desegregation, the State Fair Grounds amusement park had been opened to all, Negro policemen had been shifted from plain clothes to uniform, various forms of transportation segregation were ended, employers had been asked to reappraise their classification policies and this had resulted in some upgrading of Negroes. The result of all the preparation: Dallas, which had been the largest city in the nation maintaining segregation, admitted its first Negroes to white schools in the fall of 1961 without incident. (New York Times, 7-30-61, AP 9-6-61)

VIRGINIA

A State Conference on economic and industrial development was scheduled to be held in Richmond, Va., in mid-1959. Benjamin Muse, in a column in the Washington Post, commented, "It is high time" and then detailed how Virginia had failed to attract industry during its period of "massive resistance." He compared his state of Virginia with North Carolina: "While Governor Almond was setting about the liquidation of this state's public school system, Governor Luther H. Hodges of North Carolina threw himself into a tireless and imaginative campaign of industrial promotion. A quarter of a billion dollars in new industrial investments was attracted to his state in one year." He called the report of the Virginia Division of Industrial Development on "Manufacturing Plants in Virginia Established Since 1950" a "pitiful thing."

Muse said that the report claimed 62 new manufacturing plants were established in Virginia during 1958. Muse wondered where the line was drawn between a "manufacturing plant" and "a couple of fellows engaged in a do-it-yourself enterprise." He said that 11 of the aforementioned plants had five employees each; five had less than five employees. The "approximate" number of employees in all the 62 plants was 1,663. However, 20 plants which opened in Virginia from 1950-57 closed in 1958 and one of them alone, the American Viscose Co. at Roanoke, employed 1,750 persons--more than the total employees of the 62 new plants.

The St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times outlined Virginia's plight, after the state decided to close schools ordered to desegregate, in this way:

"In 1951-52-53, the first three years of the decade, before massive resistance and school closing had been thought of, Virginia had increased the average number employed in manufacturing by 31,400.

"In 1957-58-59, the last three years of the decade, during which massive resistance was legally formulated and tried, Virginia increased the average by a net of 5,100, or roughly one-sixth as well as it had done in the earlier three years.

"This list of 11 such plants ('put up by bluechip national concerns') employing up to 1,650 today, shows none obtained for 1958 and 1959, one for 1957, one for 1956 and all the remainder in the first half of the decade . . .

"In fact, the concern of the Virginia business community that it might face a mortal blow if massive resistance wasn't abandoned is perhaps the best evidence of all of the serious impact the school situation was having on the state's economy." (7-24-60)

Address by REV. DR. MARTIN LUTHER KING, JR.,
President, Southern Christian Leadership Conference, at Freedom Fund Report Dinner,
NAACP 53rd Annual Convention, Atlanta, Ga.,
Morehouse College Gymnasium, Thursday,
July 5, 1962 - 7:00 p.m.

Standing ovation

Presiding Officer, Mr. Wilkins, delegates to the 53rd Convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Ladies and Gentlemen.

I sincerely welcome the opportunity to be with you on this auspicious occasion. I bring warm greetings to you from the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. We reaffirm our appreciation to you for all of the significant work that you have done across the years. As a result of the work of the NAACP, America is a better nation, and we as Negroes are heirs of a legacy of courage and dignity. One day all of America will be proud of your achievements.

As a citizen of Atlanta I would like to say how much I regret that shortsightedness, moral laxity and downright prejudice on the part of some made it impossible for the hotels to be opened for this convention. I know that this has been an insult to your dignity and an affront to your person. You are to be commended for protesting this grave injustice. Your picket lines have eloquently laid the issue before the conscience of the community. This whole episode reveals that Atlanta is far from where it ought to be in human relations. It should challenge every Negro and white person of good will in this city to move courageously and forthrightly to make democracy a reality.

As we assemble here this evening, it may be well for us to assess the progress that has been made in the civil rights struggle, and determine from that the challenges and responsibilities which lie ahead.

On the one hand, we can affirm with almost inexpressible joy that we have made some significant strides in our long trek up Freedom's road. In the words of Prime Minister McMillan, the wind of change is blowing, and with almost hurricane force, it is sweeping away an old and unjust order. Probably the most overt expression of this change is the gradual breakdown of the system of segregation. We all know the legal history of this system. It had its beginning in 1896 when the Supreme Court rendered the Plessy vs. Ferguson decision establishing the doctrine of separate but equal as the law of the land. Of course, we know what happened as a result of the Plessy decision: there was always a strict enforcement of the separate, without the slightest intention to abide the equal, and so the Negro ended up being plunged into the abyss of exploitation where he experienced the bleakness of nagging injustice. But the minute the Plessy decision was rendered, there were those who saw its injustice. Justice Harlan, the lone dissenter in this decision, saw it as a failure to realize that the Constitution was color blind. About twelve years later the NAACP came into being, and then followed its brilliant, diligent, and courageous work on behalf of justice and Negro rights. It was mainly the work of this great organization which led to the decision of May 17, 1954. In this decision the Supreme Court examined the legal body of segregation and pronounced it constitutionally dead. It said in substance that the old Plessy doctrine must go, that separate facilities are inherently unequal, and that to segregate a child on the basis of his race is to deny that child equal protection of the law. This decision came as a refreshing oasis in a desert swelling with the heat of injustice. When this Brown decision was rendered, seventeen states and the District of Columbia practiced absolute segregation in the public schools. Today all but three of these states have made some move -- most of them token -- toward integrating their schools.

Segregation has broken down in other areas. When the Montgomery bus boycott started in 1955, most communities in the South had segregated bus systems. Today segregation is almost totally eliminated on city buses in the major urban areas of the South. Since the sit-in movement started in 1960, more than one hundred and fifty cities of the South have integrated their lunch counters. Since the Freedom Rides began in 1961, segregation in interstate travel has all but been eliminated. So in a real sense, the system of segregation is on its death bed, and the only thing uncertain now is how costly the South will make the funeral.

Now this would be a wonderful place for me to end my speech. It would mean that the problem is about solved now, and that we can sit comfortable by the wayside and wait on the coming of the inevitable. But if I stop at this point I will simply be stating a fact and not telling the truth. You see, a fact is merely the absence of contradiction; truth is the presence of coherence. Truth is the relatedness of facts. It is a fact that we have come a long, long way in race relations, but in order to give the whole truth, we must add the fact that we have a long, long way to go. So if I stop now, I will leave you the victims of a dangerous optimism. If I stop at this point, I will leave you the victims of an illusion wrapped in superficiality. So I must move on to say that we are far from the promised land in civil rights.

We need not look very far to see this. There are still legislative halls in the South ringing loud with such words as interposition and nullification. The Negro still confronts numerous problems in seeking to register and vote in many sections of the South. Economic injustice is still an ugly reality where the Negro is involved. We often react with great satisfaction when we discover that the annual income of the Negro is twenty-seven billion dollars -- which is more than all the exports of the United States and the national budget of Canada. But before rejoicing about this, let me give you the other side. Statistics revealed a few years ago that 42% of the Negro families of America made less than $2,000 a year, while just 17% of the white families made less than $2,000 a year; 21% of the Negro families made less than $1,000 a year, while just 6% of the white families made less than $1,000 a year; 88% of the Negro families earned less than $5,000 a year, while just 58% of the white families earned less than $5,000 a year. The Negro is still the last hired and the first fired. Even the federal government is a day to day partner in this tragic evil. There are still industries receiving billions of dollars in government contracts, and yet practicing notorious discrimination against Negroes. In the ranks of labor there are still a few unions that bar Negroes from membership, and deny them apprenticeship training. Yes, the Negro is still at the bottom of the economic totem pole, and there is a great deal to do before this problem is solved.

Above all, we must not overlook the fact that segregation is still with us. It still exists in the South in its overt and glaring forms. It still exists in the North in its hidden and subtle forms. It is true, as I just said, that the system of segregation is on its death bed, but history has proven that social systems have a great last minute breathing power, and the guardians of the status quo are always on hand with their oxygen tents to keep the old order alive. (applause) So we must be forever vigilant. Racial discrimination in housing is still a tragic reality, North and South. This housing discrimination has made for de facto segregation in the public schools in almost every major northern city.

I mentioned earlier that fourteen states and the District of Columbia had made some move to comply with the 1954 decision of the Supreme Court. But before shouting for joy, notice the fact that only 7.6% of the Negro students of the South have been placed in integrated schools. This is hardly 1% progress a year. Far from moving with all deliberate speed, this is hardly an all deliberate crawl. Yes, segregation is still alive.

But we know, as we assemble here for this convention, that segregation is a cancer in the body politic which must be removed before our democratic health can be realized. In fact, if democracy is to live, segregation must die. (appl)

America does not have long to solve this problem. I know that there are those -- some well intentioned -- who are telling us to slow up and cool off for a while. They urge us to adopt a policy of moderation. Well, if moderation means moving on toward the goal of justice with wise restraint and calm reasonableness, then moderation is a great virtue which all men of good will must seek to achieve during this tense period of transition. But if moderation means slowing up in our move for justice and capitulating to the undemocratic practices of the guardians of the evil system of segregation, then moderation is a tragic vice that all men of good will must condemn. We can't afford to slow up. We have our self-respect to maintain. But even more, we can't afford to slow up because of our love for America and the democratic way of life. The jet like pace of modern world events does not afford America the luxury of ox cart movement in civil rights. There are approximately 2,800,000,000 in the world. The vast majority of these people live in Asia and Africa. For years they were dominated politically, exploited economically, segregated and humiliated by some foreign power. But the wind of change began to blow, and what a jostling wind it is. Just fifteen years ago the British empire had under its political domination more than 650,000,000 people in Asia and Africa. Today that number has been reduced to less than fifty million. Twenty-five years ago there were only three independent countries in the whole of Africa. With the birth of three new nations in the last two weeks, including Algeria, there are now thirty-two independent nations in Africa. (cancel) As these former colonial subjects gain their independence, they are saying in no uncertain terms that racism and colonialism must go, and they are making it clear that they will not respect any nation that will subject a segment of its citizenry on the basis of race or color. So the hour is late; the hands of the clock of destiny are fastly moving toward midnight. We must act now, because our nation has a rendezvous with destiny.

Now I must hasten to say that America must not seek to solve this problem merely to meet the Communist challenge or appeal to Asia and African peoples. T. S. Elliot has said that the greatest treason is to do the right thing for the wrong reason. Racial discrimination must be uprooted from American society because it is morally wrong. Segregation must be ended because it stands against all of the noble precepts of our Judeo-Christian tradition. In the final analysis, segregation must go not merely because it is diplomatically expedient, but because it is morally compelling.

If we are to bring a final end to the system of segregation and discrimination we must continue to explode and refute several time-worn myths. As you know, the danger of a myth is found in its deceptive qualities. It is not an outright lie. It is the false dressed in the garments of the true. It possesses just enough truth to convince the unanalytical of its validity.

The first myth is the idea that time will solve all problems. It lingers around in many quarters. It is expressed in many familiar phrases: "It takes time you know," "This thing can't be done overnight," or "Just be patient and the problem will work itself out in a few generations." You can easily see the element of truth in the myth. It is true that the problem cannot be solved overnight. But does this mean that one sits around waiting for the problem to work itself out. The proponents of this myth fail to see that time is neutral. It can be used either constructively or destructively. Human progress never rolls in on the wheels of inevitability. It comes through the tireless efforts and the persistent work of dedicated individuals. Without this hard work time itself becomes the ally of the primitive forces of social stagnation. We must always be up and doing, and realize that the time is always right to do right.

The second myth affirms that only education can solve problems of racial conflict. The devotees of this cherished myth contend that legislation, court orders and executive decrees are ineffective because they cannot change the heart. They also go on to argue that you can't legislate morals. Well it may be true that morality cannot be legislated, but behavior can be regulated. The law may not make a man love me, but it may keep him from lynching me. In short, the law may not change the heart, but can restrain the heartless. It will take education and religion to change bad internal attitudes, but legislation and court orders can control the external effects of bad internal attitudes. So we are challenged to work diligently for meaningful legislation. There is need for civil rights legislation now. It is appalling and tragic that in this enlightened year of 1962, the United States has a do-nothing Congress in civil rights.

The third myth that must be exploded is the idea that the South had peaceful race relations until NAACP'ers, Sit-in'ers, Freedom Riders and the Supreme Court began their vigorous action. The proponents of this myth argue that we are going backwards instead of forward in race relations. They constantly talk about tension being created and hostilities being aroused. They have the strange illusion that there can be a tensionless social transition. But they must be reminded that there is a kind of creative tension which is necessary for growth. They must be reminded that we do not now and we never have had true peace in race relations in the South. We may have had a sort of negative peace in which the Negro too often accepted his state of subordination, but this is not true peace. True peace is not merely the absence of tension; it is the presence of justice. The tension which we see in the South today is the necessary tension that comes when the oppressed rise up and start to move forward toward a permanent, positive peace.

Another myth that must be refuted is the idea that the Negro vote can do very little to alter conditions in the nation in general and the South in particular. Strangely enough, the supporters of this myth are not the whites, but the Negroes. The white ruling class in the South has always recognized the power of the Negro vote. This is why they have fought so long and hard to deprive the Negro of this right. There are still all too many Negroes devoid of motivation, caught in the clutches of apathy, and expressing the attitude that "my vote does not count." We have the job of going out into the hedges and highways to arouse the motivation of our people and lift them from their apathetic slumbers. I am still convinced that one of the most significant steps that the Negro can take at this hour is that short walk to the voting booth. I commend you for making this issue the theme of your convention. I would like to urge everyone here to take this matter seriously. Let us go back into our communities and develop intensive voter registration campaigns. This job cannot be done through eloquent speeches and emotion-packed mass meetings, although both may be useful means of arousing interest and enthusiasm. But after the interest is aroused it must be followed through with block-to-block, door-to-door organization. We must go to the grassroots level and mobilize every segment of the community for this massive drive. Fortunately, some exciting things are already happening in this area. It is significant indeed that the major civil rights organizations -- NAACP, SCLC, CORE, SNCC and Urban League -- have come together to develop the most thorough and effectively coordinated campaigns ever seen in voter registration. Already we are getting results. In Georgia alone we were able to register more than 30,000 Negroes in less than ninety days. Take a community like Macon, Georgia. The leaders of that community came together a few months ago and organized a massive registration campaign. Little did we know in SCLC when we invested staff and money in that campaign that in sixty days, 6,000 new persons would be registered, thereby doubling the number of Negro registration in that community. Just a few days ago SCLC and NAACP began a joint drive in Chattanooga, Tennessee. Mr. Patton of the NAACP and Mr. John Calhoun and the Rev. Fred Bennette of SCLC, began working with the community. In slightly less than thirty days some 2,800 persons have been registered. This, I believe, is the answer. If we can do this all over the South things will change. With the ballot we will be able to liberalize the total political climate of the South. With the ballot we will be able to elect Negro congressmen right here in the South. If our drive is successful it is not too optimistic to predict that we will be able to elect at least five Negroes to Congress in the next few years. With the ballot we will be able to transform the salient misdeeds of bloodthirsty mobs into the blessed good deed of orderly citizens. With the ballot we will be able to end police brutality and bring a halt to the dastardly acts of hooded perpetrators of violence. With the ballot we will house our courts with judges who will do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with God, and we will be able to send to the sacred halls of Congress men who will not sign a southern manifesto because of their commitment to the manifesto of justice and love. APPL

A fifty myth expresses the idea that the civil rights movement is a confused admixture of organizations seething with disunity. Disunity in the civil rights movement is becoming a favorite topic for a certain number of newspapers and magazines. Recently TIME magazine offered opinions of observers whom it styled "spokesmen" but whose identities are not revealed, evidently to encourage them to make sensational charges about other civil rights leaders. Frankly, I believe we are being victimized. We are enticed into self-serving statements and borderline slander about others to furnish gossip and colorful copy. Certainly, we all know that none of us is immune to error. We frequently have different views on some questions. Thankfully, we are creative and intellectually bold enough to reach in new directions. We can and should criticize each other in fair and free exchange. But, we must be watchful of a growing tendency to encourage and stimulate rancor within us by forces outside. The civil rights movement necessarily has weaknesses and the people who lead it have faults. But in the past decade, particularly, this movement has meant more to America than even its civil rights objectives. It is singularly a mass movement vibrant with idealism, with good will, with honest zeal which has inspired tens of millions. Its wholesome qualities have refreshed the spirit of mature adults, young people and children. Amidst seas of corruption, reported in detail in the press, this movement has been an island of purity of purpose. This generation has had little to hold onto against storms of cynicism other than the spiritual grandeur of our struggle.

We should not devour each other to the delight of onlookers who would have us corrupt and sully the noble quality of our crusade. We should not do it because it is a distortion of the truth. Our differences are relatively minor -- our criticisms of each other are not deep or intense. Yet when they are sensationally presented they have the illusion of importance and if repeated often enough a new image of our movement will emerge; that of leaders and followers snarling at each other over trivialities and proving by this conduct how unworthy they are of freedom's responsibilities. When I say trivialities, etc., let me be very clear. It is not the disclosure that there are criticisms which disturb me. In any movement, absence of criticism means limited depth, or bureaucratic dictation. But, when our differences of opinion are exploited to disfigure our appearance, we must send petty gossipmongers on their way empty handed but educated in the strength of our dignity.

Now I would like to directly deal with the alleged issue of disunity. The dictionary defines disunity as alienation, as the severing of parts. By this definition we do not have disunity at all -- we have instead differences of opinion, of emphasis but not disunity. Indeed, I think few movements of broad scope have had some of the features of unity which characterize ours. In looking over my schedule I find that I, President of the SCLC, have addressed NAACP chapters in more than 20 states and appeared at its National Convention three years out of the past five. The Chairmen of several SCLC affiliates are Presidents of the NAACP chapters and in Atlanta officers of NAACP and SCLC are almost interchangeable. NAACP has given significant legal assistance to CORE and SNCC. SCLC has contributed cash and personnel to SNCC. Beyond this intimacy organizationally, I believe a flexible unity and diversity of views characterizes our work.

And so, let us stay together, remembering that we are all moving down the same road. It may be a three-lane road with some emphasizing the way of litigation and mobilizing forces for meaningful legislation, and others emphasizing the way of non-violent direct action, and still others moving through research and education and building up forces to prepare the Negro for the challenges of a highly urbanized society. But we are all moving down the same road toward the same beautiful city of freedom and first-class citizenship. The demands of today are too great and the issues are too serious for any of us to be involved in ego-battles and trivial organizational conflicts.

Another myth that is alive today is the idea that non-violent direct action is a weak and ineffective method that lulls people to sleep. How this idea ever emerged is strange indeed. Can one honestly refer to the 50,000 Negroes of Montgomery, Alabama, the thousands of sit-inners, and the hundreds of freedom riders as weak and asleep? Of course not. This method is for the strong and well-disciplined.

It does not overlook the need for court action. Only the misinformed and shortsighted would seek to minimize the importance of litigation. Many of the current breakthroughs have come because of groundwork laid by the diligent work through the courts. So non-violent direct action does not minimize work through the courts. But it recognizes that legislation and court orders can only declare rights; they can never thoroughly deliver them. Only when the people themselves begin to act are rights on paper given life blood. A catalyst is needed to breathe life experience into a judicial decision by the persistent exercise of the rights until they become usual and ordinary in human conduct.

The method of non-violent direct action also has a way of disarming the opponent, it exposes his moral defenses, it weakens his morale and at the same time works on his conscience.

This method also makes it possible for the individual to struggle to secure moral ends through moral means. It breaks with any philosophy or system which argues that the end justifies the means. It recognizes that the end is pre-existent in the means. The means represent the ideal in the making and the end in process. So in the long run destructive means cannot bring about constructive ends; immoral methods cannot achieve moral goals.

Non-violent resistance also provides a creative force through which men can channelize their discontent. It does not require that they abandon their discontent. This discontent is sound and healthy. Nonviolence saves this discontent from degenerating into morbid bitterness and hatred. Hate is always tragic. It is as harmful to the hater as it is to the hated. It distorts the personality and scars the soul. Psychiatrists are telling us now that many of the inner conflicts and personality distortions are rooted in hate. So they are now saying, "love or perish." This is the beauty of non-violence. It says you can struggle without hating; you can fight war without violence.

At the center of non-violent resistance stands the idea that non-cooperation with evil is as much a moral obligation as is cooperation with good. This is the whole idea of civil disobedience. This is probably the most misunderstood aspect of the non-violent movement. It is easy to see why this is misunderstood. On the one hand we urge people to obey the law, such as the Supreme Court's decision of 1954; on the other hand we urge people to disobey the law, such as the certain laws that exist on the statute books of the South. How explain this apparent inconsistency? How explain this apparent disrespect for law?

One must understand that there are two types of laws. There are just laws and unjust laws. I would be the first to say obey just laws. But no moral man can patiently obey unjust laws. Now the question comes into being, what is the difference between a just and an unjust law?

From a purely moral point of view, an unjust law is one that is out of harmony with the moral law of the universe. More concretely, an unjust law is one in which the minority is compelled to observe a code that is not binding on the majority. An unjust law is one in which people are required to obey a code that they had no part in making -- they were denied the right to vote. So the legislative bodies that made these laws were not democratically elected.

In disobeying an unjust law, the non-violent resisters do it peacefully, openly and non-violently. Most important, they willingly accept the penalty, whatever it is, for in this way the public comes to re-examine the law in question and will thus decide whether it uplifts or degrades man.

This distinguishes our position on civil disobedience from "the uncivil disobedience" of the segregationist. In the face of laws they consider unjust, the racist seeks to defy, evade or circumvent the law, and they are unwilling to accept the penalty. The end result of their defiance is anarchy and disrespect for the law. The non-violent resister believes that he who openly disobeys a law that conscience tells him is unjust, and then willingly accepts the penalty, gives evidence thereby that he so respects the law that he belongs in jail until it is changed. applause

This method is not without successful precedent. It was used in a magnificent manner by Gandhi to free his people from the long night of colonialism. It has been used in a marvelous manner by hundreds of thousands of students. In this movement they have taken our whole nation back to those great wells of democracy which were dug deep in the formulation of the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence. One day historians will record this movement as one of the most significant epics of our heritage.

We are challenged today more than ever before. May we not let up in our determination. We must make it palpably clear that three simple words describe the meaning of our struggle. They are the words all, here, and now. We do not want some of our rights. We shall not be content with a few token handouts here and there. We must be ever mindful of a dangerous trend that is developing in the South. It is a trend toward planned and institutionalized tokenism. Token integration as a good faith start may have some merit. But it is too often a bad faith evasive scheme. It is the old resistance dressed in more sophisticated garments. But we will not settle for token integration. We want all of our rights. applause We do not plan to run to some distant land to get our rights. We will join neither a back to Africa movement nor a White Citizens Council Freedom Ride North movement. applause We want our fredom here in America, here in the black belt of Mississippi, here behind the cotton curtain of Alabama, here on the red clay of Georgia. applause We want all of our rights, and we want them here. And we are not willing to wait a hundred years for our rights. We have lived with gradualism, and we know that it is nothing but do-nothingism and escapism which ends up in standstillism. No, we are not willing to wait any longer. We want freedom now. We want all of our rights, we want them here and we want them now.

Honesty impells me to admit that as we continue our struggle in the days ahead, the journey will not always be easy. Before we reach the promised land we will confront gigantic mountains of resistance and prodigious hilltops of opposition. Some will have to get scarred up a bit. Some more will have to go to jail. But we must continue with the faith that unearned suffering is redemptive, and that truth crushed to earth will rise again. With this faith we will overcome all the obstacles ahead, and we will be able to transform the jangling discords of our nation into a beautiful symphony of brotherhood. This is our profound challenge and our exciting opportunity.

My dear Fellow Clergymen,

While confined here in the Birmingham City Jail, I came across your recent statement calling our present activities "unwise and untimely." Seldom, if ever, do I pause to answer criticism of my work and ideas. If I sought to answer all of the criticisms that cross my desk, my secretaries would be engaged in little else in the course of the day, and I would have no time for constructive work. But since I feel that you are men of genuine goodwill and your criticisms are sincerely set forth, I would like to answer your statement in what I hope will be patient and reasonable terms.

I think I should give the reason for my being in Birmingham, since you have been influenced by the argument of "outsiders coming in." I have the honor of serving as president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, an organization operating in every Southern state with headquarters in Atlanta, Georgia. We have some eighty-five affiliate organizations all across the south—one being the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights. Whenever necessary and possible we share staff, educational and financial resources with our affiliates. Several months ago our local affiliate here in Birmingham invited us to be on call to engage in a nonviolent direct action program if such were deemed necessary. We readily consented and when the hour came we lived up to our promises. So I am here, along with several members of my staff, because we were invited here. I am here because I have basic organizational ties here.

Beyond this, I am in Birmingham because injustice is here. Just as the eighth century prophets left their little villages and carried their "thus saith the Lord" far beyond the boundaries of their home towns; and just as the Apostle Paul left his little village of Tarsus and carried the gospel of Jesus Christ to practically every hamlet and city of the Greaco-Roman world, I too am compelled to carry the gospel of freedom beyond my particular home town. Like Paul, I must constantly respond to the Macedonian call for aid.

Moreover, I am congnizant of the interrelatedness of all communities and states. I cannot sit idly by in Atlanta and not be concerned about what happens in Birmingham. Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere. We are caught in an ineseapable network of mutuality, tied in a single garment of destiny. Whatever affects one directly affects all indirectly. Never again can we afford to live with the narrow, provincial "outside agitator" idea. Anyone who lives inside the United States can never be considered an outsider anywhere in this country.

You deplore the demonstrations that are presently taking place in Birmingham. But I am sorry that your statement did not express a similar concern for the conditions that brought the demonstrations into being. I am sure that each of you would want to go beyond the superficial social analyst who looks merely at effects, and does not grapple with underlying causes. I would not hesitate to say that it is unfortunate that so-called demonstrations are taking place in Birmingham at this time, but I would say in more emphatic terms that it is even more unfortunate that the white power structure of this city left the Negro community with no other alternative.

In any nonviolent campaign there are four basic steps: (1) Collection of the facts to determine whether injustices are alive. (2) Negotiation. (3) Self-purification and (4) Direct Action. We have gone through all of these steps in Birmingham. There can be no gainsaying of the fact that racial injustice engulfs this community. Birmingham is probably the most thoroughly segregated city in the United States. Its ugly record of police brutality is known in every section of this country. Its unjust treatment of Negroes in the courts is a notorious reality. There have been more unsolved bombings of Negro homes and churches in Birmingham than any city in this nation. These are the hard, brutal and unbelievable facts. On the basis of these conditions Negro leaders sought to negotiate with the city fathers. But the political leaders consistently refused to engage in good faith negotiation.

Then came the opportunity last September to talk with some of the leaders of the economic community. In these negotiating sessions certain promises were made by the merchants - such as the promise to remove the humiliating racial signs from the stores. On the basis of these promises Rev. Shuttlesworth and the leaders of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights agreed to call a moratorium on any type of demonstrations. As the weeks and months unfolded we realized that we were the victims of a broken promise. The signs remained. Like so many experiences of the past we were confronted with blasted hopes, and the dark shadow of a deep disappointment settled upon us. So we had no alternative except that of preparing for direct action, whereby we would present our very bodies as a means of laying our case before the conscience of the local and national community. We were not unmindful of the difficulties involved. So we decided to go through a process of self-purification. We started having workshops on nonviolence and repeatedly asked ourselves the questions, "Are you able to accept blows without retaliating?" "Are you able to endure the ordeals of jail?" We decided to set our direct action program around the Easter season, realizing that with the exception of Christmas, this was the largest shopping period of the year. Knowing that a strong withdrawal program would be the by-product of direct action, we felt that this was the best time to bring pressure on the merchants for the needed changes. Then it occurred to us that the March election was ahead and so we speedily decided to postpone action until after election day. When we discovered that Mr. Connor was in the run-off, we decided again to postpone action so that the demonstrations could not be used to cloud the issues. At this time we agreed to begin our nonviolent witness the day after the run-off.

This reveals that we did not move irresponsibly into direct action. We too wanted to see Mr. Connor defeated; so we went through postponement after postponement to aid in this community need. After this we felt that direct action could be delayed no longer.

You may well ask, "Why direct action? Why sit-ins, marches, etc? Isn't negotiation a better path?" You are exactly right in your call for negotiation. Indeed, this is the purpose of direct action. Nonviolent direct action seeks to create such a crisis and establish such creative tension that a community that has constantly refused to negotiate is forced to confront the issue. It seeks so to dramatize the issue that it can no longer be ignored. I just referred to the creation of tension as a part of the work of the nonviolent resister. This may sound rather shocking. But I must confess that I am not afraid of the word tension. I have earnestly worked and preached against violent tension, but there is a type of constructive nonviolent tension that is necessary for growth. Just as Socrates felt that it was necessary to create a tension in the mind so that individuals could rise from the bondage of myths and half-truths to the unfettered realm of creative analysis and objective appraisal, we must see the need of having nonviolent gadflies to create the kind of tension in society that will help men to rise from the dark depths of prejudice and racism to the majestic heights of understanding and brotherhood. So the purpose of the direct action is to create a situation so crisis-packed that it will inevitably open the door to negotiation. We, therefore, concur with you in your call for negotiation. Too long has our beloved Southland been bogged in the tragic attempt to live in monologue rather than dialogue.

One of the basic points in your statement is that our acts are untimely. Some have asked, "Why didn't you give the new administration time to act?" The only answer that I can give to this inquiry is that the new administration must be prodded about as much as the outgoing one before it acts. We will be sadly mistaken if we feel that the election of Mr. Boutwell will bring the millenium to Birmingham. While Mr. Boutwell is much more articulate and gentle than Mr. Connor, they are both segregationists, dedicated to the task of maintaining the status quo. The hope I see in Mr. Boutwell is that he will be reasonable enough to see the futility of massive resistance to desegregation. But he will not see this without pressure from the devotees of civil rights. My friends, I must say to you that we have not made a single gain in civil rights without determined legal and nonviolent pressure. History is the long and tragic story of the fact that privileged groups seldom give up their privileges voluntarily. Individuals may see the moral light and voluntarily give up their unjust posture; but as Reinhold Niebuhr has reminded us, groups are more immoral than individuals.

We know through painful experience that freedom is never voluntarily given by the oppressor; it must be demanded by the oppressed. Frankly, I have never yet engaged in a direct action movement that was "well timed," according to the timetable of those who have not suffered unduly from the disease of segregation. For years now I have heard the words "Wait!" It rings in the ear of every Negro with a piercing familiarity. This "Wait" has almost always meant "Never." It has been a tranquilizing thalidomide, relieving the emotional stress for a moment, only to give birth to an ill-formed infant of frustration. We must come to see with the distinguished jurist of yesterday that "justice too long delayed is justice denied." We have waited for more than three hundred and forty years for our constitutional and God-given rights. The nations of Asia and Africa are moving with jet-like speed toward the goal of political independence, and we still creep at horse and buggy pace toward the gaining of a cup of coffee at a lunch counter. I guess it is easy for those who have never felt the stinging facts of segregation to say,"Wait." But when you have seen vicious mobs lynch your mothers and fathers at will and drown your sisters and brothers at whim; when you have seen hate filled policemen curse, kick, brutalize and even kill your black brothers and sisters with impunity; when you see the vast majority of your twenty million Negro brothers smothering in an air tight cage of poverty in the midst of an affluent society; when you suddenly find your tongue twisted and your speech stammering as you seek to explain to your six-year old daughter why she can't go to the public amusement park that has just been advertised on television, and see tears welling up in her little eyes when she is told that Funtown is closed to colored children, and see the depressing clouds of inferiority begin to form in her little mental sky, and see her begin to distort her little personality by unconsciously developing a bitterness toward white people; when you have to concoct an answer for a five-year old son asking in agonizing pathos: "Daddy, why do white people treat colored people so mean?"; when you take a cross country drive and find it necessary to sleep night after night in the uncomfortable corners of your automobile because no motel will accept you; when you are humiliated day in and day out by nagging signs reading "white" and "colored;" when your first name becomes "nigger" and your middle name becomes "boy" (however old you are) and your last name becomes "John," and when your wife and mother are never given the respected title "Mrs.;" when you are harried by day and haunted by night by the fact that you are a Negro, living constantly at tip-toe stance never quite knowing what to expect next, and plagued with inner fears and outer resentments; when you are forever fighting a degenerating sense of "nobodiness;" then you will understand why we find it difficult to wait. There comes a time when the cup of endurance runs over, and men are no longer willing to be plunged into an abyss of injustice where they experience the bleekness of corroding despair. I hope, Sirs, you can understand our legitimate and unavoidable impatience.

You express a great deal of anxiety over our willingness to break laws. This is certainly a legitimate concern. Since we so diligently urge people to obey the Supreme Court's decision of 1954 outlawing segregation in the public schools, it is rather strange and paradoxical to find us consciously breaking laws. One may well ask, "how can you advocate breaking some laws and obeying others?" The answer is found in the fact that there are two types of laws: There are just and there are unjust laws. I would agree with Saint Augustine that "An unjust law is no law at all."

Now what is the difference between the two? How does one determine when a law is just or unjust? A just law is a man-made code that squares with the moral law or the law of God. An unjust law is a code that is out of harmony with the moral law. To put it in the terms of Saint Thomas Aquinas, an unjust law is a human law that is not rooted in eternal and natural law. Any law that uplifts human personality is just. Any law that degrades human personality is unjust. All segregation statues are unjust because segregation distorts the soul and damages the personality. It gives the segregator a false sense of superiority, and the segregated a false sense of inferiority. To use the words of Martin Buber, the great Jewish philosopher, segregation substitutes an "I-it" relationship for the "I-thou" relationship, and ends up relegating persons to the status of things. So segregation is not only politically, economically and sociologically unsound, but it is morally wrong and sinful. Paul Tillich has said that sin is separation. Isn't segregation an existential expression of man's tragic separation, an expression of his awful estrangement, his terrible sinfulness. So I can urge them to disobey segregation ordinances because they are morally wrong.

Let us turn to a more concrete example of just and unjust laws. An unjust law is a code that a majority inflicts on a minority that is not binding on itself. This is difference made legal. On the other hand a just law is a code that a majority compels a minority to follow that it is willing to follow itself. This is sameness made legal.

Let me give another explanation. An unjust law is a code inflicted upon a minority which that minority had no part in enacting or creating because they did not have the unhampered right to vote. Who can say that the legislature of Alabama which set up the segregation laws was democratically elected? Throughout the state of Alabama all types of conniving methods are used to prevent Negroes from becoming registered voters and there are some counties without a single Negro registered to vote despite the fact that the Negro constitutes a majority of the population. Can any law set up in such a state be considered democratically structured?

These are just a few examples of unjust and just laws. There are some instances when a law is just on its facr and unjust in its application. For instance, I was arrested Friday on charge of parading without a permit. Now there is nothing wrong with an ordinance which requires a permit for a parade, but when the ordinance is used to preserve segregation and to deny citizens the First Amendment privilege of peaceful assembly and peaceful protest, then it becomes unjust.

I hope you can see the distinction I am trying to point out. In no sense do I advocate evading or defying the law as the rabid segregationist would do.

This would lead to anarchy. One who breaks an unjust law must do it openly, lovingly, (not hatefully as the white mothers did in New Orleans when they were seen on television screaming "nigger, nigger, nigger") and with a willingness to accept the penalty. I submit that an individual who breaks a law that conscience tells him is unjust, and willingly accepts the penalty by staying in jail to arouse the conscience of the community over its injustice, is in reality expressing the very highest respect for law.

Of course, there is nothing new about this kind of civil disobedience. It was seen sublimely in the refusal of Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego to obey the laws of Nebuchadnezzar because a higher moral law was involved. It was practiced superbly by the early Christians who were willing to face hungry lions and the excruciating pain of chopping blocks, before submitting to certain unjust laws of the Roman empire. To a degree academic freedom is a reality today because Socrates practiced civil disobedience.

We can never forget that everything Hitler did in Germany was "legal" and everything the Hungarian freedom fighters did in Hungary was "illegal." It was illegal" to aid and comfort a Jew in Hitler's Germany. But I am sure that if I had lived in Germany during that time I would have aided and comforted my Jewish brothers even though it was illegal. If I lived in a communist country today where certain principles dear to the Christian faith are suppressed, I believe I would openly advocate disobeying these anti-religious laws.

I must make two honest confessions to you, my Christian and Jewish brothers. First, I must confess that over the last few years I have been gravely disappointed with the white moderate. I have almost reached the regrettable conclusion that the Negro's great stumbling block in the stride toward freedom is not the White Citizen's Council-er or the Klu Klux Klanner, but the white moderate who is more devoted to "order" than to justice; who peefers a negative peace which is the absence of tension to a postive peace which is the presence of justice; who constantly says "I agree with you in the goal you seek, but I can't agree with your methods of direct action;" who paternalistically feels that he can set the time-table for another man's freedom; who lives by the myth of time and who constantly advises the Negro to wait until a "more convenient season." Shallow understanding from people of goodwill is more frustrating than absolute misunderstanding from people of ill will. Lukewarm acceptance is much more bewildering than outright rejection.

I had hoped that the white moderate would understand that law and order exist for the purpose of establishing justice, and that when they fail to do this they become the dangerously structured dams that block the flow of social progress. I had hoped that the white moderate would understand that the present tension in the South is merely a necessary phase of the transition from an obnoxious negative peace, where the Negro passively accepted his unjust plight, to a substance-filled positive peace, where all men will respect the dignity and worth of human personality. Actually, we who engage in nonviolent direct action are not the creators of tension. We merely bring to the surface the hidden tension that is already alive. We bring it out in the open where it can be seen and dealt with. Like a boil that can never be cured as long as it is covered up but must be opened with all its pus-flowing ugliness to the natural medicines of air and light, injustice must likewise be exposed, with all of the tension its exposing creates, to the light of human conscience and the air of national opinion before it can be cured.

In your statement you asserted that our actions, even though peaceful, must be condemned because they precipitate violence. But can this assertion be logically made? Isn't this like condemning the robbed man because his possession of money precipitated the evil act of robbery? Isn't this like condemning Socrates because his unswerving commitment to truth and his philosophical delvings precipitated the misguided popular mind to make him drink the hemlock? Isn't this like condemning Jesus because His unique God-Consciousness and never-ceasing devotion to His will precipitated the evil act of crucifixion? We must come to see, as federal courts have consistently affirmed, that it is immoral to urge an individual to withdraw his efforts to gain his basic constitutional rights because the quest precipitates violence. Society must protect the robbed and punish the robber.

I had also hoped that the white moderate would reject the myth of time. I received a letter this morning from a white brother in Texas which said: "All Christians know that the colored people will receive equal rights eventually, but it is possible that you are in too great of a religious hurry. It has taken Christianity almost 2000 years to accomplish what it has. The teachings of Christ take time to come to earth." All that is said here grows out of a tragic misconception of time. It is the strangely irrational notion that there is something in the very flow of time that will inevitably cure all ills. Actually time is neutral. It can be used either distructively or constructively. I am coming to feel that the people of ill-will have used time much more effectively than the people of good will. We will have to repent in this generation not merely for the vitriolic words and actions of the bad people, but for the appalling silence of the good people. We must come to see that human progress never rolls in on wheels of inevitability. It comes through the tireless efforts and persistent work of men willing to be co-workers with God, and without this hard work time itself becomes an ally of the forces of social stagnation. We must use time creatively, and forever realize that the time is always ripe to do right. Now is the time to make real the promise of democracy, and transform our pending national elegy into a creative psalm of brotherhood. Now is the time to lift our national policy from the quicksand of racial injustice to the solid rock of human dignity.

You spoke of our activity in Birmingham as extreme. At first I was rather disappointed that fellow clergymen would see my nonviolent efforts as those of the extremist. I started thinking about the fact that I stand in the middle of two opposing forces in the Negro community. One is a force of complacency made up of Negroes who, as a result of long years of oppression, have been so completely drained of self-respect and a sense of "somebodiness" that they have adjusted to segregation, and, of a few Negroes in the middle class who, because of a degree of academic and economic security, and because at points they profit by segregation, have unconsciously become insensitive to the problems of the masses. The other force is one of bitterness, and hatred and comes perilously close to advocating violence. It is expressed in the various black nationalist groups that are springing up over the nation, the largest and best known being Elijah Muhammad's Muslim movement. This movement is nourished by the contemporary frustration over the continued existence of racial discrimination. It is made up of people who have lost faith in America, who have absolutely repudiated Christianity, and who have concluded that the white man is an incurable "devil." I have tried to stand between these two forces saying that we need not follow the "do-nothingism" of the complacent or the hatred and despair of the black nationalist. There is a more excellent way of love and nonviolent protest. I'm grateful to God that, through the Negro church, the dimension of nonviolence entered our struggle. If this philosophy had not emerged, I am convinced that by now many streets of the South would be flowing with floods of blood. And I am further convinced that if our white brothers dismiss as "rabble rousers" and "outside agitators" those of us who are working through the channels of nonviolent direct action and refuse to support our nonviolent efforts, millions of Negroes, out of frustration and despair, will seek solace and security in black nationalist ideologies, a development that will lead inevitably to a frightening racial nightmare.

Oppressed people cannot remain oppressed forever. The urge for freedom will eventually come. This is what has happened to the American Negro. Something within has reminded him of his birthright of freedom; something without has reminded him that he can gain it. Consciously and unconsciously, he has been swept in by what the Germans call the Zeitgeist, and with his black brothe of Africa, and his brown and yellow brothers of Asia, South America and the Caribbean, he is moving with a sense of cosmic urgency toward the promise land of racial justice. Recognizing this vital urge that has engulfed the Negro community, one should readily understand public demonstrations. The Negro has many pent up resentments and latent frustrations. He has to get them out. So let him march sometime; let him have his prayer pilgrimages to the city hall; understand why he must have sit-ins and freedom rides. If his repressed emotions do not come out in these nonviolent ways, they will come out in ominous expressions of violence. This is not a threat; it is a fact of history. So I have not said to my people "get rid of your discontent." But I have tried to say that this normal and healthy discontent can be channelized through the creative outlet of nonviolent direct action. Now this approach is being dismis as extremist. I must admit that I was initially disappointed in being so categorized .

But as I continue to think about the matter I gradually gained a bit of satisfaction from being considered an extremist. Was not Jesus an extremist in love- "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, pray for them that despitefully use you." Was not Amos an extremist for justice - "Let justice roll down like waters and righteousness like a mighty stream." Was not Paul an extremist for the gospel of Jesus Christ - "I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus." Was not Martin Luther an extremist - "here I stand; I can do none other so help me God." Was not John Bunyan an extremist - "I will stay in jail to the end of my days before I make a butchery of my conscience." Was not Abraham Lincoln an extremist - "This nation cannot survive half slave and half free." Was not Thomas Jefferson an extremist - We hold these truths to be self evident that all men are created equal." So the question is not whether we will be extremist but what kind of extremist will we be. Will we be extremists for hate or will we be extremists for love? Will we be extremists for the preservation of injustice - or will we be extremists for the cause of justice? In that dramatic scene on Calvary's hill, three men were crucified. We must not forget that all three were crucified for the same crime. The crime of extremism. Two were extremists for immorality, and thusly fell below their environment. The other, Jesus Christ, was an extremist for love, truth, and goodness, and thereby rose above his environment. So, after all, maybe the South, the nation and the world are in dire need of creative extremist

I had hoped that the white moderate would see this. Maybe I was too optimisti Maybe I expected too much. I quess I should have realized that few members of a race that has oppressed another race can understand or appreciate the deep groans and passionate yearnings of those that have been oppressed and still fewer have the vision to see that injustice must be rooted out by strong, persistent and determined action. I am thankful, however, that some of our white brothers have grasped the meaning of this social revolution and committed them selves to it. They are still all too small in quantity, but they are big in quality. Some like Ralph McGill, Lillian Smith, Harry Golden and James Dabbs have written about our struggle in eloquent, prophetic and understanding terms. Others have marched with us down nameless streets of the South. They have languished in filthy roach-infested jails, suffering the abuse and brutality of angry policemen who see them as "dirty nigger lovers." They, unlike so many of their moderate brothers and sisters, have recognized the urgency of the moment and sensed the need for powerful "action" antidotes to combat the disease of segregation.

Let me rush on to mention my other disappointment. I have been so greatly disappointed with the white church and its leadership. Of course, there are some notable exceptions. I am not unmindful of the fact that each of you has taken some significant stands on this issue. I commend you, Rev. Stallings, for your Christian stand on this past Sunday, in welcoming Negroes to your worship service on a non-segregated basis. I commend the Catholic leaders of this state for integrating Springhill College several years ago.

But despite these notable exceptions I must honestly reiterate that I have been disappointed with the church. I say it as a minister of the gospel, who loves the church; who was nurtured in its bosom; who has been sustained by its spiritual blessings and who will remain true to it as long as the cord of life shall lengthen.

I had the strange feeling when I was suddenly catapulted into the leadership of the bus protest in Montgomery several years ago that we would have the support of the white church. I felt that the white ministers, priests and rabbis of the South would be some of our strongest allies. Instead, some have been outright opponents, refusing to understand the freedom movement and misrepresenting its leaders; all too many others have been more cautious than courageous and have remained silent behind the anesthetizing security of stained-glass windows.

In spite of my shattered dreams of the past, I came to Birmingham with the hope that the white religious leadership of this community would see the justice of our cause, and with deep moral concern, serve as the channel through which our just grievances could get to the power structure. I had hoped that each of you would understand. But again I have been disappointed.

I have heard numerous religious leaders of the South call upon their worshippers to comply with a desegregation decision because it is the law, but I have longed to hear white ministers say, "follow this decree because integration is morally right and the Negro is your brother." In the midst of blatant injustices inflicted upon the Negro, I have watched white churches stand on the sideline and merely mouth pious irrelevances and sanctimonious trivialities. In the midst of a mighty struggle to rid our nation of racial and economic injustice, I have heard so many ministers say, "those are social issues with which the gospel has no real concern", and I have watched so many churches commit themselves to a completely other-worldly religion which made a strange distinction between body and soul, the sacred and the secular.

So here we are moving toward the exit of the twentieth century with a religious community largely adjusted to the status quo, standing as a tail-light behind other community agencies rather than a headlight leading men to higher levels of justice.

I have travelled the length and breadth of Alabama, Mississippi and all the other southern states. On sweltering summer days and crisp autumn mornings I have looked at her beautiful churches with their lofty spires pointing heavenward. I have beheld the impressive outlay of her massive religious education buildings. Over and over again I have found myself asking: "What kind of people worship here? Who is their God? Where were their voices when the lips of Governor Barnett dripped with words of interposition and nullification? Where were they when Governor Wallace gave the clarion call for defi ance and hatred? Where were their voices of support when tired, bruised and weary Negro men and women decided to rise from the dark dungeons of complacency to the bright hills of creative protest?"

Yes, these questions are still in my mind. In deep disappointment, I have wept over the laxity of the church. But be assured that my tears have been tears of love. There can be no deep disappointment where there is not deep love. Yes, I love the church; I love her sacred walls. How could I do otherwise? I am in the rather unique position of being the son, the grandson and the great-grandson of preachers. Yes, I see the church as the body of Christ. But, oh! How we have blemished and scarred that body through social neglect and fear of being nonconformists.

There was a time when the Church was very powerful. It was during that period when the early Christians rejoiced when they were deemed worthy to suffer for what they believed. In those days the Church was not merely a thermometer that recorded the ideas and principles of popular opinion; it was a thermostat that transformed the mores of society. Wherever the early Christians entered a town the power structure got disturbed and immediately sought to convict them for being "disturbers of the peace" and "outside agitators." But they went on with the conviction that they were "a colony of heaven", and had to obey God rather than man. They were small in number but big in commitment. They were too God-intoxicated to be "astronomically intimidated." They brought an end to such ancient evils as infanticide and gladiatorial contest.

Things are different now. The contemporary church is so often a weak, ineffectual voice with an uncertain sound. It is so often the arch supporter of the status quo. Far from being disturbed by the presence of the church, the power structure of the average community is consoled by the church's silent and often vocal sanction of things as they are.

But the judgement of God is upon the church as never before. If the church of today does not recapture the sacrificial spirit of the early church, it will lose its authentic ring, forfeit the loyalty of millions, and be dismissed as an irrelevant social club with no meaning for the twentieth century. I am meeting young people every day whose disappointment with the church has risen to outright disgust.

Maybe again, I have been too optimistic. Is organized religion too inextricably bound to status-quo to save our nation and the world? Maybe I must turn my faith to the inner spiritual church, the church within the church, as the true ecclesia and the hope of the world. But again I am thankful to God that some noble souls from the ranks of organized religion have broken loose from the paralyzing chains of conformity and joined us as active partners in the struggle for freedom. They have left their secure congregations and walked the streets of Albany, Georgia, with us. They have gone through the highways of the South on tortuous rides for freedom. Yes, they have gone to jail with us. Some have been kicked out of their churches, and lost support of their bishops and fellow ministers. But they have gone with the faith that right defeated is stronger than evil triumphant. These men have been the leaven in the lump of the race. Their witness has been the spiritual salt that has preserved the true meaning of the Gospel in these troubled times. They have carved a tunnel of hope through the dark mountain of disappointment.

I hope the church as a whole will meet the challenge of this decisive hour. But even if the church does not come to the aid of justice, I have no despair about the future. I have no fear about the outcome of our struggle in Birmingham, even if our motives are presently misunderstood. We will reach the goal of freedom in Birmingham and all over the nation, because the goal of America is freedom. Abused and scorned though we may be, our destiny is tied up with the destiny of America. Before the pilgrims landed at Plymouth we were here. Before the pen of Jefferson etched across the pages of history the majestic words of the Declaration of Independence, we were here. For more than two centuries our fore-parents labored here without wages; they made cotton king; and they built the homes of their masters in the midst of brutal injustice and shameful humiliation--and yet out of a bottomless vitality they continued to thrive and develop. If the inexpressible cruelties of slavery could not stop us, the opposition we now face will surely fail. We will win our freedom because the sacred herigage of our nation and the eternal will of God are embodied in our echoing demands.

I must close now. But before closing I am impelled to mention one other point in your statement that troubled me profoundly. You warmly commended the Birmingham police force for keeping "order" and "preventing violence." I don't believe you would have so warmly commended the police force if you had seen its angry violent dogs literally biting six unarmed, nonviolent Negroes. I don't believe you would so quickly commend the policemen if you would observe their ugly and inhuman treatment of Negroes here in the city jail; if you would watch them push and curse old Negro women and young Negro girls; if you would see them slap and kick old Negro men and young boys; if you will observe them, as they did on two occasions, refuse to give us food because we wanted to sing our grace together. I'm sorry that I can't join you in your praise for the police department.

It is true that they have been rather disciplined in their public handling of the demonstrators. In this sense they have been rather publicly "nonviolent." But for what purpose? To preserve the evil system of segregation. Over the last few years I have consistently preached that nonviolence demands that the means we use must be as pure as the ends we seek. So I have tried to make it clear that it is wrong to use immoral means to attain moral ends. But not I must affirm that it is just as wrong, or even more so to use moral means to preserve immoral ends. Maybe Mr. Connor and his policemen have been rather publicly nonviolent, as Chief Pritchett was in Albany, Georgia, but they have used the moral means of nonviolence to maintain the immoral end of flagrant racial injustice. T. S. Eliot has said that there is no greater treason than to do the right deed for the wrong reason.

I wish you had commended the Negro sit-inners and demonstrators of Birmingha for their sublime courage, their willingness to suffer and their amazing discipline in the midst of the most inhuman provocation. One day the South will recognize its real heroes. They will be the James Merediths, courageously and with a majestic sense of purpose, facing jeering and hostile mobs and the agonizing loneliness that characterizes the life of the pioneer. They will be old oppressed, battered Negro women, symbolized in a seventy-two year old woman of Montgomery, Alabama, who rose up with a sense of dignity and with her people decided not to ride the segregated buses, and respond to one who inquired about her tiredness with ungrammatical profundity; "my feet is tired, but my soul is rested." They will be the young high school and college students, young ministers of the gospel and a host of their elders courageously and nonviolently sitting-in at lunch counters and willingly going to jail for conscienc

Dear Mr. Toombs:

This letter comes in response to your August 13 correspondence to Rev. Wyatt T. Walker in regard to a procedure for payment for construction of the churches at Sasser and Leesburg, Georgia

As indicated on the attached correspondence to Miss Bullard, the Council has two grants for the burned churches. One grant of $317.35 is available upon request. The other grant $5,000 is subject to certain conditions. Point No. 2 in your letter to Mr. Walker is not consistent with the conditions imposed by the grantors of the $5,000. The Council is bound and will be guided by these conditions.

We thought that we should qualify for the benefit of all concerned the terms of the grants made to SRC in view of Point No. 2 of your letter of August 13.

If we may be of further service, please let us know.

Sincerely yours,

Vernon E. Jordan, Jr.

Dear Rev. Walker:

In working out a procedure for payment for construction of the churches at Sasser and Leesburg, Georgia, I believe the following procedure will be the most satisfactory:

1. It is arranged that Contractor B. B. Blaylock's monthly statements are first checked by your supervisory architect William Cox of Albany and thence forwarded to us for checking and final approval and then from us to you for payment.

2. You in turn will pay the bills from your own funds, or you will send the bills to the other three funds that are available. (Atlanta Constitution, Southern Regional Council, Georgia Council of Churches) and these groups will send their checks to the contractor.

The only request we have had as to how funds are to be spent is that the Atlanta Constitution stipulated that their fundbe used for the "basics" in the two churches at Sasser. In reference to this stipulation I would consider that any bills from now on would constitute "basics".

The contractor would like to have the name of the person in your office to whom you are delegating the expediting of payment of bills.

Attached are two color photographs of Mount Olive Church taken on July 31 by Rev. Ed Driscoll.

We are all looking forward to the time when the churches will be in use.

Cordially,

Henry J. Toombs

Churches To Rise From Ruins

Artist's sketch (above) of new churches being erected on site of ruins of bombed and burned out churches in Southwest Georgia is imposing structure. Below, Jackie Robinson (foreground) and Rev. Wyatt Tee Walker examine ruins of Mt. Olive Baptist Church in Terrell County, Georgia.

Begin Rebuilding Bombed Churches

Rebuilding of three Negro churches which were destroyed by bombings and fire nearly a year ago in Southwest Ga. areas entered construction stages last month as building materials were hauled to the site of the leveled churches by the Blaylock McKinnon Construction firm of Albany, Ga. and Jacksonville, Fla.

The three churches — the Shady Grove Baptist Church in Lee County, Ga., and the Mount Olive and Mount Mary Baptist Churches in Terrell County, Ga. were the targets of racists' bombs and arson after their facilities were used as voter registration headquarters in mid-summer, 1962.

In contrast to the hate-inspired destruction of the religious sanctuaries, their restoration is a tribute to the hand-in-hand working of Americans, both white and black, who were determined that the will of a free society would overcome race hatred and utter disregard for God's Houses Of Worship.

Spearheading the drive to re-build the churches was one-time Brooklyn Dodger base-

Birmingham Moves To End Segregation As Voter Drive Mounts

The last vestiges of segregation began crumbling in Birmingham, Ala., on July 30 as lunch counters in the downtown shopping area and outlying suburban communities began desegregating their facilities and serving Negroes without incident. The move was part of a four-point settlement plan agreed to on May 10 following a crucial five weeks of non-violent demonstrations, mass jailings and the use of fire hoses and vicious K-9 corps police dogs.

The integration of Birmingham's lunch counters in 14 stores within a two-day period followed closely earlier "good faith" efforts on the part of Birmingham authorities to live up to the agreement. Within a few days after the settlement was reached, the following were accomplished:

1.) Fitting rooms were desegregated (within three days).

2.) White-Negro signs were removed from drinking fountains and public rest rooms (within 30 days).

3.) Public golf courses, closed by the city following a court order last year that they be desegregated, were re-opened voluntarily with four of the city's seven links thrown open on an integrated basis.

File Biggest Vote Suit

Washington, D. C.—The Justice Dept. filed its largest voting registration suit to date on July 31, urging a Federal court to order the immediate registration of more than 2,000 Birmingham, Ala., Negroes.

Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy said the suit, filed in U. S. District Court in Birmingham, demanded that local registration officials be ordered to stop discriminating against Negro applicants. Birmingham is the largest city in which the department has sought through court action to obtain equal voting rights for Negroes.

The Birmingham suit was the 43rd such voting suit filed and the eighth in Alabama.

Discrepancies in Birmingham Negro-white registration totals show only 14,000 Negroes on the voter rolls out of 116,000 eligible, while about 120,000 whites are registered out of 256,300 eligible.

Record 125,000 Walk In Detroit

What very well could have been a dress rehearsal for the upcoming planned March on Washington on August 28 took place in downtown Detroit on June 23 when a teeming, but orderly, mass of some estimated 125,000 persons joined together in a mighty "Freedom Walk" which ended at Cobo Hall where a jam-packed audience gathered to hear Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. speak.

It was the biggest demonstration in the "Motor City" since 1936 when a rally was held for the late U. S. President Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

The record-shattering turnout, which broke all previous marks in terms of crowd size, was sponsored by the Detroit Council For Human Relations, which had as its chairman Rev. C. L. Franklin.

Banner Headlines

So impressive was the great swarm of humanity that the Detroit daily newspapers were moved to devote bold, banner headlines and pages of pictures and stories on the historical "walk," which was led by SCLC President Martin Luther King, Jr., and had in its front lines such dignitaries as UAW President Walter Reuther, Mayor Jerome P. Cavanaugh and former Governor John B. Swainson of Michigan.

At Convention Hall where the super-mammoth parade ended, Dr. King addressed a standing-room-only audience that spilled out into adjacent, smaller halls, while many in the multitude listened to his message over loudspeakers installed outside the rally hall.

The gigantic assembly was staged without incident, and police later commented that it was "the most orderly, peaceful crowd" that Detroit had ever experienced.

DETROIT REPORTS CASH—Making the first financial report following Detroit's huge fund-raising civil rights rally on June 23 in Convention Hall, Rev. William Carleton Ardrey (left), a representative of the sponsoring group, turns over checks amounting to $27,604.45 to officials of Southern Christian Leadership Conference, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., President (center) and Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, Treasurer (right). Amount reported was first of several to be made by the rally sponsors.

Mighty mass of humanity spills all over downtown Woodward Ave., in Detroit as thousands joined parade, singing hymns and spirituals.

Expect 100,000 To Participate In March On Washington Aug. 28

Machinery was set in motion early this month for what will probably be the largest gathering of human beings ever assembled in history in the nation's Capital in a demonstrative demand for an end to discrimination and segregation as it affects minority groups.

The expected gathering of more than 100,000, scheduled for August 28 in Washington, D. C., is being jointly sponsored by The Southern Christian Leadership Conference, Martin Luther King, Jr., president; the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Roy Wilkins, executive secretary; The National Urban League, Whitney M. Young, Jr., executive director; the Negro American Labor Council, A. Phillip Randolph, president; the Congress of Racial Equality, James Farmer, national director; and the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee, John Lewis, chairman.

Purpose Given

The purpose of the march, officially titled, "March On Washington for Jobs and Freedom," and called for on July 12 by the above mentioned national leaders is all-inclusive in its aims. It intends to show by a massive, peaceful and democratic demonstration in the nation's Capital that there is evidence of the need for the Federal Government to take effective and immediate action to deal with the national crisis of jobs and civil rights that Negroes as well as whites are presently facing.

In the area of civil rights, Negro leaders have agreed that these demands be met:

1.) Passage by Congress of effective and meaningful civil rights legislation in the present session, without filibuster.

2.) An end to police brutality directed against citizens using their constitutional right of peaceful demonstration.

Make Job Demands

Where jobs are concerned, the group of Negro leaders are asking for the following:

1.) A massive Federal Public Works Program to provide jobs for all the unemployed, and Federal legislation to promote an expanding economy.

2.) A Federal Fair Employment Practices Act to bar job discrimination by Federal, State and Municipal Governments, and by private employers, contractors, employment agencies and trade unions.

3.) Broadening of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act to include the uncovered areas of employment where Negroes and other minorities work at slave wages; and the establishment of a national minimum wage of not less than $2.00 per hour.

President Backs March

While there have been some members of Congress who have spoken against the March, President Kennedy has expressed the view that it should take place and that he feels certain that it will be an orderly and peaceful demonstration. This feeling was also shared by Police Chief Robert V. Murray of Washington, D. C. who has offered the full cooperation of the District force with Negro leaders and participants.

Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. of SCLC summed it up succinctly by stating that this "is not a march to intimidate congressmen considering President Kennedy's civil right's bill."

"This will be," he said, "a dignified, disciplined march followed by creative lobbying, and it will have a positive effect on civil rights."

Miss. Negroes Denied Vote Protest On Election Day

By Annell Ponder

Thousands of Negroes who have been denied the right to vote throughout the Mississippi Delta area staged a mass protest in spotted sections over the state on August 6, the state's Primary Election day. Their protests were made under a Mississippi law which provides that any person who feels he has been illegally denied the right to register to vote may present an affidavit indicating that belief to the manager of elections on election day and seek permission to vote.

Concentrated Protests

Concentrated mass protests over vote denial were scheduled to take place particularly in Jackson, Greenwood and Clarksdale, Mississippi. Grievances of the protestors included shootings, beatings, jailings and economic reprisals such as job loss, withholding of welfare checks and surplus commodities and eviction from homes. Other flagrant acts of discrimination pointed directly to local registrars, who are accused of disqualifying some 1300 Negroes in Leflore County who have attempted to register since March of this year.

SCLC Operates 36 Schools

The protest demonstrations were planned by Delta citizens and voter registration workers from SCLC, NAACP, CORE and SNCC through the Council of Federated Organizations, a state-wide voter registration operation.

Since the beginning of 1963 the Southern Christian Leadership Conference has operated 36 Citizenship Training Schools in the Delta area, which stretches roughly over the Northwestern part of the state between Jackson and Memphis, Tennessee.

act to put an end to its most flagrant practices of discrimination, authorities moved swiftly to comply with terms of the agreement which had been effected by Southern Christian Leadership Conference through its president, Martin Luther King, Jr., and the Alabama Christian Movement, headed by Rev. Fred L. Shuttlesworth.

Discriminatory practices in job-upgrading and hiring are being ended, Dr. King reported, and inter-racial steering committees are being formed to deal with race relations in Birmingham.

Registration Sets New Record

Meanwhile, voter registration efforts set new records in the Steel City as a student force of some 75 from among the 2,000 who were jailed last May carried Negroes by the thousands to registration offices. The result was that more than 3,650 new names were added to the voter rolls within a two-month period, setting an all-time high and bringing the number of registered Negroes to 14,000 out of an eligible 116,000.

By contrast, previous attempts to get Birmingham Negroes on the voter rolls only produced 2,000 additional registrants over the five-month period from Oct. 1, 1962, to March 1, 1963.

The present drive, under advisorship by SCLC and coordinated by Rev. Charles Billups of the Alabama Christian Movement, will continue full scale until Birmingham schools reopen this fall.

TEACHING TEACHERS—Demonstrating at the blackboard the elementary techniques that teachers should know in carrying back the Citizenship Education program to their communities, Mrs. Eliza Seymore of South Carolina shows a fellow teacher the proper art of writing during class at Dorchester Center in McIntosh, Georgia. School will conduct five-day workshop beginning Aug. 18 (see story below).

'Citizenship School' Schedules Five-Day Workshop Aug. 18 At Dorchester Center

Volunteer teachers from seven southern states will converge on McIntosh, Georgia, for a five-day comprehensive training course beginning August 18 at Dorchester Center, the SCLC-sponsored school for citizenship education which is helping to eliminate illiteracy throughout the South.

The school, supported by a grant from the Marshall Field Foundation, has been in existence for more than two years and has trained more than 600 teachers in the special task of returning to their communities to teach reading and writing to aid Negroes in passing literacy tests as a requirement for voting. SCLC staff members, who have helped guide this educational program are: Rev. Andrew Young, administrator; Mrs. Dorothy F. Cotton, educational consultant; and Mrs. Septima P. Clark, supervisor of the teacher training program.

10 Million Illiterates

The great accomplishment of the Dorchester school has been its successful program of preparing adults, many of whom have not been professionally trained as teachers, for the tremendous job of helping to bring education and enlightenment to some of the nearly 10 million functional illiterates in the U. S. today. Their task has been to return to their communities, many of them in rural areas, recruit adults who need this type of special educational attention, and organize classes. The classes then meet for three months, two nights each week for two-hour periods. The result: a new addition to America's citizenship population, now in possession of fundamental reading and writing skills, and an intelligent participant in local and national government.

Prospective teachers interested in participating in the program need have only an interest in helping others, the ability to read aloud well, and be able to write legibly on a blackboard. Further information can be obtained by writing The Citizenship School, 334 Auburn Ave., N.E., Atlanta, Georgia 30303.

Wire Protest Of Bias In America's Oldest City

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference sent a wire of protest to Vice-President Lyndon B. Johnson over the planned Quadri-Centennial celebration in St. Augustine, Fla., America's oldest city, which has stubbornly refused to desegregate its facilities for the celebration.

The wire, sent over the signature of SCLC President Martin Luther King, Jr., directed attention to the fact that Federal Funds are being used to prepare the city for its 400th birthday observance, but that it was making no effort to desegregate its facilities so that all persons might join in the commemoration without fear of embarrassment. The immediate effect of the telegram was that some $350,000 in government funds were temporarily withheld, pending an investigation by the Federal government.

Seven Youths Jailed

St. Augustine, founded in 1565, has a total population of 14,734 (1960 census), with 10,465 listed as white and 3,404 non-white.

Meanwhile, Dr. Robert Hayling, advisor to the Youth Council of the NAACP in St. Augustine, reported that seven youths between the ages of 14 and 16 were jailed on trespassing charges when they sought to desegregate a downtown drugstore in the resort city. When the youngsters came up for hearing before Judge J. Charles Mathis, Hayling said the judge had a prepared statement for the parents to sign to the effect that they would not allow the children to participate "in any forms of racial demonstrations until they were at least 21 years of age."

The parents refused to sign and the children were returned to custody — the boys to a reformatory and the girls to a detention home.

About The March

There have been many views expressed, both pro and con, concerning the March on Washington scheduled for August 28. Some critics have stated that it could serve Negroes no good end, that the demonstrations which have been conducted, and are still being conducted, in many sections of the U. S. have proved the Negro's point and that there is now a willingness to grant him the freedom he is demanding.

This may very well be true. But the March has an even more significant meaning.

To those who contend that there can be no guarantee against violence erupting, a recent refutation of this was made impressively manifest in the June 23 "Freedom Walk" in Detroit, Michigan, in which more than 125,000 persons joined in a peaceful, non-violent March in the city's downtown area. And this in a major Northern metropolis that has known race riots in its near-recent past.

The March on Washington is expected to be conducted in the same peaceful, orderly, non-violent fashion.

It is not designed to be anti-climactic to other demonstrations which have dramatized the Negro's circumstance in city after city. Nor will it be a demonstration to end all demonstrations. What it will be, and what its real meaning will convey, will be a dramatic showing of a strength of numbers so familiar, and so eagerly sought by the politicians who have been sent to Washington to represent all the people.

The March will contain only numbers.

But these are the numbers that perhaps will tug at the consciences of the law-makers in that august body in the nation's Capital.

Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, SCLC financial Secretary, in a speech discussing the high rate of Negro unemployment: "The system of bookkeeping on the Negro is painfully and shamefully inconsistent. He is on the minus side of the ledger when it comes to employment; on the plus side of the books when it comes to crime rates; deeper in the red when he seeks job upgrading; and hopelessly ignored when a trial balance is struck for a supervisory position over whites."

Letters To SCLC

Concerning The March

Dear Martin:

I pray that you and those associated with you will not let anyone persuade you to call off the March on Washington.

Now that you have the ball rolling you must demonstrate more than ever before.

I want to tell you of a similar situation. It was the time we were trying to get the President (Roosevelt) to set up the FEPC. He was hesitating for fear it would slow down war production. Hillman was against it. Will Alexander was against it and the War Production Board were against it. Walter White and A. Phillip Randolph sent out word to organize a March on Washington. They talked of 100,000.

The President sent me to New York to persuade White and Randolph to call off the March . . . White and Randolph said they would not call off the March unless the President issued an order making it mandatory that firms with Government orders hire Negroes on a basis of equality.

La Guardia (then New York Mayor) called the President. F.D.R. fumed and pleaded that "such a March would turn the people against the Negro," and that "it would be a dis-service to the nation in time of war." White and Randolph stood firm.

. . . The President (at a White House meeting) waved us all out, saying to the Secretary of War, Mr. Stimson, who favored the issuance of the order, "have Fiorella, Aubrey, Anna (Rosenberg) and Bob Jackson draw up the order." This we did, clearing it with White and Randolph.

But it was weeks before the President would sign it . . . Finally, one day Anna Rosenberg put the order down on his desk in front of him and literally screamed, "Mr. President, sign it or the Negroes will march on Washington within the next ten days."

The President then signed it. Remember, you get nothing for free.

AUBREY WILLIAMS

Detroit's "Freedom Walk"

Dear Rev. King:

A more accurate estimation of the number of people that marched and watched the demonstration in Detroit on Sunday, June 23, 1963, is over 200,000. I am convinced that I personally saw enough people to fill the University of Michigan football stadium twice full and have many left over. That stadium holds approximately 100,000 people.

This demonstration of your leadership and influence, made me realize that probably you and your organization are the Messiah who will lead the Negro in America to true 1st class citizenship. (Group integrity and self-sufficiency) . . . .

As long as we are segregated and discriminated against; as long as the vote is denied us and as long as we do not have adequate Negro law enforcement officers in our communities on the local, county and state level, we must continue our present struggle, but you have enough influence and power to wage war on two fronts:

1. Elimination of all segregation and discrimination
2. Work toward group, economic, self-sufficiency . . . .

LAWRENCE S. LACKEY, M.D.

Birmingham Jail

Dear Mr. King:

For years I've been concerned that we white people have sat so complacently, knowing full well full citizenship was long over-due for many of our Brothers. I have tried to express my convictions whenever and wherever possible. But this shows no results. It's nothing when 50 "good Christian people" agree "something should be done."

None of us live near minority groups so we have few opportunities to express good will in real actions. Yet this is the main topic of conversation wherever we go.

I prayed for guidance as to what action I could take. Then your letter written to the Ministers while in Birmingham Jail and published in Presbyterian Life came to me from a woman who feels as I do, lent to her, by a woman who also feels concern.

Like a light, it flashed into my mind. "I've written my Congressmen (only yesterday, and often) urging them to work for legislation regarding Nuclear Testing, Foreign Aid, and other matters — but never have I written about Civil Rights legislation. I am ashamed. I'm writing you so you will know I'm ashamed. Please tell other people that I'm not alone in my shame, but I'm starting today to write at least one letter a day, and today it will be 10 to Congressmen, President, Ministers, friends, relatives, and anyone the Lord inspires me to write to . . . .

Want To Help

Dear Dr. King:

In a Sunday School class yesterday we were discussing the struggle against racial discrimination. One of the big problems is housing. What can we as individuals do to help the cause of fair housing?

LILLIAN LARSON

Dear Sir:

I am writing on behalf of my American Government class. We are very interested in the progress the Negroes have made in recent years. We would like to express our sympathy for you and your movement.

We would like to know what we as high school seniors in California can do to help you in your fight for civil rights?

DIS 'N DATA

Did You Know . . . that some Mississippi churches have such an abhorrence for the word black that certain passages in the Bible have been changed to delete it completely. For example: the familiar verse in which Solomon says "I am black, but comely," has been altered to read, "I am suntanned, but comely." . . . Civil war history books in that state have also suffered similar re-arrangements. Instead of white pupils being taught out of books correctly titled The Civil War or The War Between The States etc., Mississippi's history books carry such titles as, The War of Northern Aggression.

• • •

Have you read . . . the two articles written by Rev. Wyatt Tee Walker, SCLC's executive assistant to Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., which hit the news stands almost simultaneously in July. One was in Negro Digest, entitled Freedom's Song, which traces the development of the Negro spiritual and its influence on today's nonviolent movement. The other appeared in the July issue of the New South under the title, Achievement In Albany.

• • •

Have You Heard . . . the new recording Birmingham Jailhouse, written by Redd Evans? The tune, inspired by the mass jailings in Birmingham last May, has received a letter of commendation from TV's well known personality Edward R. Murrow, and may very well catch on as a hit for veteran composer Redd, who has shared credits in the past on such hits as There I've Said It Again, This Is The Night and No Moon At All.

• • •

Have You Seen . . . copies of the July 29 issue of Newsweek which carried a 20-page article entitled, The Negro In America, which was the result of a national survey based on 1,250 interviews, a 252-question interview sheet and 3,000 man hours of labor. One of its conclusions was that SCLC president, Martin Luther King, Jr., was rated by Negro leaders and the rank and file of Negro masses as the No. 1 leader in America today.

PROFILE OF THE MONTH

Since going to jail has become a badge of dignity and honor for the Negro in his quest for full citizenship rights, the most often-asked question today is not "have you been to jail—yet?" but "how many times?"

Hosea Williams

SCLC board member Hosea Williams can qualify on both of the above counts, and possibly can add still a third from among his own experiences as a witness who has served one of the longest terms. By the end of July he had served a total of 23 days in the Savannah, Georgia jail on 12 separate "peace" warrants, sworn to by whites in Savannah. His bond reached a staggering total of $30,000 — or $2,500 on each count. It was later halved to $15,000, but Williams was still behind bars, awaiting disposition of his case.

Family Goes To Jail

Thirty-seven-year-old Hosea Williams is one among the numberless thousands who have been willing to make sacrifices for the cause of "Freedom Now," and his dedication to that cause has virtually embraced his entire family. Besides Williams himself, who has been jailed three times this year as result of demonstrations, his wife, the former Juanita Terry of Atlanta, has been in jail once and two of his five children, Elizabeth LaCenia, 11, and Hosea II, 8, also have been arrested for protesting discrimination. Elizabeth has been jailed four times. and Hosea II had to spend a night and two days in an Orphan's Home after he insisted on being served an ice cream cone in a restaurant.

Home to Hosea Williams has been Savannah, Georgia for the past 10 years, where he has been employed as a research chemist with the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture in the Stored Products Division. His birthplace, however, is Attapulgus, Georgia, a small town at the southern end of Georgia near the Florida state line. Both of his parents have been deceased since his early childhood, and Hosea was reared by an aunt, Mrs. Azzie Hines, a school-teacher librarian in Attapulgus.

Is Purple Heart Veteran

At age 15, teen-age wanderlust lured Hosea to Orlando, Florida where he began to support himself by working in a dry-cleaning plant. Three years later he went into the army, rose to the rank of staff sergeant, and was honorably discharged with a purple heart — the result of injuries he received in combat in Germany during World War II.

Like many GIs, Hosea took advantage of the armed forces' educational benefits for veterans. He returned home, finished high school, then went to Morris Brown College in Atlanta, Georgia, where, he was graduated in 1951. That same year he married Juanita Terry whom he met in Atlanta. He is now the father of five children, whose ages range from two to 15, including (besides the two previously mentioned) Andre Jerome, 6; Yolanda Felicia, 2; and Barbara Jean, 15, the latter by a previous marriage.

WCLC Establishes Los Angeles Chapter

The Western Christian Leadership Conference, an affiliate of SCLC, covering seven Western states and Alaska and Hawaii, established its first chapter in Los Angeles on July 12 and installed Dr. A. A. Peters, pastor of Victory Baptist Church, as president of the new branch.

Installation ceremonies for the new Los Angeles chapter were presided over by Dr. Edward Gardner, pastor of Mt. Olive Baptist Church in Birmingham, Ala. Besides Dr. Peters, other officers elected to serve the branch organization were: Rev. Richard Bass, pastor Lewis Metropolitan CME Church, vice-president; Rev. Joe Hardwick, Praisers of Zion Baptist Church, treasurer; and Rev. J. B. Reece, pastor St. John CME Church, recording secretary.

More To Follow

The Los Angeles chapter, the first of several to be established by the Western Christian Leadership Conference, has among its aims the abolishment of prejudice and discrimination in Los Angeles in the areas of housing, employment and education. Other chapters to be established later will include branches in Oregon, Washington, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico and Utah.

The parent organization, WCLC, was founded in 1961 and has as its president Marvin T. Robinson of Pasadena, Calif.

Miss Kenyatta Visits

Miss Margaret Kenyatta, daughter of Prime Minister Jomo Kenyatta of Kenya, East Africa, was a guest August 6 in the Atlanta home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Boyte while on a six-week tour of the U. S. as guest of the State Dept. Mr. Boyte is a recent addition to the SCLC staff as Special Assistant to Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

Miss Kenyatta, a leader of women's organizations in Nairobi, Kenya, served as chairman for 1962-63 of the African Women's Seminar in Nairobi.

Mrs. Boyte became acquainted with Prime Minister Kenyatta during her student days at the London School of Economics in 1938, at which time the Prime Minister was attending some graduate seminars.

BEGIN REBUILDING

ball star Jackie Robinson, in conjunction with the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, headed by Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Coordinating the fund-raising campaign was Dr. King's executive assistant, Rev. Wyatt Tee Walker.

This is how it began:

On Sept. 9, 1962, the day of the second church destruction incident, two churches, Mount Olive and Mount Mary, were burned to the ground shortly before daybreak. That same afternoon, Jackie Robinson arrived in Albany, Ga., for a city-wide registration rally. After conferring with Rev. Walker about the incident, he agreed to serve as National Chairman of the SCLC Church Re-building Fund, following a long distance phone call to Dr. King and Rev. Ralph Abernathy, who were on the West Coast.

Gov. Rockefeller Donates $10,000

Jackie's first donation was a gift of $5,000 from his employer, William Black, president of New York's restaurant chain, Chock Full 'O Nuts. This was followed by a $10,000 donation from New York Governor Nelson Rockefeller.

Then the fund began to grow with other organizations and business firms either making financial contributions or offering their services on a gratis basis. Among the latter, the Georgia chapter of the American Institute of Architects, led by Joseph Amisano of Toombs, Amisano and Wells, assumed all responsibility for preparing sketches, drawings and blueprints free of charge. The Trappists Monks at Conyers, Georgia, volunteered to provide the stained glass windows for the three sanctuaries.

Others, including the Atlanta Constitution and the Mennonite Central Committee conducted their own fund-raising campaigns, with the net result that some $75,000 was made available for the church re-building program.

Will Seat 200

On Feb. 3, this year, Dr. King broke ground for the three churches, and construction is expected to be completed in October.

The churches will cost about $30,000 each to re-construct and will have a seating capacity of 200.

Lena Horne Appears In Benefit Aug. 20

Glamorous singing star Lena Horne, whose show business career has embraced all phases of stardom, from radio to television, and motion pictures to supper clubs and concerts, will appear in Atlanta, Georgia, August 20 at the City Auditorium for the first time in the more than 20 years of her fabulous career. Her concert debut here will be a benefit performance for SCLC.

The beautiful song stylist, who launched her career in 1940 as a singer with Charlie Barnett's orchestra, will be the first artist to appear in what will be a series of "Stars For Freedom" to benefit the present civil rights movement. Appearing with her on the same bill will be the Billy Taylor Trio, whose pianist-leader is recognized as one of the most brilliant composers and arrangers among today's keyboard artists.

23-Piece Orchestra

Also sharing the spotlight with Miss Horne will be the talented and much-publicized trio of Lambert, Hendricks & Bavan, who first gained fame for their unique imitations of musical instruments and scat singing with Count Basie's orchestra several years ago. Accompanying Miss Horne will be a 23-piece orchestra under the direction of Mercer Ellington, son of the famous composer-bandleader Duke Ellington.

First appearance for Lena Horne

Review Of The Month

Strength To Love
by Martin Luther King, Jr.
(Harper & Rowe $3.50)

By Carole F. Hoover

If you have never quite understood Martin Luther King, Jr. the Man, the Pastor, the Leader, you can get an understanding through his latest book, Strength To Love. It is a real testimonial to the man, the leader and to his work toward achieving full integration for Negroes in all aspects of American Life.

The book expounds religious philosophy that has led America to an embarkation upon one of the greatest social revolutions in history.

Martin Luther King repeatedly stresses that Love is both the imperative and ultimate factor in the Negro struggle for human dignity and first-class citizenship. It is upon this premise that he has been successful in leading millions of Negroes in this country and has won respect of people all over the world.

He Minimizes Oppression

He does not make frequent reference to the use of high-powered water hoses on children, the many unsolved bombings in the south, the arrests of thousands of school children and adults, the use of police dogs on humans of all ages and many other vivid occurrences that have taken place recently in our struggle. Instead, he speaks of God's unquestionable love for all human beings. He speaks of man's love for his brother. He speaks particularly of the Negro's love for his oppressor which has enabled him to withstand his suffering and love those who inflict suffering upon him. The title of the book is outstanding in every paragraph of every chapter through a multiplicity of well chosen words. It is a beautiful, benevolent, humane and a Christian love that he speaks of which certainly gives all of us real Strength To Love.

Atlanta Aiming For 65,000 Negro Voters Next Year

One of the largest voter registration drives ever to be staged in Atlanta and Fulton County is currently being conducted under the leadership of SCLC Field Secretary Rev. Fred C. Bennette.

Bennette, working with the All-Citizens' Registration Committee, has already added some 6,000 new voters to the registrar's list. Jesse Hill, Jr., co-chairman of the All-Citizens' Registration Committee, disclosed that there are about 46,000 Negroes registered now and that, "we intend to have 65,000 voters registered by 1964 for the presidential election."

Working with Rev. Bennette are nine persons trained by SCLC in Voter Education at the Dorchester Citizenship School in McIntosh, Georgia. These persons were specially trained to return to their respective communities and train others in citizenship, education, registration and voting.

A recent survey indicates there are approximately 120,000 Negroes in Atlanta of voting age.

Missionaries Give $3,263

The Furloughed Missionary Conference of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Church, donated their entire Sunday Communion offering to the Southern Christian Leadership Conference recently, following an address there by Rev. Wyatt Tee Walker, executive assistant to Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. The sum amounted to $3,263.94.

The Missionary Conference, composed of modestly-salaried missionaries, raised the amount from among an audience of about 350 persons who heard Rev. Walker speak in the campus church at De Paul University in Green Castle. The missionaries, on furlough from their duties, return to the U. S. every five years from their assignments in the field.

A check for the amount was sent to the Atlanta office of SCLC with this notation from Ashton A. Almand, treasurer: ". . . I trust that this will not only assist your program in a material way, but that it will graphically express to you and your fellow workers the concern on the part of our people in the work of your organization."

50 Fined; Settlement Reached In Savannah

Climaxing nearly two months of protest demonstrations, jailings, Wall Street picket lines and attempted negotiations, Savannah, Georgia's rigid segregation barriers finally toppled as the city agreed to discard its discriminatory practices. The move came almost simultaneously on Aug. 7 with the sentencing and subsequent release from jail of some 50 Negroes accused of trespassing and other charges, among them Hosea Williams, president of the Chatham County Crusade For Voters, who had been held under $15,000 bond. Williams was ordered to pay a $100 fine or spend six months in jail. SCLC staff members, Andrew Young, James Bevel and John Gibson, who were with the Savannah crusade at all its junctures, provided counsel and guidance for local leadership in helping to bring about an end to the ugly patterns of segregation.

DANVILLE, VA.

Danville, Virginia has been the scene of the most brutal police action in the entire South. The Danville Christian Progressive Association began their direct action protest against public accommodations and job discrimination in this South Side Virginia textile center. The protest began on May 31st and continued peacefully without incident until the night of June 10th. Danvillians refer to that night infamously as "the night of the massacre." L. G. Campbell, DCPA Executive Secretary, describes it as the worst night he remembers in his life. Nearly 100 demonstrators had marched to the City Hall. While they were praying, Mayor Albert Stinson ordered Chief of police McCain to "Give 'em everything you've got." Water hoses with as much as 100 pounds of pressure split the group almost in two. The larger segment was driven into an areaway between the jail and the City Hall. City police, augmented by deputized garbage collectors set upon them with billy clubs nearly three feet in length. Men and Women, boys and girls were clubbed, kicked and savagely beaten without a single arrest (no charges of resisting arrests could be entered.) The president of SCLC's Danville affiliate, the Rev. L. W. Chase, was hauled from his home at 4 a.m. in nothing but his bathrobe to answer charges that he encouraged his children to demonstrate.
